PILGRIMS HONOR MEMORY OF LOYALISTS

Loyalist Pilgrimage to Shrine at Carrying Place Tribute of Debt To Pioneers Who Settled Canada

St. John's Church Scene of Impressive Religious Ceremony on Dominion Day—Memory of Founders of Upper Canada Revered

DIGNITARIES OF CHURCH AND STATE ATTEND

J. B. Allison, Aged 92, Only Living Man Who Saw a Loyalist, Speaks Fervently of the Early Days of the Loyalists—Premier Attends Remember the days of old—consider the years of many generations."

With the above thought in mind, in an unsettled, threatening and nearest downpours of rain, that have visited this district in months congregated, Friday, Dominion Day morning at 10 o'clock in the St. John's Church, Carrying Place, reverently to pay tribute to the memory of that valiant band of men and women who loyal to their King and Country, had given up their homes of comparative ease and comfort and wealth and migrated to their sovereign's possessions in the northern part of the North American continent, the wilderness of the 13 American colonies who would not take Oath of Allegiance against their king, and had, following the American Revolution either to forsake such allegiance or make their homes elsewhere. To honour those pioneers' memory, an audience had come together, most of whom were descendants of the men and women who had made up the United Empire Loyalists and then, exiles of Upper Canada, the United Empire Loyalists.

Fittingly, the sixty-fifth anniversary of Canada's natal day had been chosen as a time for such a gathering, for whatever else it might be, it was of one dominion, might and be ever united and contemplated, and it stood as a symbol of a free, sturdy, loyal, freedom loving patriotic, liberty loving nation in the making from the foundation on which had been laid by our liberties and privileges of today.

Digesting Address

His Honor the Premier of this Dominion's greatest province, his Lordship the Bishop of the Anglican Diocese of Ontario, and the president of the Ontario United Empire Church conference were present in cap and gown to do honor and memory of old, who had been the primeval forests in this countryside, had made their homes, reared and established their families and incorporated in the civilization of the little known vast wilderness of this province.

Brig. Gen. Cruickshanks of Ottawa, the historian of the Dominion, Reburn of Toronto, lady vice president of the Empire Loyalist Association of Canada, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Ashburn representing the Women's Institutes, Mrs. Henry the gracious wife of Ontario's premier, were gathered together with their daughter and son.

Tourists Expected to Spend Over Quarter Billion in 1932

Influx of U.S. Visitors Greater Already Than in 1931

LARGE PURCHASES

Ottawa, July 2 (CP)—The Canadian tourist traffic promises to surpass satisfactory and early reports indicate that it will increase as large or possibly a larger influx of United States visitors to Canada as it has than that last year, declares a statement issued yesterday by the Department of Trade and Commerce. Canadian hotels and restaurants reported a heavier call on their staffs on June 1 to cope with the increased number of guests.

The statement continues: "The Dominion Bureau of Statistics' Employment Index shows that employment in hotels and restaurants on March 1 stood at 111.4, in comparison with 107.4 in the preceding month. The records for previous years indicate little known vast wilderness of this province.

However, that employment in these services show their larger increases after June 1.

The bureau estimated the value of Canada's tourist traffic in 1931 at over $250,000,000. This year these figures may be higher as the average expenditure of the individual tourist in Canada is expected to be increased as a direct result of the exchange situation which will react beneficially to Canadian store keepers, hotels, restaurants, railways, etc.

WHISPER GIVES TRANSIENTS AWAY

As Constable Evans was making his rounds on Friday night he heard whispering from the alleyway on the west side of Front Street. As there had been quite a burglary spell and he was at once ready for an emergency and going up the alleyway he found two men lying in the hallway towards the rear, with a blanket. They stated that they had been looking after in the hostel up to recently and had no place to which they might go. FARM INDUSTRY IS ON THE BOOM

Toronto, July 2 (CP)—The farming industry in Ontario is booming this summer with the help of a lot of people from the cities. Sons and daughters, roomers, jobless in the cities by the slowing down of industry are back on the homestead, helping in the fields and the outlook, aided by favorable growing conditions, promises a plentiful harvest. Of the individual crops Mr. Martin found a heavy growth of hay in western Ontario but a light crop in the eastern counties, due to lack of rain in the early part.

Fall Wheat Good.

Fall wheat looks good all over the province, particularly in the counties of Lambton, Middlesex, Waterloo, Brant and Simcoe. Spring wheat and the other grains including oats, barley and peas are doing well and good crops are in prospect.

Acreage devoted to corn, says Mr. Martin, seems to be decreasing particularly because of the low price while barley acreage is on the increase evidently as a result of the better demand for malting purposes. Field peas is going to be a big crop in eastern Ontario this year. Growing conditions are good and the acreage devoted to this crop also seems larger than in recent years, Mr. Martin found.

In some counties field beans will be only about a fifty per-cent. crop this year due to the small acreage planted. A large portion of last year's bean crop is still on the farmers' hands. Quite a lot of damage is being done grain still in storage by the saw-tooth grain weevil, particularly in the south-western Ontario counties, it is reported. This pest usually survives a mild winter such as the last one.

Speaking generally Mr. Martin found the acreage under crop in the province as high as in former years and growing conditions most promising.

OSHAWA MAN IS ARRESTED

Break in at Cloyne is Followed Quickly by Arrest

Lloyd Bayle, of Oshawa, was arrested at his home late Friday afternoon by the Provincial Police following a break-in and robbery at Cloyne early Friday morning.

ADVERTISING for the MERCHANT of TO-DAY
Conducted by HAROLD B. EDGAR
A series of weekly articles on advertising and merchandising prepared for the mechanics of Belleville with the co-operation of The Ontario Intelligencer.

The Close and the Base

ARTICLE 17

The proper close or wind up to an advertisement should be given careful consideration and not be just something written to fill up the balance of the space you are scheduled to use.

As I have said before and would again emphasize, too many merchants consider the time they spend in preparation of an advertisement as a side issue, instead of realizing that the message is going before a whole community and is entitled to very careful preparation.

Your advertisement is a sales talk on paper and the experienced salesman always endeavors to close his interview in a friendly frame of mind. You should aim for the same friendly "wind up in your advertisement."

There are many ways in which you can make the closing words of your advertisement interesting and helpful. An invitation to come into your store and look around even if not ready to buy. Your special department—your exclusive representation. Your well known products—your attractive displays—your careful attention given to telephone orders or to children.

THE HEADING FOOTING OF THE ADVERTISEMENT — Speaking generally, it should include always the name, the address or location, the telephone number — and possibly your slogan describing your service.

THE NAME — The majority of stores operate under the name of the owner. Some under a trade name. If starting in business select a name that will be easy for your customers to say and remember. The name selected is the one that must remain the same as long as you are in the business. Pick a distinctive style of lettering for that name and follow this style on your window sign — your letterhead — your signs — your advertisements — your trucks — your bill heads — your statements — in fact everything printed or painted bears a style that is easy to read. Have it properly designed — get different size cuts and use them properly. It costs only a little, but means a lot. Your customers will help give you a good name. Ask them!

THE ADDRESS—Every advertisement should contain an address. I have heard many times "everybody knows where I am." THEY DON'T. A descriptive location is usually better than merely a street number.

Opposite The Market — Two Doors West of the Theatre — James Corner of John, etc., etc.

The telephone number should be included. If you are anxious to increase the telephone business give further emphasis to it —a phrase about your telephone service.

"Your Telephone Is Our Front Counter"

An easy telephone number to remember is an asset.

The slogan depends largely on the type of business and how useful it will be to you. Unless you can have a slogan which really has a message, don't use one. The most successful slogans are those in which the name of the product or firm are incorporated.

NEXT WEEK — MERCHANDISING

Mr. Edgar will be glad to answer questions in this column, if readers will address their communications in care of this paper. Confidential replies can be arranged through the editor.—(Copyright)

Local Paper of 100 Years Ago
Transition Stage in Life Of Belleville's First Newspaper

A hundred years ago Sunday, July 3rd saw the death or the transition of the first newspaper published in Belleville, "The Chronicle". The "Anglo Canadian" was established in February 1821, but was renamed the "Phoenix" in July of that year, and the new newspaper continued for the year, the "Phoenix" on immediate rebirth 100 years ago became the "Hastings Times" which in September 1834 was named the "Intelligencer."

Quoting from Cannill's History of the settlement of Upper Canada: "Belleville series a real message, don't use one. The most successful slogans are those in which the name of the product or firm are incorporated.

The first number of the "Phoenix" issued July 3, 1832 and which was published by Thomas Wells for the proprietors says: "As the present number completes the first year, we intend to give the paper a new name, which though less classical may be more appropriate." The name selected was the "Hastings Times."

The Intelligencer of Belleville was first founded by George Benjamin in September 1834."

So these are the facts, for over 100 years the citizens of this community have been served with a newspaper, growing and progressing in size and service from the humble sheet of weekly issue, to the copy of proportions and up-to-dateness that greets you this evening.

"HERE I AM" CIRCLE HOLDS TOYLAND TEA

The "Here I Am" Mission Circle of the Tabernacle Church held a "Toyland" tea in the church parlors on Wednesday afternoon of this week. A goodly number of the ladies of the congregation were present. Outside the afternoon was damp and rainy but the prettily decorated tables and a cosy fire with the daintily appointed tea caused cheer inside. The hostesses were Mrs. Fred and Everett Wood, who with Misses Mary Brown, Ruth Newson, Edith Bird, Helen Newson, Will Dougherty, Dorothea Newson served the guests. Mrs. Lane and Mrs. Wade looked after the collection and the contribution of toys. Vocal solos were given by Miss Dorothea Newson and Miss Audrey Burgess. Miss Beasie Barlow and Miss KAY Yard gave piano duets which were much enjoyed. This well managed tea reflects credit to those who are engaged in this part of the work of the church, and who are giving of their time and energy to help on the great cause of missions.

Facts Rather than Guesswork

We believe in the principle of rendering complete and accurate service at the lowest possible price, and to that end we watch and study our costs, basing our charges upon fact rather than guesswork.

This is a matter of importance to all we serve, for there are few of us to determine that we can ever, even in making funeral arrangements, afford to disregard entirely the matter of dollars and cents.

HEARD ON THE STREET

(By Jay. De.)

HOW CHEAP IS WATER?

I sell the cheapest commodity in the world", remarks the waterworks manager of any city, town or village in the country. "Further than that, I deliver the goods right in the consumer's home part of the house without one cent extra charge. I have a thirty-four hour service three hundred and twenty-five and one quarter days in the year. Can anyone expect better what they are selling, give such liberal terms and guarantee that they spend on it?" With the aid of a pencil and paper the waterworks manager amplifies the statements he has just made.

"We speak of a thing as dirt cheap. How cheap is 'dirt cheap'? Let me illustrate by an example. Not even the rough dirt needed to fill in a hole in the road or a low building lot. That dirt will cost you anywhere from one dollar and a half to two dollars a load. They can't haul it any cheaper than that. A man can shovel a load of dirt somewhere in the neighborhood of a ton. After it is dumped on the lot you'll spread it yourself, and if you want some of it taken to some other part of the lot it's going to take a wheelbarrow and a lot of perspiration to do it. After all, dirt cheap' hasn't so much significance after all. Beside it the cost of water which is supplied to your home seems too insignificant to be worth while.

Walk to your tap in any part of the house, day or night, Sundays or holidays or any other time and you will find the same steady stream of water you have grown to expect ever since you were old enough to turn on the tap high enough to drink. Turn your tap on and leave it on. If you have a meter in the house measuring it—until you have boiled ten cents worth. Most water works managers claim that for the ten cents your meter ticks off, you should get at least one thousand gallons of water. That's a lot of water. Convert it into pounds it would weigh ten thousand pounds or five tons of clear sparkling water which has been filtered and aerated re-filtered through sand, and gravel in the filtering beds of the local plant. If that water had been carried to your home in any manner other than through the pipes which interlace the city and serve each home then the expense entailed would be enormous. First cost of all because the system was of course enormous but through the years it has paid for itself many times over, ten, cent pieces measured against the cost of the water which has been used.

Water, it has been proved, is the cheapest thing in the world.

MOOSE KIDS STAGE RALLY

Defeat Crystalaca 6-5 as Game Called For Darkness

Staging a last innings rally, the Moose Juniors won a closely fought game from the Crystalacs by the score of 6 to 5 at the Alemite Field on Thursday evening.

The two teams battled on even terms all through the game and with but two out in the eighth frame, the game was called on account of darkness after the Moose kids had squeezed across two runs to assume the lead. The winners got-nit their rivals 10 to four, Gray, Thomas, Burley and Churchill being the only "east-end" hitters to connect off the deliveries of Flunder who buried one of his best games on the hidden end.

Flunder was in rare form being master of the situation throughout and deserved a shut-out but his fielders played the defensive game they are capable of.

Bennett and Cole were the big sweat-smiths for the Lodge boys getting three hits apiece; Kelleher, Temple, Grant and Semain being the only "east-end" hitters to connect off the delivers of Flunder who buried one of his best games on the hidden end.

The two teams battled on even terms all through the game and with but two outs in the eighth frame, the game was called on account of darkness after the Moose kids had garnered two more runs to assume the lead. Tod winners out-hit their rivals 10 to four, Gray, Thomas, Burley and Churchill being the only "cast-off" hitters to connect off the deliveries of Flunder who buried one of his best games for the Moose kids.

Flunder was in rare form being master of the situation throughout and deserving a shut-out had his fielding behind the defensive game they are capable of.

Bennett and Cole were the big swat-smiths for the Moose lads collecting three hits apiece. Kelsher, Trumble, Grant and Bennett being the other Moose lads to get hits off of Macleod who handled the Crystalacs. MacLean pitched fair baseball and the game developed into a pitcher's battle with Flunder getting the final decision.

ONE OF LACROSSE'S TRICKIEST FORWARDS

One of the big reasons for the great showing made by Toronto Toronthas in the Intercity hair pastal stretch drive to tie the Montreal Canadiens at the first half of the professional box lacrosse league, was the marketing of Art Pim. Art is one of the trickiest forwards in the league and is just plain poison when in close. Next to Scotty Martin and Chuck Davidson, Pim is about the most dangerous ball carrier in the league. He's heavy and fast-moving and his pivoting rushes have been a thorn in the side of the opposing defenses all season. He is a very clean player but does not back up when getting gets tough in 'em. He more than holds his own with anyone who tries to get rough.

POOR MATCHING SPOILED BOUTS

Eleven Were Carded with Midgets Providing All the Entertainment

Plenty of class but poor matching, caused the bouts held in the Armouries on Wednesday night to be somewhat of a "dud" as far as the fans were concerned but there were some bright moments in the evening's entertainment that was supplied by the midgets on the programme Storms and Robinson. Storms was a little too clever for the promoters last considerable and appeared that boxing is dead in this city the same as it is in other parts of the country. Peterboro, Cobourg, Port Hope, Kingston and Belleville were represented by artists that had been seen and heard before, the matching was terribly and probably ruined a good night's entertainment. F. Milburn of Cobourg took the honors of ganeses in his bout with Art Angell and the crowd applauding his effort.

Eleven bouts were carded.

Eleven bouts constituted the card with Harry Johnson of the local man in the ring and the judges, George Ost, Wesley Wills and Bert Wills with Harold "Yug" Woodley as time keeper. A O'Neil of this city was the first to step into the ring with Bellville, the fight going the full three rounds with plenty of action and receiving the most of the exchanges. Although he won the last round, Jack Swain of Kingston took G. Hlander of Bellville into the fight ed his opponent for the count after seventy seconds of the third round. Red Hayward of Peterboro and Bill Beare in the second round after giving him an actual beating in the first canto. Fred Shaw of Cobourg was no match for Scotty Kime of this city, although the bout was given as no decision, when Shaw fell out of the ring in the first round and injured his ankle. T. Evans of Bellville won the decision over F. Barrett of Port Hope. Barrett took plenty of punishment and was finally knocked from the ring by a left hook and was too badly hurt to continue.

Knock Rabbit Punch.

Rippard was the loser to Conners in the 105 pound class, while George Semark took his dusky opponent, A. Williams for a merry ride in their bout. Semark used a rabbit punch all-night and was bound to hit in the clinches. The midgets put up a clever bout and the greet were on their toes as the two kids showed plenty of science and were not afraid to sling it out in the centre of the ring.

H. ANGLIN IS SR. WINNER

Across Bay Swim is Held Under Adverse Conditions

Despite the adverse weather conditions which prevailed locally on Dominion Day, the annual Y.M.C.A. across the bay race was held before a small crowd of spectators.

Competing in the Senior R. J. Graham fired the starter's gun at 10.30 o'clock and the race which sent the seniors, some six in all, away to a diving start to swim across the bay and return.

Ray and retired. Harold Anglin, of Kingston, kicked and splashed his way to victory and won the Rotary trophy in the rather fast time of 25 minutes. This time is remarkably good considering the fact that it was raining quite hard, a stiff southeast wind was blowing and the waters of the bay were quite choppy.

Shroder, of Belleville, chased Anglin across the line to gain second position, while Joe Miles, also of Belleville, finished third.

Kelly In Junior

Garfield Kelly, of Kingston, romped home to win the junior class, when he swam from Ostrom's dock on the Bridge Steward side of the bay to the government dock at Belleville in 20 minutes and 20 seconds. "Gar" Kelly is but 14 years of age. He broke for existing record for juniors which had been previously held by Joe Miles.

Kelly clipped 1 minute and 10 seconds off Miles' mark. This class had seven starters but only three faced the starter's line. R. Summers of Belleville, finished second to fast-going Ted Harris came in third.

The juvenile race also from the Prince Edward side to Belleville, was won by Patrick Blaker in 34 minutes and 50 seconds. Kenneth Kellaway finished second with Jack Carter third. Both twelve year olds were registered with sight starting.

Passed Miles Again

The ladies' race was won by Miss Jan Hall, Miles who swam across the bay in 36 minutes flat. Fern Morrison finished second while Ena Blaker took third position.

The T's Men's Trophy goes to the lady winner in the Mayor-Treasurer Jennings trophy to the juvenile champion and the Rotary trophy to the junior winner. All the names of the various winners will be engraved on the shield which was presented by Major R. J. E. Graham.

Starter for seniors, R. J. Graham, president Rotary.

Starter for others, Steve Licence.

Clerk of course and timer, George Fauley.

The Rotary trophy was presented by Joe Short; Kiwanis Trophy by M. Ingan; T's Men's Trophy by Steve Licence; Youngest Member Trophy not awarded until aga can be checked with birth certificates. The Juvenile Trophy was presented by Mayor Tice.

Exhibition of life saving and the swimming stunts were called off because of adverse weather conditions and limited number of spectators.

Yesterday's Stars

Buddy Meyer, Senators, clouted homer with bases filled to aid in defeat of Athletics.

Roy Johnson, Red Sox, collected two doubles and a triple against the Yankees and scored four runs.

Frank Hogan and Bill Terry, Giants—Furmer's homer and latter's triple enabled Giants to beat Braves.

Lonnie Warneke, Cubs, steadied after a shaky start against Reds and won 10th game of year.

George Watkins, Cardinals — His double and single helped upset the Pirates.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

Jupiter Pluvius put a mean crimp in the sportsmen's aspirations of Eastern Ontario on Dominion Day. The golfers were able to get in their game late in the afternoon, while the swimmers did not seem to mind the rain as much as their companions in the boats.

Harold Anglin, of Kingston splashed home to victory in a rather choppy sea in the senior class..All the races were keenly contested throughout and the list of entries proved to those responsible for the swim that acquatics are receiving added interest to their own locality. The officials of the bay are to be praised hot coffee at the dock following Friday's swimming for the benefit of the contestants and their attendants. This act of thoughtfulness was highly appreciated by all present.

All baseball games in this part of the country were postponed due to the heavy rains. The Belleville Nationals were rained out for the third consecutive scheduled game in the O.B.L. and a matter of fact it has either rained or just previous to or during every game the Nationals have been scheduled home this season. Manager Darrow took the team to Peterboro on Thursday night and they all got wet but the ball game that victory was theirs on Saturday. The look on some of the players faces when they arose to find it teeming rain outside was certainly comical to behold. The Dominion Day morning greeting his old friends.

Friday would likely have been Herbie Morris' last game with the Peterboro Nationals as they were back to Toronto in the near future, due to business reasons. We sincerely hope that the ex-Hilltop star can see his way clear to stay in our midst until the end of the season, at least.

Weather permitting the National boys will be at Cobourg Ponies on Wednesday afternoon. The fast girls' softball fans we hear but they are to be at present played at the Armouries Lawn every night starting on Monday night with the Belleville Fruit girls meeting the Cobourg "All Stars."

Ted Harris is to be glad to hear that Norman "Slats" Kerr may be moved back to Belleville soon. Although nobody knows it, Ted has been handed down on the quiet but it is the real rumor about town that the veteran relief ace of the Belleville Nationals is to be moved back to his home town. Kerr has been the balmy days of baseball "Slats" Kerr was heralded all around the circuit as one of the classiest pitchers in the business. Many veteran baseball fans are called between him and Jake Solomon. Should Kerr come same out on the short end of an argument at that, Belleville has but ball celebrity the calibre of "Slats" Kerr who can do much to revive the dying spirit of baseball here.

Altogether too many "fence tickets" are being used at the local baseball park, the C.O. B.I. teams clash. We heard, unofficially, that an example was going to be made of a few of these fence-climbers in the near future. It was also pointed out to us the fact that these self-same "seekers of the gate" were the ones to howl the loudest when the players make errors or maybe the players make an error. Just how the baseball executive plan to prevent the fence jumpers we have not heard as yet, but don't be surprised if a couple of police men are stationed in the vicinity of the favorite jumping over place of the boys.

Now that school is over the kiddies will be flocking to the two local play grounds where ample supervised recreation will be provided for them. The idea of play grounds is an excellent one as it has a tendency to keep the children off the streets.

The boxing bout, which was staged in the Armouries on Thursday, was a complete flop from every angle. Especially unfortunate was the promoters went into the red to the amount of about $100.00. It is a wrong season of the year for inside boxing and the promoters might have realized that the night previous to a holiday is no time to stage a boxing bout in this man's town. The bouts in general were very poorly matched; whose fault it was is a question as the outside fighters sent in their weights and they were matched with local fighters of that weight. If Art Angell weighs 120 lbs., will Primo Canera is still a flyweight. The fans in general were up in arms due to the one sided fights and boxing natural if we draft a knock-out bout in Belleville. The Robinson-Storms fight at 75 pounds was about the best "go" of the evening. There two kids gave their older "brothers in the business" a few lessons. We would have liked to have seen Jack Swain bout finished through.

LEADERS DROP DOUBLE BILL

Leafs Under New Manager Win First Games of Year From Bisons

(By The Associated Press)

Perhaps Russell (Lena) Blackburn can work the same baseball miracle with the Toronto Maple Leafs that Charley Moore has achieved with the Jersey City Skeeters.

There was some indication of that yesterday, when the Leafs located fathoms deep in the International League cellar, turned on the Buffalo Bisons and beat them in a double-header, both ends of which were close, their first victories over Ray Schalk's crew of sluggers this season.

Blackburn was signed recently to succeed Tom Daly as manager of the Leafs after they had lost games so steadily that they threatened to fall right out of the league. Their upswing yesterday may be the first sign of an upward surge by the Canadians.

They got excellent pitching from Frank Barnes and Charlie Sullivan. Charlie gave the Bisons only five hits in the opener, 5-0, while Sullivan allowed only two in the nightcap 7-1.

The Leafs have had a shutout but for a home run by Winsett in the second inning. The Bisons batted hits off Fred Russell in the opener in the first and eighth innings for four runs. Jimmy Mosolf's home run in the second game helped.

DEPRESSION TAKES WALLOP

His remarks were brief in greeting all, to this important pilgrimage ceremony which started one of the greatest epochs in Canadian history. The coming and settling of the United Empire Loyalists was one of the most interesting and absorbing stories in the annals of history. Those men and women were of varied races, English, Irish, Scotch, Dutch German and French Huguenot, not all of British extraction by any means.

Brief Address

When the 13 American colonies had sough, local self-government in 1775, these were the men who had thought that end might be accomplished without separating from England, and had counselled for time in order that grievances with the home land. In the American revolution 1776-1783 the 14th American colony at Quebec had decided not to separate. The French Canadians and United Empire Loyalists had been allotted the task of laying the foundation for the greater Canada of today.

The Loyalists who came to this was a wilderness inhabited by Indians; they came to settle on land and hop keep this country British. To the Bay of Quinte they came they came almost in military unit, families of members of the Regiments of Royal Rangers. Five shiploads embarked from New York City working at the mouth of the coast then the Gulf of St. Lawrence and after wintering at Sorel they pushed on up the St. Lawrence to settle in various localities in Upper Canada.

The Marry-Go-Round

Lots of modern men seem to think that love is the only necessary thing in marriage, but that marriage is just a "sandtrap".

Why marry? Oh, well, you can always find somebody to spend your money and your pleasures with you but you've got to have somebody TIED to you, to share your burdens and troubles and sorrows, and that's ONE reason why!

Copeland Pure Food—Celery

By Royal S. Copeland, M.D., United States Senator from New York, Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

Celery was originally used as a medicinal plant, but today is one of our most valuable foods. For years it grew wild in many parts of this country. It had a bitter taste and was never used as a food. With years of cultivation the taste of the celery plant has been so changed that it is now a delightfully relished by all.

Its bitter taste may have been the reason for its frequent use as a tonic. Whatever the reason may be understood, it was often prescribed in the treatment of scurvy and rheumatism and proved active and its beneficial action was believed by many to be almost miraculous.

I can remember when celery was a luxury food and only eaten at Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners. Within recent years the development and cultivation of the celery plant has increased tremendously. It can now be purchased all year round at a price within the reach of everyone. It is an economical food; its green color and fine in flavor, every part of the vegetable can be used.

The growing of celery requires great care and patience. It grows best in rich, moist soil and, to produce early celery, the seed is planted in hot-houses. The plants are later placed in the fields outdoors as soon as the frost has disappeared. Blanching is necessary to give the celery its creamy white color. The vegetable is easily stored. In order to keep it fresh and in good condition, it should be wrapped in paper, put in a box and put in a cool place, if proper refrigerating rooms are not available. It will keep for two months.

It was not until the discovery of vitamins that the great value of celery was realized. It is an important source of its vitamin content. It contains vitamins A B C and D. In addition it contains important mineral salts, as lime, phosphorous, potassium and iron. It is a preventive of scurvy. It is a preventative of rickets. It aids in the prevention of anemia. It aids in the preservation of health, and, when one is ill, it helps to restore them to an abundant alkaline reserve in the body.

Celery is still popular as a tonic. It contains potassium salts which have a direct effect on nervous system and is known to have a direct effect on the cells of the kidneys. This may explain the frequent use of celery as a nerve tonic.

Every part of the vegetable can be eaten. The stalks are delicious when eaten raw, either plain or stuffed with cheese. It may be served in salad forms plain or in combination with other vegetables. The outside stalks and leaves may be used in stalks and soups or broths. Celery creamed, soups or scalloped with cooked seed is tasty and easily digested and can be given to a year-old child as a stimulating cream soup.

"EMBERS OF LOVE"

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

COPYRIGHT 1932—BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

She forgot her tea. Forgot to listen to the character actress who was chattering about Wanda's art, and the Anna Wendell exhibit.

The warm, soft weight in her arms moved, pressed against her heart. "Kim, I can't be without you!" she cried silently. "I can't bear it—it—Kim, don't—don't go from me. It's no use my trying to go on...."

"And is it Miss Lansing, or Mrs. Lansing?" the character actress was asking in her sweet, thin voice.

"Thank fortune you said 'Miss Lansing'!" Maxine smiled on the way home. "How it's all set. We'll hear from her tomorrow, you'll see. By the way,—ARE you married?"

Maxine looked with velvety-brown eyes, very studying at Lily Lou's rather wan, colorless face. Lily Lou shook her head. "No. I'm not lonesomely. I'm not. I'm Miss Lansing all right."

They walked on silently.

"Why are you quiet?" Lily Lou asked suddenly. It just occurred to her that it was a queer question. Why should Maxine be quiet?

"Oh, I just wondered. Most every body has been married—or some thing. I was. Boy out in Los Angeles. Fool that I was. But don't tell me to Mrs. Manchester. She's not dying godmother to old married women. It's awful nice of her to be interested in—don't you forget, and tell!"

"I won't. But she didn't say anything about wanting us to come home."

"She will. You clinched it when you hugged the cat. I'd have done it myself, but they give me the creeps. She'll take us—"

"I don't see why—"

"Because she's bored to death, innocent! She'll take us and give us about two hundred dollars' worth of food and service for about twenty dollars and that's say she's doing it for art's sake. Helping the starving young artist. Starving the young artist, my eye! She's doing it because she wants company, or something to keep her busy to her friends. I told you we could live for almost nothing if we had the right people. Wanda Pillsbury hasn't bought a meal for herself in two-years."

"Bill I don't think Mrs. Manchester wants us," Lily Lou insisted stoutly.

But six days later she was settled in the green and ivory guest room of Mrs. Paula Winfield Manchester's fine flat with Maxine's touseled head on the other narrow green bed, and Maxine's shabby, neat, too dainty garments hanging —when anyone remembered to hang them up. But the closet nest to hers.

The past six days had been packed with excitement. It made Lily Lou's head ache, just to think about it. In the first place, there was the row with Mrs. Grampas. Lily Lou had paid her her room up to the fifteenth of October, and they moved on the first.

"Make her refund. Don't let her cheat you!" Maxine had urged.

So Lily Lou broached the subject and received a tirade of abuse. Mrs. Grampas didn't support gratitude for all she'd done, not she! But she didn't expect to be robbed either. No indeed! And if a girl wanted to leave her honest, respectable, clean house to go heaven knew where—well....

Thank goodness, that was all over, and they were out of the place, and settled at Mrs. Manchester's.

Lily Lou could not see, even yet why Mrs. Manchester should want to take them for twenty dollars a month.

"Why twenty a month? That doesn't begin to pay for what we actually cost her for food and linen—"

"Oh, she doesn't need the money," Maxine said airily. "She could just as well take us for nothing, but like all her kind she's too mean for that. Wants to make us suffer a little. Oh, well! We couldn't do better for twenty bucks!"

Maxine made herself at home from the first, but Lily Lou suffered spasms of shyness, afraid to take a bath last Mrs. Manchester sent the bathroom willie she had afraid to serve herself enough food to keep a canary alive, from the dishes the maid offered at her left side. She was even afraid to be practice at first. But Mrs. Manchester was not cross all the time, and gradually Lily Lou began to feel at home, to accept small services from Sadie, the willing maid, and to become really fond of the three huge orange cats who wandered majestically through the rooms.

Now that she had a place to live and a job she'd have to do something about her voice....

"I'll try to get an audition with Tolari Saturday or Sunday," she thought, feeling sick in anticipation. Suppose he said she had no voice? Better to know it at once, in that case....

"Lily Lou Lansing, are you a coward?" she asked herself, glaring at her rather greenish image in Mrs. Manchester's excellent mirror. "Are you just deliberately putting it off?"

But no....it was because she didn't really feel well. That was it. If she felt better it would be different. If she had even the very moment she came to New York it would have been so much easier. Now, what with her hours at the dancing class and having to be home on time for meals, and hearing all this talk about things she had never heard of, "Not one girl in sixty succeeds in voice," Wanda Pillsbury said, "Now if I could play the way you can I wouldn't ever try to sing—"

In the studio building where Wanda had her classes there were many teachers of voice. She saw them going in and out of their doors.... Heard snatches of song, catch phrases—The forces that whirls Ione?—"Voice too far back!"

"Never properly placed."

Nobody had ever placed her voice. Should she? Lily Lou's head and heart were frightening too. Five dollars for half an hour had been charged Dwight Gwin, the coach, whose picture was in the same floor with Wanda's got twenty. Very likely Tolari would charge as much. And then there was the high hurdle of getting an audition. Some of the teachers had secretaries—Wanda Pillsbury said they nearly all made you pay for at least ten lessons in advance.

Days ahead. A week. Two weeks. (TO BE CONTINUED)

BRINGING UP FATHER

By George McManus.

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 64

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Meriem never went with Bwana's guests upon a hunt. She could find no pleasure in killing for mere sport. On these occasions she would accompany the riders across the plains, then ride into the jungle, and there take to the trees. For hours she would revel in the unalloyed pleasures of a return to the wild, free existence of her earlier years, leaping and swinging through the trees, or stretching comfortably upon a branch, dreaming.

Today the Hon. Morrison Baynes, returning toward evening from the hunt, saw Meriem's horse tethered near the jungle's edge. He galloped to the animal's side, dismounted and on foot entered the trail. He had gone but a short distance when he heard a great jabbering in a nearby tree. Coming closer he saw a band of baboons and to his amazement he also saw a girl swing ape-like into the tree below the beasts who were quarreling over some cloth.

His was about to put a bullet through the nearest baboon that seemed about to leap upon her when about he heard the girl speak. Then he almost dropped his rifle in surprise; he recognized Meriem. A strange jabbering identical with that of the apes broke from her lips. The baboons were evidently equally surprised for they stopped their snarling and slowly one approached and gave her back the articles they had stolen while she dreamed.

For several moore minutes the girl carried on what could be nothing less than a conversation. The baboons chattered to her and she chattered back. The Hon. Morrison Baynes mopped his perspiring brow and made his way back to his horse. When Meriem emerged from the jungle a few minutes later she found him there, looking at her with wide eyes in which were both wonder and terror. They were half way home before either spoke.

Letters from England

From Mr. G. M. James for His Former Students Everywhere

No 10.

After being in London over a month, we discovered that nearly all the best jobs there are in Parliament, and quite well held by Scotsmen, so we decided to go to Edinburgh to investigate this state of affairs and to include the kirk in our visits.

We left London on the morning of June 13th in a big touring bus which started passengers in from London direct to Edinburgh. It was comfortably filled and about half its occupants were from various parts of Canada but mostly from Ontario. One of these, Miss Fisher, is well known to many Belleville students as she recently graduated from Queen's University and has often visited Belleville. Her father and mother were with her. Her father is Professor of Sociology in Northwestern University, Chicago, Ill., and is an ideal travelling companion. The Bailey family will visit Belleville next fall. They are from Norway, Russia, Germany and other parts and will be before returning. Two other Canadians were from Nova Scotia. Canadians became well acquainted during the two days we were together. The bus driver was a jolly young Scot whose clever explanations and humor gave a handsome touch. All aboard for Edinburgh. The driver must have his meals and his sleep in the front (perhaps for complete isolation) and we were winding our way through the fine streets of North London.

It should be remembered by London is divided socially by an imaginary line (like the equator) FROM MAY-FAIR TO WHITECHAPEL East and West, each of which has certain easily recognized characteristics. In the East live poverty, dirt and ignorance. In the West you find the aristocracy, comfort and above all order and cleanliness. We have visited every corner of the world and have never been silly with great cars (and sometimes with great caution). It was very grouped from an airplane (by parachute of course) into Europe, Asia or the west, could tell in a few seconds whether we were in East London or the west. Our bus drove look us through the north of London and well into the fine districts. The trees were grand, plain, beautiful and in full bloom. Life in the west of London is about as perfect as it can be on earth.

From now on throughout this letter our journey will be north thru' Western England but not along the coast. About 9 o'clock we got out of London we passed the great palaces of Windsor and Runnymede where London we passed the great palaces of Windsor and Runnymede where English barons compelled the infamous King John to sign the Magna Charta, one of the most important documents ever signed in the world. Charta, one of the most important documents ever signed in the world. This incident undoubtedly saved England from a bloody revolution similar to that which overtook France some years later. We drove on and PASSING WINDSOR CASTLE soon came into a few small buildings for refreshment, gas and similar necessities.

About twelve miles farther north we pass Windsor Castle and the wonderful rows of oak trees on each side of the road. This castle is the finest in England and is one of the most beautiful. In this palace but it was too early to make a call.

Two miles farther on we passed Eton College, one of the most noted town of Eton where Eton School is situated, one of the most noted colleges not only in England but in the world. Many of the sons of the rich and the silk hat and costume and many boys, with brains of their own and the silk hat and costume formerly described, were hurrying quite school-boy fashion (well known to Canadian teachers) which foretold anguish of sore sort before the hour of noon (Canadian teachers) which foretold anguish of sore sort before the hour of noon (Canadian teachers) which foretold anguish of sore sort before the hour of noon (

BOND PACT AT LAUSANNE ACHIEVEMENT

Outcome of Lausanne is Still in Doubt Though Formula is Agreed Upon

German Suggests Five Year Moratorium and 10 Payments

SAFEGUARD UNUSED

Agreement of Five Powers Is Achievement In Itself

(By George Hambleton,)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
Lausanne, July 4—(Canadian Press Cable)—The Lausanne Reparations Conference is expected to wind up on Thursday and it is still uncertain what the exact outcome will be.

The five chief creditor powers—Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium and Japan—have at last agreed on a definite formula which would end reparations annuities from Germany. Having Germany instead pool a four billion gold mark bond, about $1,000,000,000, compared with the reparations annuities which they would run for the next 53 years under the Young plan and total roughly $35,000,000,000.

Complete Proposals

To this plan the Germans make these counter-proposals:

1—A five year moratorium, then 10 annual cash payments to the fund for Germany's reconstruction; these payments to be each about $40,000,000.

2—Any higher figure discussed must be purely a bond issue.

The representatives of the five creditor states met again today. And in the afternoon Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, the chairman of the Conference, again questioned the Germans on their objections to the creditors' final plan. Premier Edouard Herriot, Finance Minister Dynamic Budgetary affairs, will resume the Lausanne conversations tomorrow.

MacDonald to London

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald has intimated he must go to London on Tuesday night to attend to take up the strings of cabinet work before Stanley Baldwin, the Acting Prime Minister, leaves with other British delegates for the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa on July 11.

Agreement by the creditor powers on the new formula, which means a further German objections, is in it-

BAFFLED AS TO WHICH COW IS THE THIEF

Loucks, Ark., July 4—Wade Holloway's savings of $777 went into a cow—literally—and he's baffled regarding methods for recovery. Holloway made the way of selling which of the 32 in his herd typified as such cows.

A purse containing money the fairgrass had saved over months slipped from his pocket in his milking barn. He went back to look for it but found only the chewed billfold and a diary.

A veterinary was summoned. He operated on the cow at $10 a cow but found no money, and Holloway called off that course of search because of the expense.

90 PER CENT INDIANS VOTE CHOOSE CHIEF

Whisper Name of Choice in Ears of Returning Officer

CHIPPEWA HONORS

Interesting Elections Held at Muncey Reservation

London, Ont., July 4—George Nicholas was elected chief of the Muncey Indians in succession to the famous chief Cornelius Logan who died on Pomeray last in Home Tribal Election, just concluded.

Councillors who will sit with him are William Thomas and James Waddelove. Joseph Waddelove was runner up in the chief election.

Five ran for chief honors of the Chippewas, the late chief Elijah Birch, chief for the past nine years, was returned by majority of two over Joseph Delaery His council will consist of Christopher Fisher, Peter Fox William Birch, Dan French, Joseph Young and Davis Beaver.

M. P.'s on Grounds.

As it now stands this safeguard is entirely removed from the form-ula in favor of the memorandum which is in the nature of a "gentle-man's agreement" delaying effectiveness of the plan until new tariffs have been received from the United States.

Bond Issues

Yet, while conversations continue with the Germans on their counter-proposals, and their contribution to the figure of the "final liability" in lieu of reparations annuities, which is the German acceptance is only a matter of some days' negotiation now. Probably the final amount of the bond issue which Germany is expected to underwrite would be between $750,000,000 and $1,000,000,000. Under the formula which is the basis of the proposed fund for European reconstruction and relief, remainders would be held pending revision or war debt agreements. This bond issue would have no value for three years, it was understood and after words it is said the international money settlements would decide when it should be capitalized.

Fame of Mohawk Reservation Reaches Maryland, U. S. A.

Southern Motor Party Most Anxious to See Mohawks

VISIT RESERVE

Three motorists from Maryland hunted the city from top to bottom all afternoon Saturday and part of Sunday before they found it, they had studied the Province with the aid of some historical books and learned the fact that the Mohawk reserve was located near Belleville. Then they set out to the south of the border they had visioned the Indians.

"Where's the reserve?" came a voice from the car to a man from which pulled slowly up in front of the group at No. 1 Fire Station. They did not know English.

Later the query was repeated in a downtown restaurant. The waitress man's bowed affably and otherwise gave the impression of trying very hard to please but he could not locate the reserve. At last they were directed to the Reserve and saw Canadian Indians in modern dress at work in modern kept fields.

BROKEN OIL LINE FORCES PLANE DOWN

Sudbury, Ont., July 4—(By The Canadian Press)—Plans for a non-stop flight across Canada came to grief near here today when a broken oil line forced the Vancouver Sun plotted by R. H. Storer, to land near Coppercliff shortly after 7.30 a.m. The plane left Montreal at two o'clock with Storer and Bruce R. Donald aboard.

The plane landed safely on a field and after repairing the oil line and refueling the men took off at 10 o'clock. Owing to the heavy rains the field which the plane landed was too soggy and the ship was towed to a nearby highway from where takeoff was made successfully. The fliers plan to stop at Port William next.

GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT ENROUTE TO ALBANY

Buffalo, N.Y., July 4—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt breakfasted aboard his train here today and was met by a small group of friends and newspapermen as he is enroute to Albany from Chicago. He also appeared before the Democratic National Committee tonight to accept formally the Presidential nomination. He left at 11 a.m. E.S.T. after a stop of 35 minutes.

FRIENDLY PUP WANTS A HOME

A friendly little collie pup picked up by Thomas Thorne did quite well in at present residing in the local pound. Though his days are short residing there is a natural reluctance on the part of the custodian of the pound to dispatch him when the time for such approaches, owing to the apparent good looking of the puppy and the fact that he might be a household pet. The little animal is about two months old, has a bob tail and a friendly disposition. The owner of the puppy can claim him for the price of the necessary license.

If Sacrifice Must be, Rather Outsiders Do it Than Have it Done by Cousins

Toronto, July 4 (CP)— "To put it rather strongly, but as a hint of how we feel, if we must be crucified we would rather have it come from outsiders than from our own cousins.

This was the way in which a member of the British and South African Parliamentary Party, touring Canada expressed in an interview here the view of the party, that agricultural policies formulated at the forthcoming Imperial Conference must be on an exclusively reciprocal basis. The Dominions, they believe, should be given quota marks in the British Isles without undue sacrifice of the interests of the British farmer and consumer.

Free State President Forces British Parliament to Act

Beaverbrook's War With "Big 5" Banks

London, July 4 (C.P. Cable) — Holders of bank accounts who have had to pay interest on overdrafts at five per cent. or more are eagerly following the latest newspaper campaign of Lord Beaverbrook.

The banks are being criticized by the newspaper Peer for what the latter regards as undue disparity between the rate of interest charged to borrowers and that allowed to depositors.

In the columns of his newspaper, The Daily Express, Lord Beaverbrook reveals that he attempted to transfer from one of the "big five" London branches a deposit of 65,000 pounds which was earning interest at one-half of one per cent., to a country branch of the same bank where interest on deposits was allowed at two per cent.

Official at the bank would not consent to the increased rate of interest, stated Lord Beaverbrook in his article, so he transferred the account to a country branch of another member of the "big five," which paid the rate in per cent subject to a week's notice of withdrawal.

The "big five" in English banking are Barclay's, Bank, Limited; Lloyds, Midland, National and Westminster.

LONG DROUGHT IN WEST ENDS SAYS MACLEOD

Farmers Encouraged by Good Rainfall of Late

HOPPER WORRY

Deficiency of Moisture in Subsoils Is Difficulty

Toronto, July 4 (P)—The three-year drought from which Western Canada has suffered appears definitely broken, according to Earl Macleod, director of publicity for the three western Liberal pools. However, he pointed out in a visit to the city today that while wheat crop has still several hurdles to surmount before anything like an accurate estimate can be made of the grasshopper's yield.

"The beneficial effect on the west of the more generous rainfall has put new hope and heart to the farmer," Mr. MacLeod stated. "They look forward to fine crops of seed and some surplus to sell. Instead of out-at-elbows and gaunt appearance, though to some extent locally all farm products are away from last year's production.

Lack of rich soil moisture and damage by grasshopper borers and pale western cut worm are the immediate troubles at the present time, Mr. MacLeod's opinion. Deficiency of moisture in the sub-soil is the most serious of the following three abnormally dry years.

NO ARBITRATION

Irish Reply Forces Britain to Make Methods of LONDON, July 4. — (Canadian Press Cable)—The British Government has no alternative but to proceed with its measures for collecting the Irish Free State's defaulted land annuities by means of duties on goods from the Irish Free State, declared J. H. Thomas, Dominions Secretary, in the House of Commons this afternoon.

Government supporters cheered the minister's declaration, which followed his outline of the contents of the note just received from the Republican Government of President Eamon De Valera. The Free State note, said Mr. Thomas, left no doubt that Mr. De Valera definitely refused to submit annuities to arbitration by an impartial tribunal, as suggested by Britain.

Repudiation

Further, the Irish note, according to Mr. Thomas, sought to repudiate generally the financial settlement between the two countries signed in London and Dublin last year and the British Government therefore had no alternative but to proceed with its special tariff measure, which is due in the House of Commons tomorrow evening.

Mr. W. Dulanty, the Free State High Commissioner in London, and William Norton, Labor Leader, in the Free State Dail whose followers prop up Mr. De Valera's Government with the balance of power, were in the house as Mr. Thomas made his statement. It came with surprise to the non-official observers who had been lead to believe by reports from Dublin that Mr. De Valera was changing his mind about an empire tribunal.

The Board of Education intends taking drastic steps by making an example of some of these mischievious lads if they do not stop their destructive actions.

When the police accompanied the Board of Education around to King George School, it was ascertained that no damage had been done than expected. The window which was thought to have been broken open and the culprits had entered the school stealing a number of articles of value to kids and other unaccountable articles. It is thought that school supplies from the teacher's supply room were also taken by the boys. A check-up is made by the principal noticing what article could be handed out alone from lines of missing articles. The police have been instructed to keep a close watch on the various schools about town with orders to arrest all suspicious boys loitering near them. Loaded Bus Upsets.

Hamilton, July 4. — One woman was killed and 16 passengers were slightly injured early Sunday afternoon when a truck carrying a party of 22 Brantford and Paris residents to a Seventh Day Adventist service at Oshawa, turned turtle on the Dundas highway, one mile east of Waterdown, when a front tire burst.

Mrs. Herbert Avey of Brantford, about 40 years of age, was instantly killed when the rolling machine passed over her head.

The following were injured: Thos. R. The bursting of a front tire caused the accident, Davidson informed Traffic Officer Ross Hall of Waterdown. The officer was at the scene a short time after the crash and made a complete investigation. He said no charge had been laid last night.

Davidson told the officer that when the front tire burst the truck suddenly swerved to the left, and before he had a chance to stop it the front wheels plunged across a ditch. Carried forward by the heavy load, it crashed into a wire fence, turned a complete somersault and came to a stop on its side. Mrs. Avey was not pinned down, but her head was terribly mangled and it was apparent that the heavy machine had rolled over her. Dazed and bleeding, the passengers, who had been seated on benches at the rear, rushed to her assistance, but life was extinct. Her nine-year-old boy, who a few minutes before had been sitting at her side, saw his mother's lifeless body in the field and wept bitterly. The little fellow was badly shaken up and cut.

Corporation Income Tax Amendment is Reviewed

Certain corporations in Belleville district, whose fiscal year ends other than the calendar year, may have overlooked an amendment to the Income War Tax Act, enacted at the last session of parliament and here quoted with explanation:

"Sub-section 3. Section 35, of the Income War Tax Act as amended by Section 9 of 1932 Amendments reads as follows:

"Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 33 of this Act, any corporation, the fiscal year of which does not coincide with the calendar year, shall make a return within four months from the close of its fiscal year and the tax shall be computed as if the said fiscal year coincided with the calendar year within which the said fiscal year ends, and the provisions of this act shall mutatis mutandis apply."

Explanation.

"Taxes are payable on the 30th April, four months after the close of the calendar year. Companies with fiscal periods ending earlier in the calender year had possession of the tax in respect of the fiscal period as nearly months longer as the fiscal period closed prior to the end of the calendar year, which might be from one to 11 months, thus by giving an advantage to such companies. The amendment is to remove this advantage and require the filing of Income Tax Returns and payment of the estimated tax within four months from the close of any fiscal period and if not so made and paid the taxpayer to be assessed in the same proportion that the Income Tax Act provides in respect of persons having a fiscal period coincident with the calendar year who fail to file on or before the 30th April, that is four months after the close of the calendar year. For example, as the law now stands a company having a fiscal period ending 31st January, 1932, would not have to file a return or pay any estimated tax until the 30th April 1933. Thereafter interest runs on tax. If the proposed section is sanctioned this company will be prevented from holding its tax in its treasury from the 31st. January, 1932, to 30th April, 1933 (15 months) but will have to file a return and pay the estimated tax within four months from the close of its fiscal period, namely 31st. May, 1932.

"The reason for this amendment is obvious on reading the section. It may be stated, however, that an innocent omission corrected by the taxpayer involves no penalty but where an omission is ascertained on investigation or on information received from persons other than the taxpayer, the amount omitted may be doubled and added to the income of the taxpayer and taxed accordingly."

Corporations as well as individuals close their business year during their slack time of year. Under the original provisions of the Income War Tax Act, they and the individual in business reported on their Income or Taxation for the calendar year, in which their fiscal period closed. This year, however, the corporations who have fortunately been able to show profits for their business years ending in 1931 will have still be called on to pay for both those business years. Those who incorporated company whose year ended on 31st December reported on 30th last, for its fiscal period ending March 31, 1931, and by the recent amendment it is now called on to make returns for its period ending March 31, 1932, and by reforce July 31st next, computing the taxes within four months of the close Inspector for the district one-quarter of last tax, the balance to be made up in three bi-monthly payments as governed payments heretofore.

This present year will clear up, Sydney Dawes, local income taxation regarding the back period allotted to the individual statements, as next year unless further amendments are made) the company referred to in the preceding paragraph will not have to make returns until July 1933.

The department of National Revenue in this last amendment set further pursuing their policy of taxation on the ability of the taxpayer to pay, and obtain money in the shortest equitable time available.

Charles Freeman, Talpa, Texas, cotton gin owner.

Odell and Greenleaf, camping at Eagle Camp, on the Guadalupe, drowned in an attempt to rescue a youth marooned in a tree at Kerrville. Reports that they had made shore safely were attributed to faulty wire communication into the stricken region.

Others were victims of highway floods.

Soldiers from Fort Sam Houston, and San Antonio police, reached several families near Pearsall, where the Frosh River was on a rampage.

Military fliers dropped notes to marooned persons telling them to keep up courage until help arrived.

Several towns were virtually isolated. Telegraph and telephone communications were crippled. Large losses of cattle in the flooded areas were reported by ranchmen.

The little town of Devine, with a population of about 300, was reported washed away, except for a new school house, by the swollen two branches of the Guadalupe River.

At Kerrville, several houses were swept away and hundreds made homeless by the rushing waters. At Legion, two miles south of Kerrville, two small houses, including two stores, were destroyed.

Uvalde, home of John N. Garner, Vice-Presidential nominee of the Democratic Party, was cut off from the world for many hours by flood waters.

SIX DROWNED TWO KILLED

Accidents Cast Shadow Over Dominion Day Celebrations

Toronto, July 3 (CP) — Eight violent deaths cast a shadow upon Dominion celebrations in Canada, the Diamond Jubilee observed, including five in Ontario.

Two lost their lives when a stalled motorboat capsized in the Rainy River. They were Percy Hamilton and Ray Cathcart of Narwick. Two others narrowly escaped a similar fate in the same upset.

Earl Hardiman, 11, of Hamilton, attempted to display his prowess at bicycling along a retaining wall on Hamilton Beach Canal and met his death in so doing. His bicycle toppled over the wall and he fell into the water, dragging him down with it.

SAYS RECORDS WERE SEIZED

Deputy Commissioner of Customs Makes Complaint

Shanghai, China, July 2—(AP)—Mr. M. Talbot, Deputy Commissioner of Chinese Maritime Customs at Antung, reported to Sir Frederick Maze, the former Inspector-General of Customs, today that Japanese officials had invaded his offices with drawn guns and seized his records.

On June 30, he said, a Japanese "adviser" and several plain-clothes men of the new Manchoukuo police force entered his house, covered him with a pistol, led him to the records office and demanded that he hand over the archives.

After the seizure of the records, said Talbot, three Chinese members of his staff were arrested and all the rest except a Japanese clerk signed. Later, said Talbot, the Japanese Vice Consul assured him there would be no repetition of "such illegal Manchoukuo activities" in the railway zone.

TWO AVIATORS FOUND ALIVE

Missing Since May 17 When They Dropped Out of Sight

Sydney, Australia, July 4 (AP)—Captain Hesa Bertram, German navigator of the expedition, and a named Clausman, who have been missing since May 17, were found alive.

The two aviators dropped out of sight after they took off from Kisang Island on a flight to Darwin. Word came news of their fate came in the middle of June, when natives handed over to a missionary a handkerchief and cigarette case on which were the initials "H.B."

The natives also said they found footprints of two men going southward about 100 miles north of Wyndham. Later the burning plane was found and with it a message saying the flyers had gone into the bush. It was feared then they had been murdered by the native tribes. A search was begun immediately which has been maintained ever since.

BANDITS ESCAPE AFTER HOLDING UP CASHIER

Winnipeg, July 4.—Two hold-up men took the cashier of the Coca-Cola Company for a ride and robbed him of $1,400, were still at large Monday. In the middle of Saturday's noon-day traffic rush, the bandits jumped into the car of Clarence W. Young, the cashier, stuck a gun in his ribs and told him to drive on.

They seized the bag containing the money, and, after Young had driven to a quiet street at their direction, they let him out. An hour later the car was found a short distance from the spot where Young was released. The floor of the car was covered with about seventy dollars in small silver and a few coppers.

Young was able to give police a good description of the bandits. He

Anglers Peeved When Tests Are Made at Power Plant

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 4— The rapids of the St. Marys River, have, during the past few days, resumed something of their old glory. Due to tests being made at the new Sault Ste. Sault power plant across the river the sixteen gates of the dam were opened, since which time the water has cascaded down the rocky bed of the river in tumultuous splendor to the delight of the tourist and sightseer, but to the detriment of the trout anglers, who cannot approach the pools in which the big rainbow and speckled trout lie. However, the condition will not long prevail. Twelve of the gates will, it is understood, be closed Monday, the leaving only the four of them open that were functioning before the tests started last Monday. The water in the rapids will then resume its customary level and the fishing should be all the better for the temporary rise of the water.

FIRE AT JANETVILLE

Lindsay, July 4—The home of Mr. Charlie Deveau on the main corner of the village of Janetville was destroyed by fire, supposedly started when a spark from the kitchen stove ignited the roof.

The principal varieties of fish enjoyed in Canadian plants in order of importance are salmon, lobsters, sardines, clams, pilchards,

PREMIER AT 62

Premier Bennett is one of a great body of men in their prime years, but with youth of vision, who are upholding the burden of the groaning world. At sixty-two (he celebrated his birthday on Sunday, July 3rd) he is the prime minister of a country, which has the greatest possibilities of any in the world. That he realizes the tremendous trust resting upon him is patent to every Canadian. Energy of a dynamic character, knowledge, and the wisdom which comes with years must be his for this great post.

What Premier Bennett and his confreres do, means much to the future development of Canada.

U. S. VISITORS

More motorcars were seen on the highways from the other side of the line on Saturday than perhaps in any previous year for the fourth of July week. The attractions of Canada are bright to those visitors from the Republic when they find Canadian money at a discount. Those who are in the lines of trade which appeal to the tourist who can take home a hundred dollars worth of Canadian purchases are fortunate though even others will indirectly profit by the expenditure of the money here and by the tendency to "even" the exchange.

IS ASKED TO PROVE STATEMENT

An Oshawa minister in his last words to his congregation after four years of his ministry, took occasion to make what every newspaper declares an unfounded statement, without the slightest warrant in fact. He endeavored to show that newspapers are without heart and soul and told a story of a man who had been guilty of forgery and served a term in penitentiary for that offence. After he was released, he settled down to a life of respectability and served the people of the community. After thirty years he was an excellent citizen, with a large family and mayor of his community. Then occurred what was known in the vernacular as the snake in the grass—a newspaper reporter who dug up his old story and despite pleadings published it in the town paper. Even after a period of thirty years this man was damned by the newspapers. They have no heart and no soul" was the preacher's comment.

The story does not sound like a fact—it reeks too much of pure imagination which has no basis in actuality. Some speakers of course have been known to manufacture or color a story to suit their argument. Now no self-respecting newspaperman will dig up such a story and publish it to damn a good citizen. That is clear, for two reasons, it would be unethical and it is as well to avoid the risk of libel. There is a law which prevents repetition of a crime for which a man has done time and paid the penalty. In this case the minister made the situation worse than even that, he put the story back thirty years and added spite and sensationalism as the newspaper has discovered the ex-convict in the mayor of that community.

No, the newspapers often omit to publish news at times for the good of the public and for individuals even though no law stands in the way of publication of sordid details. They do not have to learn of news out of regard for public morals and to prevent suffering. The question is then one of balancing the public good against what might be of good news though sensational. There is not a day passes on which many times those who edit the news have to decide in their discretion and their wisdom, however limited it is, for the sake of the people. Of course mention of current crime and criminals precisely stated must be given but it would be to neglect a duty. But to dig up a story after many years and publish it to no good purpose as this minister infers would be a crime in itself.

So much so that the Oshawa Times editor is prompted to call this bluff of the minister in no equivocal manner. The editor writes: "If the speaker who told the story or anyone else can substantiate the incident with facts—names of the mayor, the newspaper, the city, etc., and the incident occurred in Canada or any other British country, the writer of this editorial will personally donate one hundred dollars to the church of which he has been minister or to any other religious or benevolent object he may designate." That is how the editor of the Times expressed himself and naturally he feels that an insult has been heaped upon the press by this sensational statement of the minister.

The editor goes on, "There is a vast difference between the publication of current events which reflect the life of a community and which the public is entitled to know, and the digging up of thirty year old crime records. Modern newspapers deal with the news of the day as it happens, not with ancient history, and it is this fact that greatly embarrasses wrongdoers and incidentally is one of the most effective deterrents, to those who might follow their unworthy example."

It would appear as if the Oshawa editor will prefer charges or the one hundred dollars. Indeed the minister's story, looks very like a distortion of the romance of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables." Speakers ought to be careful in their imputations against a whole section of the life of the world, the mirror and criticism of life as it breathes, the modern newspaper. Our minister or anyone else is justified in attacking in the manner used by the Oshawa minister.

IN THE JUDAS TREE
By Aline Michaelis

The mocking bird in the Judas tree
Hopped up; hopped down, and sang to me
It was a lovely, lyric strain
With throbbing undertones of pain
Beneath its mounting ecstasy
Of realms unguessed, of joys to be.

The summer fields about us lay;
Pomegranates flaunted blossoms gay;
Magnolia petals, wide and white,
Upon the wind dripped their delight
Of scent exotic as Cathay,
All through the golden, glowing day.

He sang his songs of mystery,
Of souls adrift on passion's sea,
Of peace as sweet as a pearl,
Glimpsed dimly where life's waters whirl.
The mocking bird in the Judas tree
Laid bare his pulsing heart to me.

HON. GEORGE PERRY GRAHAM'S NEWSPAPER in Brockville tells us it is Front Page summary of a few of the changes that have occurred in the past one hundred years, apropos of Dominion Day celebrations, and perhaps contains the Good Old Days and the Splendid New Days, as follows:

AND ALL WITHIN 100 YEARS 1832

100 YEARS AGO women wore hoop-skirts, bustles, petticoats, corsets, collars and ties, high buttoned shoes, ruffled cotton drawers, flannel nightgowns, puffs in their hair—did their own cooking, baking, cleaning, washing. Loving-reared big families, went to church on Sunday—were too busy to be sick.

MEN wore whiskers, square hats, Ascot ties, red flannel underwear, big watches and chains—chopped wood for stoves, fires and cooking—went to work—milked and five cent beer—rode bicycles, buggies or sleighs—went in for politics—worked twelve hours a day—and lived to a ripe old age.

STORES burned coal-oil lamps—carried everything from a needle to a plough—trusted everybody—never took an inventory—placed orders for goods a year in advance—always made money.

TODAY WOMEN wear silk stockings, short skirts, low shoes, no corsets, an ounce of underwear, have bobbed hair, smoke, paint, powder, drink cocktails, play bridge, drive cars, have pet dogs—and go in for politics.

MEN have high blood pressure, wear no hats and some no hair, shave their whiskers, play golf, bathe twice a day, play the stock market, ride in aeroplanes, never go to bed the same day they get up—are misunderstood at home—work five hours a day—play tennis and die young.

STORES have electric lights, cash registers, elevators, always have what the customer wants and then some—trust nobody—take an inventory once a year—buy in advance—have overhead, mark-up, markdown, quotas, budget, advertising, stock control, annual and semi-annual sales of month, follow-day, coupder's day, rummage, economy sales—and rarely make money.

Melancholy Aunt Clara from the country had the habit of listening to the big clock on the Town Hall in the village where she was visiting and exclaiming, every time it struck:

"Eternity draws one hour nearer."

Clarence was very much impressed with that solemn reflection. One day the big clock got out of order. While repairing it the workmen made it strike every few minutes. Clarence heard it with bulging eyes.

"Oh, Aunt Clara," he said, excitedly, "eternity has got a drive on today."

At an examination in a school in Cincinnati the teacher was so pleased with his class that he said they could ask him any question they liked.

Some queries were put and answered. Seeing one little boy deep in thought, the teacher asked him for a question. The boy, with a very grave face, put this one:

"If you was in a soft mud-heap up to your neck and I was to throw a brick at your head, would you duck?"

Other Papers' Opinions

STOP LAW

Seven-tenths of one per cent of reported motor accidents in Ontario last month were collisions with railway trains. The proportion in any month is not much greater.

It is probable that motorists who exercise care in any circumstances whatever do so at level crossings. Those who are usually reckless and ignore the rules of the road and the dictates of common sense would not likely halt at railway tracks merely because of a law calling for it.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

OUT OF HIS OWN POCKET

It is too bad that the rent Premier Bennett pays for his suite at the Chateau Laurier, should be dragged into the O.N.R. probe. Mr. Bennett pays his own rental for these rooms and if the O.N.R. decided to spend $110,000 fitting them up for him—against his own protest for spending more than $60,000—surely he was not responsible. The fact came out that the Premier's very rich man spent $24,000 a year altogether at the hotel, for his rooms and for the entertainment of his guests made him an extremely desirable tenant and therefore amount came out of his own pocket.

The criticism and abuse heaped on the premier by people anxious to make political capital out of what a low esb politics have sunk to Ottawa, people are getting sore at half truths and perverted facts. Mr. Bennett doubtless has made mistake, being human, but to try to give the idea that he was personally using his position for his own benefit is not cricket.—Sault Star.

BETTER TIMES IN THE WEST

There is more hopefulness in Alberta than anywhere else in the country. What's the explanation? Possibly our people are not losing; they're confident a better season is coming; and they know, moreover, is that there is a reserve which never has been fully yet exhausted.—Lethbridge Herald.

IMMIGRANTS IN CANADA

Necessary as it may be that attempts should be made to impress new Canadians with their responsibility, yet better progress in this direction may be made through better evidence of her sense of responsibility to new Canadians.—Toronto Star.

SLAUGHTER OF THE ROADS

Either public consciousness must be aroused to a degree not heretofore attained or the fatalities to careless driving must be so drastically increased that fear of the consequence will do what appeals to humanitarian instincts alone so far failed to accomplish.—Toronto Daily Star.

No business man in any town should allow a newspaper publication in his town to go without his name and business being mentioned somewhere in its columns. This would mean that every issue should have a whole, half, or even a quarter page in each issue of the paper, but their name and business should be mentioned, if you do not use more than a few lines. Many are guilty of picking up a newspaper should be able to find what business they represented in a town by looking at the paper. This is the best possible town advertiser. Those who do not advertise his business does an injustice to himself and to the town. The man who insists on abating the publication of notices, refusing figures to advertise his own, is not a valuable addition to any town. The right kind of publicity is the wide awake and liberal advertising business men.—Exchange Magazine.

WAR DEBTS

As the United States is now in the throes of a presidential election, the world will have to wait until the vote is cast in November. Christendom earnestly hopes that the Geneva Disarmament Conference at Washington will be in a position to follow up Hoover's proposal for a moratorium with such a contribution towards a solution of the war debts problem will relieve the nations of the terrible international financial burden under which they now labor. Such a consummation would be a step far to advancing on the road towards economic recovery, and the United States would be the greatest beneficiary of such a highly constructive development.—Mail & Empire.

THE STARLING

A starling whistles from the chimney pot.
And all my world, as by some magic spell,
Is touched to loveliness; now quite forgot,
The grey dreads streets; I see a dell
Where happy wild things play; the honey bees,
Rabbits with startled eyes and listening ears,
Scared by the smallest whisper of the breeze
That laughs among the grasses at their fears.
Blue bottle flies, like scraps of the blue sky
Flit to and fro, and with the singing stream
A merry water-wagtail hurries by.

EXAMINE YOUR OWN CHILD IS EXPERT'S VIEW

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

If your child goes to school you should visit it frequently enough to be quite specifically whether or not he or she, as the case may be, is developing at an average rate of speed.

Now the point is to do that you may find it difficult because you cannot be so many things you should investigate. And, to be sure, there are many other factors besides mere school grades that should be considered.

For a parent may be aided in have a research on his or her child I have placed before readers a series of facts that should be considered in a child's development at school age.

Of course it is impossible to make an exact diagnosis of a child by means of such inquiries as follow. The problem that every honest parent should give a parent a good idea as to whether the child is satisfactorily personal examination by a trained psychologist is highly desirable.

Has the child ever repeated a class, especially the same class more than once? Has the child been absent attended? Are there adequate reasons for failure in school?

Which are the child's best subjects and which does he dislike and why? Is memory poor, or concentration? Does the child show a determined effort to do his best? Is the fault of the teacher or playmates?

What evidence is there that the child's imaginative ability, reasoning ability, memory ability, manual ability or interest shown in reading, writing, drawing, arithmetic, or manual arts are normal? Is any display of cruelty to animals or humans? Is he fond of animals? And does he attach to them himself?

At what times does the child go to bed and what time does he arise? Is he regular in sleeping habits? Does he sleep quietly or are there night cries sleep starts, etc.? Is he restless in sleeping?

Are meals eaten regularly? Is the diet varied? Any special repugnance to certain foods? Is the child eating good for body building such as green vegetables, milk, etc.?

Does the child show affection and is he willing to respect his elders? What is his attitude at home as compared to school.

Is the child rich children of his own age or with younger or older children? What is the child's competitive games upon him? Is he a leader or a follower, etc.?

What is the general emotional tone? Is the child comfortable and good-natured, placid, irritable, lazy, day-dreaming, happy impulsive, bold and reckless, shy, timid, vacillanture, etc.?

THE DEER

Dappled, like sunlight stirred by October breath
They thrust through haw, or green blades diamonded
Misty their feed, the dropped ashleaf
Quivers between their lips, and the unguarded rind
On bitter chestnut breaks for their joy.

Now, with a golden cliff along the ridge,
Rims the blind
Runs free a little time, since now
The young are fed
In the green glade are grown. Short while, for each
Branched life for a summons in the frosty air;
Trumpeted call, sung out, until a sound
Moss, sweet, like birds, like stock-dove, or like owls,
Muttering by moonlight in the wooded trees.
Answers the about, the due voice of the fair
And ready male. The long wood shrills and rings
With baby cries, loose on the stirring breeze.
And a doe leaps. For not the squirrel's trove,
Nor the mole's hoard is darker. This is love,
A secret torment. Through the branch fall clean.
This must be, since for all time life must go on.

WEINER ROAST IS HELD AT CONSECON

The Consecon Young People's League held a weiner roast on Friday night. Members gathered around the bon-fire and Miss Marjorie Thompson, president, was in charge of the meeting. After the singing of the National Anthem, Rev. E. M. Cook who is leaving Consecon pastoral charge and has been a very popular one among the young people was asked to come forward and Miss Marjorie read a neat address and Rev. Cook was presented with a handsome gift.

Following this was another presentation to Miss Marjorie Thompson, who was presented with a casserole. Following is the address:

Dear Marjorie—We your friends and fellow members of the Epworth League of Consecon, desire on this happy occasion of your birthday to express our sincere appreciation of your faithful services, so earnestly and willingly rendered at all times. We are sorry that we are departing from our midst. We assure you we shall miss you very much. Wherever you may go, you shall ever have our very best wishes for your future success and happiness, and the very best that life can give.

We ask you to accept this gift not for its intrinsic value but as a token of our love and esteem and respect for you.

Be this its portion given,
A happy, joyous life on earth,
And a golden crown in heaven.

The steamer Lansdowne left for more attractive than ever and its natural attractions were ably supplemented by good music furnished by the 15th Battalion Band and by dancing. About 300 excursionists left here in the morning on the Picton, stopped a very pleasant sail on the bay and had a brief stop-over in pretty little Picton and returned shortly after eight in the evening. A number of fishing parties also left here for a day's sport and all claim to have spent a most enjoyable holiday. Shorter in the afternoon, including an unprecedented growth. Then the choice of Mr. Richard Grills, front of Thurlow, we have a specimen of a head two inches long which is a fair sample of the whole fish.

Fists Flew After a Collision Happened at First Base

W. Huntingdon, July 4 (Special)—One of the most spectacular and at same ottime undesirable scenes were witnessed by a great crowd of enthusiastic spectators on Thursday evening here when the final game was being played off by Trenton and West Huntingdon.

Naturally the feelings and emotions of both sides were tense enough especially as Ivanhoe was leading by 30 to 19.

The game however, was going well and honorable to all concerned, when at West Huntingdon batsman was running to first base a collision occurred between him and the 1st baseman, when it was alleged the first baseman was the cause of the trouble which followed. In a moment, the crowd became an ungovernable, howling mob and indignant people, soon fists were flying, blows being dealt out and right and left. Some were willing trying to appease the spirit of rapidly growing anger, others were feeling the anger to administer a more peaceful solution to the injustice which some of them did in an old fashion way.

After a while this great fallen spirit was quelled down a little and carried from the game.

Unfortunately the game did not continue and the management decided that the game would be replayed on Monday night next.

Knocks and Boosts

Manager Wali Gerow will have his Nationals out to practise on Monday evening in preparation for their scheduled game with the Cobourg Pauline on Wednesday afternoon. The Nats have been rained out for their last three games and therefore need Wednesday's game to get three valuable striking distance of the second place Peterboro team which now has 14 and Nats by one full game. The Prize Day at Cobourg on Wednesday and if they manage to pull out with a win they will be right in the contenders, providing Belleville wins on Wednesday, will be only a game of to be behind the league leading Peterboro. If the Nats win and the Peterboro team lose they will be tied for second place, however.

Tommy Hanlan has had over two full week's rest and should be able to throw the Cobourgites for a big league fandan. Carl Casey will be groomed for relief duty, however, as Manager Gerow wants Wednesday's game as bad as a fish needs water. In the probability that one or two new faces will be seen in National uniforms on Wednesday. The management of the Nats feel that they need another outfielder and another infielder to round out their plans for the future.

To the young school which has been injected into the roster of the Main line race, has come a player with flying colors although they should realize that they are not so called, word's hardest as yet. Those kids have plenty to learn and the addition of one or two more to the locals there would be of needed crabs prestige to their playing ability. As a rule a newly gathered team of recruits, such as that of Nationals, does not stay in the running quite as long as they have done so far this year. This week will tell many tales as the Nats have their opportunity to show their wares. They play Cobourg here on Wednesday and meet the Peter at James Stevenson Park on Saturday afternoon.

All four junior teams were rained out on Saturday afternoon. The Wellington kids were to have played on the Cricketers at the Alemite grounds while the Jeary leading C.S.A.A. youngsters were to have battled the climbing Moose Janiors at the Fair grounds. The weatherman is not sending any more rain or a few days we hope, and all local leagues should be able to catch up in their postponed schedule.

This week promises to be a busy one for the various girls' softball teams about town as there is a game scheduled for every night in the week. On Monday night the Cobourg "All Stars" will battle the Belleville Trust nine. Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights see regular scheduled league games in the Belleville Indoor park by call loop. All four teams will be called upon to play two and three times this week. On Saturday the famous Oshawa "Falcons" will come to town to battle the National Maids two games. The first game will be played in the afternoon while the second battle will be of the twilight nature. The league executive are a number of games behind in their schedule, due to postponements, and are trying to catch up by playing two postponed games this week, Tuesday and Thursday games, are scheduled while Wednesday and Friday are postponed tilts.

Jim Curran, editor of the Sault Daily Star is at last meeting with results in regards to his "World Week" celebration which is to be staged at the Soo July 25th to 30th. Every conceivable kind of sport has been arranged to entertain the thousands of visitors who are now signified their intentions of being present. Baseball, basketball and amateur, softball, baseball, lacrosse and community dances every night in the week are on the programme. When Jim Curran starts anything he always seems to have big ability to put it across successfully.

For the first time in a number of years Canada was not represented in the Diamond Sculls which was rowed at Henley on the Thames, England, on Saturday last.

To make the story all the harder to conceive a foreigner we nibe cricketer "Scally" R. Phillis of Tasmania won the race in rather slow time when he beat his fellow-countryman, G. Bootsein. On for Canada were Fearn, Gest, Wright of Hamilton to represent Canada once again. The Leander Rowing Club was the Grand Challenge trophy, however.

After taking the short end of a 4 to 4 score from the Morrison Intermediates on Dominion Day the Kingston Frolics ran amuck and defeated the Lyal Verrico, senior champions of Ontario, in the same of 8 to 4 on Saturday. The Frolics set hit the O.B.A.A. champs exactly 16 to 8. Tawney Jamieson hurled steady ball game but the entire four innings letting the hard hitting Verrico down with two small hits. From now until the end of the C.O.B.L. schedule the Frolics will be "high batting" their C.O.B.L. rivals, no doubt.

YOUTH'S BODY IS RECOVERED

Found Nearly Half Mile From Scene of Fatality

Trenton, July 4 (Special)— The body of Herman Mouleneay, 17 year old youth, who fell from the dam in Trenton last Wednesday, June 29, and was drowned was recovered late Friday afternoon, one half mile down the river near the Trenton Canada mill. The body which was floating, when observed, was discovered by Mr. Vincent Portlelth, who had been engaged with others for the two preceding days in dragging operations for its recovery. The search action search had been centred in the water above the dam, where the body was thought to have sunk, and little thought, that it might have floated down to the mill, were entertained. Acting on a theory of his nephew, however, Mr. Vincent followed up the current and made the ultimate discovery. The funeral of the youth will be held immediately.

BRITISH APPEAL NOT UNHEEDED

Immediate Response is Not by Banks and Post-Office

London, July 4—(Canadian Press Cable)—An immediate response on a large scale to the war loan conversion appeal of the British government is reported by the Bank of England and the Post Office Savings Bank.

Large inquiiiries through which much of the loan is held were prominent among the early applicants for conversion. Harrod's Limited gave notice of turnuit in bonds worth £150,000 and William Whiteley Limited reported convertible holdings worth £145,000.

An echo of drastic 1931 cuts in government expenditures accompanied the application of the National Union of Teachers to convert bonds at £172,000. The teachers were converting their holdings to assist the government "despite the ten per cent salary cut the government imposed on us" said a letter from the secretary of the Union.

A striking patriotic gesture accompanied the application for conversion operation when one bond-holder applied not for conversion, but for cancellation.

SAFETY-GLASS SAVES CHILD IN CRASH

JACK MOLONEY, 8 years old, son of Captain P. J. Moloney, M. C., former British air pilot and director of the Border Cities Aero Club, was the driving down a crowded Detroit street recently when an aged woman, confused by the traffic lights, stepped from the curb directly in front of a line of oncoming automobiles. Brakes screeched. The cars stopped quickly, and the woman made her way safely to a traffic island.

But that was not the whole story. As Capt. Moloney jammed on his brakes to prevent a crash, his son, Jack, sitting beside his father, was thrown forward by the sudden stop and his chin crashed into the metal of his father's Ford coupe. The impact cracked the glass into a fantastic pattern, but it did not shatter, and Jack escaped without a scratch.

"My son would have been seriously injured or killed if the windshield had been of ordinary plate glass," Capt. Moloney said later. "That is the reason my Ford is equipped with safety glass not only in the windshield but in all doors and windows."

Capt. Moloney said that his own sight had been saved in similar circumstance some years ago while he was flying in Nova Scotia. One day a seaplane he was piloting crashed. The glass in the cockpit windows splintered and flew in every direction. Fortunately, Capt. Moloney was wearing a pair of goggles fitted with safety glass. Although they were cracked in many places they did not shatter and Capt. Moloney's eyes were saved.

Strong Muscles Necessary for Graceful Movements

Strong muscles and well-trained muscles is not surprising that girls and women have a splendid and reasonable hatred for calesthenics. Outdated, dried gymnastics aren't the thing. They aren't inspiring. They are usually accomplished with the least possible effort of mind and body and so are without results. Good exercise, everyone should have, if she is to attain to keep of good looks. If she is to keep healthy, cheerful and happy.

When muscles are weak or when they are padded over with fat, the body hasn't freedom of motion. nor is it possible to have a fine outline. A narrow chested undeveloped girl even though she is blessed with features—the porcelain-like complexion, the elegant breakbone, normal bust, good arms and legs, a trick of moving gracefully, is an awkward women these days are lacking in physical perfection.

The summer season offers opportunities for the right kind of exercise, recreation which at the same time entertain the mind, stimulate the spirits, start blood streams a-thumping—wash out the lungs, create appetite, send one to bed with a delightful fatigue that invites refreshing sleep.

Golf is busy. Be a golfer. Play tennis. Swim or row. If nothing else can be managed, walk three miles each day.

Make a fad of rhtymic movements. Fad business or wrestling with the old vacuum cleaner can be made into a game-bending from the waist without depressing the chest, flexing the muscles of the arms, keeping the shoulders down. The movements of the hands should be watched to see that they are graceful.

When brushing the hair throw the head forward, hold the left hand on the hip, move the right arm without disturbing the elbow. Sweeping up and down the stairs can be turned to beauty accounts. Carrying lightly, holding like back, lifting the chest, carrying the head high, with constant regard for proportion of movement will do more in the long run than systematic calesthenics and through in a half-hearted manner.

Time for forming habits of grace is in youth. The girl who learns to walk a chair, with head and shoulders forward, who assumes that silly stoop that affected by many girl should have the members of the family set as a committee of the whole.

When the body assumes a buoyant attitude, when it is supple and graceful, when there is buoyancy of spirit. There is courage. Self-consciousness and the complexion is bound to be clear and of better color when the body is in proper balance, muscles slack, fibers inert.

This is the season for outdoor play. Cook up a deep, genuine interest in some form of sport. But so often "I shall move beautifully." If you sing and shout and laugh, it will help you and it helps too.

INTERLISTED STOCKS JUMP

Volume Was Heavier with Higher Priced Golds Leading

Toronto, Ont., July 4—Despite—or perhaps because of the fact New York markets were closed interlisted stocks gave a strong performance on resumption of trading after the long holiday on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange today.

International Nickel was an early feature, with price up 70 at -5.25 when taken at noon. Noranda responded with a 60-cent advance to $14. Mining Corporation came out at $11.70 up another 5, and Eldorado firmed a cent or so to $1.20.

Lake Shores met good demand and displayed a gain of 50 at $27.50 when taken. Teck-Hughes moves up 4 to $3.90 and the balance of the higher-priced golds were steady. Among cheaper issues Hunts, Premier, Howey, Tashota and McLeod Bilroy were above Thursday's closing levels. Macassa and Canusa lost a little ground.

Oils were only lightly traded, with Peninsular Pete off a fraction under pressure and Olga up a couple at 18.

IRELAND MAY CHANGE MIND

De Valera's Note Said to Cover All Financial Settlement

Dublin, July 4 (CP Cable)—Although the Irish Free State delegation to the Imperial Conference is preparing to leave for Ottawa Friday, it is reported the Government of the Free State to be represented at the conference may be changed at the last moment as a result of the course the British Government may take in the House of Commons at London this week.

Conditions in the situation are expected here in semi-official circles aware of the contents of the latest note sent to J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Dominions, by President Eamonn De Valera, the note does not confine discussion to the question of the land annuities, but transfers the entire ground of the financial settlement reached between Great Britain and the late Cosgrave Administration, and is reported to demand revision of many items in the settlement.

The arrival here, on the invitation of President De Valera, of V. J. Paisl, former president of the Indian legislative assembly is believed to be the fore-runner of discussions between the two concerning possible future trade relations between India and the Free State.

At the same time leaders here from Indian circles in London state that Patel, a personal friend of De Valera, may be named by the Irish President to serve on the Empire Tribunal to arbitrate the land annuities question.

SENATOR HARDY LEAVES POST

Sees Provincial Election Not Very Far Distant

"Particularly in view of what must be a very distant provincial election"—in his own words—Senator A. C. Hardy of Brockville, has resigned the presidency of the Ontario Liberal Association, after fifteen years in the position.

Senator Hardy, in his letter of resignation addressed to the secretary of the Ontario Liberal Association, points out the fact that he is the only member still on the active or executive committee who was a member when he became president, and says that he feels that the president should now be selected from amongst the younger members.

A suggestion that this might apply that the old guard no longer stood with the leader selected from the younger element was answered by the last sentence in the senator's letter, in which he said that he hoped to be off "some real services" to Mitchell F. Hepburn, "not necessarily at the election which he professes to see impending."

Senator Hardy, while resigning the presidency, continues as a member of the management committee of the party. The text of his letter of resignation read:

"I wish you would take the first opportunity of laying before the executive of the Ontario Liberal Association my resignation as president thereof, and a new president would in any case have to be elected next October at the annual meeting. I feel that the best interests of all concerned, including myself, will be specially of the association, will be served by permitting those chiefly interested to have a considerable time to make a choice and in such a way that links will be as favorable to every member of the association. In the meantime I would suggest that the office of president be carried on by F. B. McGuire, the first vice-president, who has relieved me of most of the work during the last year and a half and in the most competent way.

"I feel that the time has come when a younger man should be asked to assume this work. Looking over lists of our old committees I find I am the only member still on the executive or active committees who was a member thereof at the time I took over the presidency some 15 years ago and I feel that the president should now be chosen from amongst the younger newcomers.

"I wish I could express in words the gratitude and appreciation I have felt indeed from the very beginning of my term of office of the support and personal sympathy which I have received from the Liberals throughout the Province of Ontario during my long term of office—a term which I believe has rarely been carried on for too great a length. It has given me a host of friends and I can say truthfully that I am leaving office not only with those friends but without a trace or vestige on my own part of anything but the kindest feelings to every member of the Liberal Party in this province. If a place can be found for me on the management or any other committee where I can be of any service, it goes without saying that my best efforts will be given and I feel that I can do more for the Liberal Party now as a private member than I can as chief executive particularly in view of what must be a not very distant provincial election, were I hope to be of some real service to our leader, Mr. Hepburn."

ROOSEVELT ON 4TH BALLOT

Garner of Texas Likely to be Nominated for Vice President

Chicago Stadium, July 2—Franklin D. Roosevelt, governor of New York, was chosen overwhelmingly Friday night as the Democratic nominee for the United States presidency.

With the force of a real stampede he swept through the convention at the fourth ballot, announced only after another their withdrawal from the race, and turned their votes into the swelling Roosevelt column. He was declared the nominee on the fourth ballot, the first taken last night.

Garner Likely Team Mate.

Today the convention will meet to nominate Speaker John N. Garner of Texas, for Vice-president.

When he released his state delegation just before last night's session met, that started the landslide that swept across the excited stadium.

Alfred E Smith was the only one of the nine original candidates who stayed in to the end. The staunch block of states with him steered clear of the stampede, too, sticking with Smith in the face of the sweep.

Associates of Smith said last night they did not believe he would withdraw as Democratic ticket in November.

Smith learned the nomination of Roosevelt at his hotel headquarters. He declined to comment.

To Fly to Convention

Governor Roosevelt sent a message to the convention yesterday that he plann to fly here and appear before the delegates tonight.

Setting off the tension of the evening, William Gibbs McAdoo, at the very opening of the night shift of the California vote—declaring "We did not come here to deadlock this convention."

CLEVELAND'S CANOEIST DROWNS

Orillia, July 4—When the canoe in which he and his wife were paddling overturned in the Indian River near Port Carling shortly before noon Sunday, Richard Bard, aged 36, 1017 Lake Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, was drowned, despite a heroic attempt at the rescue made by his wife, who could not swim.

Mr. Bard and his son had been staying at Wayington Farm, a summer resort near Port Carling, and started out Sunday morning on a canoe trip to celebrate the anniversary of the younger man's graduation from Ohio State University. They had scarcely travelled half a mile when, in some unexplained manner, their canoe overturned. Both men were able to swim, and struck out for shore before they lost sight of it, the whole distance, Richard Jr. saw that his father was tiring rapidly, and returned to assist him. When leaving the elder man, young Bard was unable to see clearly in what direction he was swimming with the result that he swam to a spot where the shore line consisted of a high rock cliff, which could not be scaled.

By the time a rescue party, headed by Reginald Stephen, Port Carling, had reached the scene with a boat, Mr. Bard Sr. was dead.

TO SEEK RE-ELECTION.

St. Thomas, July 4—Mayor John Jagoe has announced that he will seek a fourth term as mayor of the City of St. Thomas. Mayor Jagoe's what virtually amounted to a precedent when he was elected for a third term last December. So far this year, he has worked without salary. He will probably be opposed.

Peterboro Man Terribly Crushed in Car Collision

Peterboro, July 4—William J. Connors, 1446 Preston Parkway, of the Canadian General Electric Company was killed Saturday afternoon when a car in which he was a passenger collided with another driven by Charles Sharpe of Detroit on the Port Hope-Peterboro highway, four miles from Peterboro.

George Vass, 34, nephew of Connors and driver of the car in which the victim was riding, is being held by the provincial police. It is alleged that after the accident, Vass drove away from the scene, sped down a side road and drove back into town.

In the course of the alleged journey, the body of Conners, the police say, was precipitated from the car, being found shortly afterwards on the Tenth Line Road.

Vass reported the accident to relatives and returned in a taxi to where the body was found by the police in charge, and he was arrested. A third man, Leslie Hayward who was with Conners and Vass when the collision occurred, reported to the police this morning and is not being held.

The collision occurred when Vass' car came on to the highway from Bethune Avenue, the Detroit machine being driven into the ditch. Its occupants, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sharpe and their daughter Dorothy were not injured. Conners was dragged under the car when it took the smash came and his head was badly mangled.

The dead man was a war veteran, having enlisted in the third battalion. He saw service at the front with the 52nd battalion, Ill whose two daughters and three sons survive.

A Special Message for

The Man Who Has To Provide For His Own Future

THOUSANDS of men who were reaching the age of retirement when the depression wrecked their estates, must continue in the routine of business. The man who bought Life Insurance for this purpose is happy. This is the lesson of the depression.

It is worth while playing safe—at least to the extent of guaranteeing yourself a minimum income of say $100.00 a month when you reach age 65 or 60. You may not have known that the London Life will guarantee to a man now 37, three times as much money per month when he reaches 65 as he deposits. Annual dividends, especially left to accumulate, will greatly increase these returns.

A man who works years to accumulate an estate and then loses it seldom has a second chance. Life Insurance is sure, and is always paid at 100 cents on the dollar.

In view of the recent events in Siam which impelled the king of that country to make his present retirement from that of an absolute monarchy to a limited one, the well-known "Bangkok: Its Life and Sport" by Lieut.-Col. C. H. Forty, late of the Royal Siamese Gendarmerie, will be of immediate interest. Readers of Forty's book will find much of sporting life of modern Siam. Much of the volume is given to accounts of Siam's coastal and island game areas and to the game the sportsman may tag there. The reviewers of this Eastern tropical country, who recently visited America, spend most of the year at the Royal residence in Bangkok and have therefore gained many modern features as improvements. Colonel Forty gives advice to Europeans visiting or taking up residence in Siam, which is fast becoming a place of interest to tourists.

"EMBERS of LOVE"

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

COPYRIGHT 1931 BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

Lily Lou was so gay that Mrs. Manchester was a little alarmed. It didn't suit her. She wanted Lily Lou be her type, and leave the other sort of thing to Maxine? Now if she was going to turn giddy and sensilly, instead of attending to her music and making it worth your while to look after her.

Some time Mrs. Manchester's displeasure came to Lily Lou, finally. She didn't know what she had done, or left undone, to displease her. "The dickens with her!" she thought, trying to be carefree and independent like Maxine. That was the way to get through life Maxine's way—just laugh and don't think.....

Yet and that was the trouble. When she wanted to think she couldn't. She wanted to forget. She was having her voice tried while she felt like this. She couldn't go on much longer. Don't let yourself get panicky. Don't give in to it.. Don't get scared or you're lost. Stop worrying, put your mind on Wanda's book-keeping.

That bookkeeping was terrible. She worked on it for hours each day, but it was so hard to make head or tail of Wanda's figures, and she flew into such a rage if you asked her questions.

"Maybe you weren't paid for two months, Miss Pillsbury. Hadn't it better wait until you're sure?"

"The Hawleys! You're crazy, Lansing. Alice always pays the cash on the first. Mark it paid."

"There's no record of it—"

"Well, mark it paid, anyway."

"Yes, but if you—"

"Who's running this class? It's my money, isn't it? Don't get me all upset now. I've got a full afternoon ahead. Look and see if I paid the Marshall Ormsby people for those sandals, will you? You can't find it! We gods Lansing, what kind of a bookkeeper are you? Well never mind, I think I did and I forgot to make a stub in the check book. Mark it paid, and if I didn't pay it they'll send a collector or something. Dizzy child could you just leave that bookkeeping, and walk over as far as Lexington—you know that hole in the wall where you can buy bread and stuff, and get me a bramiere at Lord's—the nice kind, with the low back, twenty-five..., or did I get it at Macy's? Well, I get anything and you can exchange it if it's wrong. Something red if it runs small, get a thirty-six. And hurry, will you, dear?"

Sometimes Lily Lou thought she'd go mad. She didn't know which was the worst, being bookkeeper, janitress and personal maid in the morning, or playing the piano in the afternoons.

Hour after hour of it, her fingers aching, her head splitting. The tap of the children's feet on the floor. The sound of Miss Pillsbury's shrill instructions:

"Step, slide, step, step, slide step —Swing! Pay attention! All right, Lansing, start again. One, two three, two—"

At night she was too tired to do anything but crawl into bed. And there like a log until sleep came. Keep your head blank... don't think don't think. Laugh! Because if you don't laugh, you'll cry.

The family kept visiting. Aren't you studying yet? Tolari isn't the only teacher in New York. Are you sure you are well?"

That was it. She wasn't well. It was because Wanda kept the studio too hot.

"I can't get used to all that steam heat, and it isn't cold, really. Couldn't we have the window open?" she begged.

Wanda Pillsbury looked at Lily Lou with a strange gleam in her eye. "What IS the matter with you Lansing? You haven't been up to any mischief, have you?"

"I don't know what you mean. But I tell you, I'm stifling, it's so ghastly hot I can't stand it. I don't see how the children—"

"The children are all right. So am I. Now don't have hysterics. You aren't going to faint on me, are you? Get out in the hall and get some air I'll use the records for a few minutes. Come on, girlies, the prize dance, all together. Ta, ta, ta, ta, ta!"

CHAPTER THIRTY

Lily Lou went out into the hall. She walked to the fire escape in the rear, and opened the door that led out to the rusty iron landing. Someone opened the door of the studio next to it. It was Dwight Gwin, the big, gray-haired man who coached professionals.

"Hello," he said, and then he stopped and stared at her curiously. "You're not ill, are you? I wouldn't go out there if I were you. Wait! Take my arm!"

Lily Lou saw the tall, loose-jointed figure coming toward her, and unconsciously drew back, her already overstrained nerves jangling at the thought of one more prying question. "I'm quite all right, thanks," she said. "Just —warm."

She took another backward step and grabbed at the rail. It wasn't there! Nothing was there. She closed her eyes, as the whole world seemed to slip away beneath her.

A short man and a tall man were standing in the room where she had left Lily Lou, saw them, silhouetted against the window. They seemed to be talking. The short man jerked a thumb in her direction. She caught the word "she"—

Because her eyelids were so heavy she closed her eyes again. It was all right. Everything with her eyes shut.

They were talking about her, she was sure of that. She lay quite still, trying not to be frightened. Everything was all right. Something had happened, but it was all right. She remembered in a moment.

Painfully she recollected. The heat in the studio, Dwight Gwin, coming out to the fire escape for air.

She must have fainted, silly to faint. The lassitude had overcome her.....and, of course, her miserable ill made you feel.

She knew where she was now. Dwight Gwin's studio, full of Italian antiques, red velvet and tapestries, and a bulb in the fireplace in the middle of the floor. She'd looked at lots of times when the door was open.

She closed her eyes healthy. They had discovered she was conscious, and she didn't want to talk—not yet not just yet.

A firm, cool hand closed over her wrist. It was Gwin's hand. Didn't they know she was awake. She opened her eyes and smiled apologetically. "I'm awfully sorry," she said, "I'm afraid I fainted. It was the heat—"

She knew Dwight Gwin's hands as well as he knew his own studio. It wasn't think of it. The tears of weakness filled her eyes. "The light is so bright," she said, blinking. "I'll turn her head away from them."

"Don't cry, my dear," Gwin said soothingly. "You didn't even fall. I was sure I'd get to face it.... I wasn't Ken....got to write to Ken.....

Dear Ken, I hate to write to you now, at this time, but I think you ought to know.

The letter that she was composing in her mind came to an end. A sob tore itself out of her throat. She couldn't write Ken. Ken was engaged to be married. To Peggy Gwin. He'd take the letter to Peggy. Tell her how he couldn't marry her, because he'd have to do his decent thing and come back and remarry Lily Lou Lansing, because she was going to have a baby.....

She put her hands over her eyes to shut out the hateful world. The sigh of Peggy's piquant face..... and her fluff of gilt hair. "Peggy dear, sorry.....Peggy being, sorry.....Peggy giving up Ken, and symbolizing with him because he'd have to go back to Lily Lou.

She knelt perfectly still, trying to think. Trying to think of some way out. Or something to do.

The watch on her wrist ticked on and on. It sounded like the beating of a heart. Ken's heart. Ken's heart broken, but it kept on beating. Her life, with Ken was broken, but Ken's baby.....

She broke into loud, hiccoughing, hysterical sobs.

Mrs. Manchester called to her. Banged the door knob.

Lily Lou listened. Leaned rigidly against the bed, pretending not to hear.

"And I hope you won't feel there's anything personal about it." Wanda Pillsbury finished, brushing the frowsy hair up from the nape of her neck, and looking absent minded, as she always did when she asked something unreasonable of Lily Lou.

Lily Lou nodded understandingly. "No, I don't blame you, Miss Pillsbury. You're right—you've got to think of your business—"

"Exactly. I've simply got to have somebody I can depend on. It's tedious read hard work, and I've got to have somebody that can stand it. It's do anything for you, but I can't keep you when it interferes with bread and butter. I can't send classes home, or let them go home and tell their families that Wanda Pillsbury uses phonograph records in her class. It won't do.

"So when Walt Dingle happened along yesterday after you passed out, and wanted the job back, why I thought it was a plain act of Providence. Besides, Walt needs the dough. So I said ouch, and I knew you'd understand, and know it was not anything personal, Lansing. It's just that I thought right along you're too much of an artist for this job anyway——"

Lily Lou suppressed a smile. She'd heard that before. People turn you down and you are "too good" just the way they do when it's a real good scrub. What was the use of talking? Wanda had her old accompanist back—the one she had fought with and put off for years. And that was that.

INJURED AT CROSSING

Napanee, Jul 4—Driving his car into one of the rear coaches of C.P.R. passenger train No. 16 at the Selby Road level crossing about 2.30 Sunday morning, James Naphin, 37 Napanee, received several facial injuries and was badly shaken up and his automobile roadster wrecked. The passenger train, eastbound, was about to pull out when the accident happened, and the car with its injured driver was dragged along about 75 feet before the brakeman had the train stopped. Naphin was found in a dazed condition and Dr. Cameron Wilson, C.N.R. surgeon, was called. He removed him to his office, where 12 stitches were required to close wounds on the forehead.

JULY 4 - ME AND MRS. - JOE TURNS TO PAGE 14 ON A BREEZY DAY

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 65

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Morison Bayne's thoughts were certainly upsetting him. This lovely creature riding by his side—he had been cowering and swinging through trees and actually conversing with grotesque baboons! Beautiful she was and very desirable; yet after all what did he really know of her? Before he realized it he had blurted out: "I saw you in the trees with the baboons!" "Yes?" laughed Meriem, "the baboons are among my very best friends."

And then, because she saw the horror that the man felt at her answer reflected in his face, Meriem rather enjoyed shocking him further. "Yes," she said, "I lived among the great apes for many years. I dwelt among the tree branches and hunted the lesser beasts. Korak brought me fruits and flesh. He fought for me and was kind to me." There was a wistful note in her voice. She had not thought of Korak a great deal of late.

For a time the two rode on through the deep night, both silently absorbed in their own reflections. The girl was thinking of a god-like figure in a leopard skin who came nimbly through the trees. Behind him, shaggy and powerful, swung a huge anthropoid ape, while she, Meriem, laughing and shouting her welcome, swung from a swaying limb before her ayran lover. Ah, the happiness of those sunny days! The freedom! And, best of all, Korak!

The man's thoughts were rather jumbly. He suddenly realized he had come mightily close to falling hopelessly in love with this girl who had voluntarily told him just now her weird story. And he had been about to offer her his honorable name! A girl who by her own admission had lived among the apes! The Hon. Morison Bayne trembled at the narrowness of his escape. Yes, he loved her. Perhaps, though, he would not have to propose.

Previews and Reviews of Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

At The Belle

"THE DOOMED BATTALION
SOON AT THE BELLE

You will be thrilled by "The Doomed Battalion". This reviewer was.

He was thrilled and deeply moved. Whatever you have been led to expect of this different war drama you will not be disappointed. It lives up to every advance promise, as the large audience who witnessed its opening showing at the Belle on Saturday will testify. Not since "All Quiet on the Western Front" has Belleville seen a picture like this.

Its appeal is genuine and convincing, because it is based not upon fabricated situations, but upon authentic, universal emotions rooted deeply in human experience. The majestic setting of the Austrian Tyrol, where the story is laid contributes to the feeling that this motion picture is not merely a shallow of fite transferred to the silver screen.

Only such a cast and direction as "The Doomed Battalion" boasts could so effectively present the gripping story it tells. Tala Birell, a newcomer to the American screen, but well known to continental audiences, does her part with flying honours, as the heroic wife of the Austrian officer portrayed by Lya Franker. Franker himself and Victor Varconi gives impressive performances. Harry Armetta, as the orderly, provides comedy relief to the fullest of his talents. An excellent supporting cast rounds out the picture.

"The Doomed Battalion" tells the story of a friendship between Lya Franker and Victor Varconi strengthened by perilous Alpine climbs together. Over their friendship the dark clouds of war cast its shadow, and the friends are called to the colors of their nations. Fortunes or war place them in struggle positions opposite each other. It is here that Varconi is called upon to choose between duty and country and the friendship when he is ordered to annihilate Franker's company by a diabolical tunnel beneath its position. A series of dramatic incidents at this point build up to a climax packed with suspense.

Photographically, the picture is in a class by itself. The beauty of the mountains lends itself admirably to picturization, and the destruction of the fortified peak "Ortler" is something to remember for a long time.

"Yes!" emphatically, for "The Doomed Battalion". It's a screen thriller.

A race track screen play which actually races through an absorbing story with all of the excitement, betting and excellent casting is "Fast Company" which is the latest feature offering on the same program.

A clever cartoon and reversel were exhibited during the evening.

The entire program will be repeated again tonight for the last time.

At The Capitol

"STRANGERS OF THE EVENING" WITH RALPH
PITTS AND STAR CAST

A cast of compelling screen personalities, coupled with an unusual story, emanating from the pen of the increasingly popular Tiffany Thayer, makes "Strangers of the Evening", which opened at the Capitol Theatre today, one of the outstanding murder mysteries of the year.

Adapted from the novel, "The Illustrious Corpse", the picture has retained all of the merit of the book with the addition of several comedy situations written by the screen writers, Stuart Anthony and Warren B. Duff.

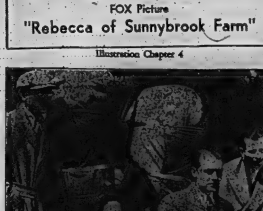
Zasu Pitts in her never failing, mournful comedy; Lucien Littlefield as the happy gentleman who has lost his memory and with it his name; Harold Waldridge as the Scotland Yard detective assistant; and Eugene Pallette and Francis Sayles, the two bewildered detectives, furnish a riot of comedy that will keep the audience from any chance of becoming morbid.

The remainder of the cast shows no weakness, either, and includes Miriam Seegar and Theodor von Eltz as the romantic leads with Tully Marshall, Warner Richmond, Matthew Hardiman, Alan Roscoe, William Scott, Charles Williams and James Burtis. The direction of H. Bruce Humberstone is also sincere and sympathetic.

The screen producers have realized Miss Pitts' ability but have had a fear of giving her an emotional part because they believed the public would not accept her in anything but her comedy characterizations.

Some years ago Erich von Stroheim convinced that public they was one of the greatest dramatic actresses on the screen, cast her as the wife in "The Wedding March", his first great picture for Paramount. In this she was universally applauded, and von Stroheim, too, for his courage in giving her the part.

No further opportunity was given her, however, until Carl Leemmle, Jr., casting for "All Quiet on the Western Front", decided to give her the role of the dancing girl. The picture was completed the entire month required, Miss Pitts at last was going to achieve success in an emotional role, but, when the picture was given a public preview, the the preview audience did not give her a chance to stay in it, they laughed at the wrong time, So the picture went back to the cutting and retakes were made with Beryl Mercer in Miss Pitts' original role.



Since this tragic occurrence no producer has had the courage to risk a repetition.

Chapter IV

Location In Santa Cruz

SANTELL'S "location special" of fifteen cars carrying players and crew of the "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" company arrived at Santa Cruz, California, 7:30 Friday morning, April 15th.

Although the players were allowed to go to the hotel, Santell, with Cameraman MacWilliams and his assistants, departed immediately in a car, to inspect the locations previously selected. It was their job to place the FOX car on each picturesque road, and versions, dolly and camera tracks and equipment facilities, to guarantee against delay when the company arrived at each respective location to film the action.

The Santell-MacWilliams method in this example of the thoroughness with which details are planned in advance and economy preceding the concentrated, rapid-fire action encountered when shooting on limited schedule.

Before the company was scheduled after the train journey, Marian Nixon, on the threshold of her first scene as Rebecca, most important role of her career, was eager to be out in the sunshine and the mountain air of Northern California. Ralph Bellamy had arrived the day before in his car. Together, they went for a sight-seeing trip to the famous grove of Big Trees, near Santa Cruz.

After returning three hours later, Marian sat down to dinner with an interviewer, a charming young girl of about own age, from the local paper. When her guest had departed, Miss Nixon had the rest of the afternoon to herself. No work was scheduled for that day by director Santell. Left to their own devices, the players strolled the shady lanes, read, or if they happened to be cast in the opening sequences, studied lines. It was the quiet before action. That evening they dined together at the hotel. The rousing hour came early, for the call to face the camera was scheduled for dawn.

Sunrise in the Santa Cruz Mountains! The air is clean and clear and is wafted through giant woods, which scent it. Strong contrasts formed by golden sunshine pouring through tall trees and leafy branches, falling on a countryside of every shade of green, make for ideal photographic compositions.

Director MacWilliams, aware of these advantages and pleased by them, framed the opening shot of Rebecca with especial care. Next to the director, the cameraman occupies the most important and responsible position on a production staff, especially when the company is on location. Far from the studio, it is impossible to screen and criticize each day's shooting. A cameraman's mistake resulting in a bit of blurred film may result in a costly trip back to the location and the expense of retaking the scene, not to speak of the price of the film itself, no small item. And cameramen like the Chinese James Wong Howe, Lee Garmes, Schneider-man and MacWilliams, all with Fox, are ranked among Hollywood's elect.

Under the eye of the omnipresent Santell, MacWilliams placed the camera on a solid, tumble-down rail fence would outline the foreground of the composition and took particular pains in selecting the proper filter for the lens that he might capture on film the hazy glow of early-morning light that fell on the picturesque old homestead chosen to represent Sunnybrook Farm.

This picture forms the opening scene in Rebecca, whence the camera advances to one the action. MacWilliams' memory less picked up the back doorway of Sunnybrook Farm, observed its life, then started on a leisurely, travelling sweep that is a few seconds acquaint the beholder with the activities of Sunnybrook, the soul of Rebecca's mother, and of her brothers and sisters in trying a living from the soil.

All of this, and more is comprehended in the single, sweeping, travel shot with which Santell and his staff set the discovery of his heroine, Marian Nixon, absorbed in the work of pushing hay from a great load of the sloppy, golden harvest.

The early morning scene which MacWilliams is translating into camera terms with his camera has been described previously in the Fox Film Script as Marian in their script as they look at the scene and see how all this dramatic action is outlined in print and how the dialogue takes form as the players read it. Later in Rebecca comes into the picture in the form of her preliminary scenes are described.

Then:

DISSOLVE INTO SCENE 14

EXT. RAILROAD CROSSING

All this dialogue, all the sounds of farm life, were caught by the microphone, which is a delicate, sensitive instrument looks like a huge dentist's drill on a long stand with a boom. As the players, just above camera range, on a movable arm, boom is equipped with a wheel base, upon which it can revolve in a circle and the arm of the boom can be extended and withdrawn at will to keep the microphone at the sections composing it are hollow and sound-proof.

The recording of sound is a delicate process. The sound engineer has one of the most responsible jobs on the staff. He operates what is called a mullioweer recording, it establishes the proper level and gradation of every voice and sound that goes through the sensitive machine. He must be especially careful to see that the volume of each sound corresponds to the distance from the microphone at which it is made.

Players must enunciate their lines very exactly because so many words have similar sounds and very slight mistake in sudden sharp noise, such as a cough or a bark must be guarded against or it will break a light valve on the recording apparatus and ruin the scene. Reverse.

For ordinary conversation a voice having 100 sound vibrations make a satisfactory tone. For the purposes of talking pictures this is insufficient. The ideal movie voice must have from 700 to 750 vibrations. The machinery will not record it agreeably.

Berlin's Consent Seen Though Protest is Made Against Three of Points

Final Liability Cut to Billion Dollars Against 33 Billions

WAIT U. S. ACTION

One Third of German Payment to go for Loan to Europe

BY GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Lausanne, Switzerland, July 4—The five chief creditor powers at the Lausanne reparations conference finally agreed on a formula for solving the great reparations tangle, and submitted it to Germany Sunday.

The Germans pointed out three aspects of the plan to which they objected, but it is nevertheless predicted Sunday night the Germans would accept the plan with these reservations.

End of Annuities

German acceptance of the final draft of the scheme would mean the end of reparations annuities. Germany's "final liability" in lieu of reparations annuities, would be fixed at from $730,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 the maximum representing a reduction of about 96 per cent. in the reparations Germany owes under the Young plan.

Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan and Belgium late Sunday night reached agreement on the form of a letter to be delivered to Germany, and the Germans after about hours of deliberation selected these points to which they object:

Three Objections

First, Germany believes the "final liability" figure of four billion gold marks—$1,000,000,000—is too high.

Second, Germany thinks there should be further clarification of the provision in respect to the European creditor powers' war debts to the United States.

Third, Germany does not like the conditions under which the proposed loan for reconstruction of Europe would be issued.

(Under the plan, one-third of the German ultimate liability would go towards this loan.)

At any rate the agreement as now drafted under lengthy discussions might be taken as allowing Chancellor Franz von Papen of Germany to claim that reparations are ended, which is the same thing Premier Edouard Herriot could hold that France was still safeguarded against possible failure to secure revision of debts to the United States.

It was understood the German bond issue would have no value for three years, after which the Bank for International Settlements would decide when it could be capitalized. The amount the creditor nations would pay into the proposed cashbox for the relief of distressed nations and the size of the German bond would not be decided until the United States acted on the proposed negotiations for debt revision.

Gentleman's Agreement

France's much desired safeguard clause which would make the cancellation of reparations conditional upon United States revision of debts, was removed on German objections to the effect that the plan in favor of something like a "gentleman's agreement" which it was understood, would delay the effectiveness of the plan until the U. S. had made formal decision. It would make reparations settlement dependent on Washington without specific statement to that effect.

With a definite plan under discussion and Germany pinned down to definite clauses earnest bargaining began. The British headquarters were the site this afternoon, where meetings will be held today, with the creditor powers the Chancellor's declaration that German wants the inclusion of some provision for annulling part eight of the Versailles Treaty, which contains the clause pertaining to German war guilt.

Lausanne, July 4—A final solution of the reparations tangle was delayed Sunday when Germany objected to three points in the settlement proposed by Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium and Japan. The Germans, after a day of conferences, protested:

(1) The total of 4,300,000,000 marks (about $1,000,000,000) which it was proposed the Reich should pay into a European reconstruction fund in lieu of reparations.

(2) The clause in the so-called "safeguarding clause," which would benefit Germany to pay more of Europe's war debts to the United States are not readjusted.

(3) German objection to the safeguarding clause was brought about by the method proposed by the creditor powers. While they are supposed to have reached a "gentlemen's agreement" not to make a reparations solution conditional on reduction of debts owed America, they did not propose that the reparations settlement must be ratified by all powers concerned.

This would permit France or any other nation to disrupt the settlement by failing to ratify it, in event the United States did not reduce debts. Germany insisted that the powers should agree on the plan at Lausanne, leaving only the Reichstag to ratify the terms. A compromise is expected later this week.

(4) The conditions under which the payment to the reconstruction fund would be due on the revised years' moratorium. Germany insisted on a five years' moratorium, it was understood.

The steering committee of the reparations conference received the German position at 6 p.m. and resumed negotiations to decide the next step.

War, no matter what the agreements made, seems to be kept within "gentlemanly" grounds.

Expresses Confidence in British Bond Holders

London, July 3—(CP Cable)—Confident the holders of the British War Loan bonds will respond to the government's appeal to convert them to lower interest rates (with the details of which not particular), which the British people have always shown a great national effort is required," was expressed by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald in the House of Commons tonight at the opening of the debate on the government's measure, read by Stanley Baldwin, acting Prime Minister.

Success of the gigantic conversion scheme, announced in the House of Commons Thursday as a means of effecting a net saving of about £200,000,000 through reduction of interest from five to three and a half per cent., would mean a large reduction in the burden of the national debt and a striking enhancement of British credit, declared the Prime Minister.

Water Pumpage Decreased Million Gallons Over Same Date Last Year

Some interesting figures were given to the Ontario Intelligencer today by Manager R. T. Austin of the Waterworks Department, respecting the difference in temperature of today and that of a year ago. On July 4, 1931, the thermometer mounted to 96 degrees in the shade with the low at 70. While the Dominion Day registration on Friday was 70 high and 56 low. On July 2, 1931, the highest temperature on record in this city was reached, when the mercury rose to 98 while Saturday the mercury could only climb to 66 at noon with the low at 57.

Asked by the reporter what difference the temperature would make the pumpage at the Filtration Plant, Mr. Austin stated that on July 1, 1931, there was pumped 1,- 180,000 gallons of water, while on Friday last there was only 1,140,000 gallons pumped, a decrease of over a million gallons.

JOHN GARNER RUNNING MATE FOR ROOSEVELT

President Candidate Gives Address Before Convention in Chicago

UPHOLDS REPEAL

Says U.S. Has Been Isolated by Barbed-Wire Entanglements

Chicago, July 4.—A rugged, two-fisted Texan — speaker John Nance Garner — was selected by the United States Democratic Convention as the running mate to Franklin D. Roosevelt.

His overwhelming choice placed a strong national Democratic ticket before the people of the United States.

A popular candidate for the Presidency himself, it was he who made it possible for the New York Governor to receive the nomination on the fourth ballot by releasing the ninety votes pledged to him by Texas and California.

Governor Roosevelt, who flew here from Albany Saturday, in his speech accepting the nomination, referred to the barriers misgovernment erected around the borders of the U. S. by the tariff of the Republican administration.

On tariffs he said: "Out of all the tons of printed matter sent out all the hours of oratory, the recriminations, the defenses, the happy-thought plans in Washington and in every State, there emerges one great simple crystal-pure fact. That during the past ten years a nation of 120,000,000 has been led by Republican leaders to erect an impregnable barbed-wire entanglement around its borders through the instrumentality of tariffs, which have isolated us from all the other human beings in all the rest of the round world. I accept, that admirable tariff statement in the platform of this convention. It would protect American business and American Labor. By our own acts of the past, we have invited and received the retaliation of other nations. I propose an initiative to them to forget the past, to sit at the table with us for the restoration of the trade of the world."

BACK TO THE OVERALLS

Hon. Peter Heenan has served his country well. In high public positions he earned the respect of political friend and opponent. As Minister of Labor in the King Administration he was a success, and enjoyed the confidence of the workers. His genius for settling disputes brought him the sobriquet, "Peter the Peacemaker". But nothing has become Mr. Heenan more than his resolve to don the overalls again and take charge of a railway locomotive.

What have you learned today in the New University?

Talk with almost any woman and you will find her amazingly informed on vitamins, balanced diets, refrigeration, household sanitation, labor saving, family hygiene, table and home decoration. Watch her during her day and you will find her employing this new knowledge for the improvement of living.

Talk with almost any man and you'll find him technically informed about motor-cars and adding machines, aeroplanes and radios, telephones and oil-burners — materials, designs, uses, processes in a dozen fields.

What has happened? It seems that people know more than they used to and that they use their new-found knowledge to their comfort and happiness. Perhaps this is the explanation: There is today a New University — the University of Advertising. Its doors never close, it is open to all and the fees of admission are the daily price of a newspaper. The subjects taught are ways to make life better and more enjoyable. Eminent authorities in the various fields work with skilled writers and illustrators to prepare the daily "lessons" — the advertisements. They are admirably printed and illustrated. They are studied and applied, as needed, by the youngsters and grown-ups of all ages.

What have you learned today in the New University? Study the advertisements. Useful knowledge is waiting there for you.

10 YR. OLD RAILWAY BOARD ORDER REVIEWED

Right Angle Approach to Gibson Crossing Would be New Hazard, Board Told

Old Order to Replace Skew Crossing Has Never Been Carried Out, Board Asks for Explanation of Parties

RAILWAY AND HIGHWAY DEPT. OPPOSE

After Hearing Evidence of Representatives Board Visits Scene.—Finding on 1922 Order is to be Given by Commission After Deliberation

Representatives of the Ontario Highways Department and the Canadian Pacific Railway told the Dominion Board of Railway Commissioners meeting at the city hall, Belleville, Tuesday, July 5th at ten a.m., why the approach to the Gibson Crossing of the C.P.R. had not been changed to satisfy an order of the board issued April 11th., 1922, ordering a right angle crossing of the highway at this point. The opposition was on the ground that the addition of highway curves necessary for a right angle crossing was not practicable.

Members of the board attending were Dr. S. J. McLean, assistant Chief Chairman of the commission; J. A. Stoneman, commissioner and H. Richardson, registrar. For the Canadian Pacific Railway appeared George D. Spence, K.C., and for the Department of Highways of Ontario, Arthur Smith, highway engineer. At Gibson's Crossing which the board later inspected Warden Robert M. Mitchell and Deputy Reeve Wesley Gray of the township of Thurlow, and J. F. Hill, M.P., were in waiting.

OPPOSE ORDER

After brief statement by the C.P.R. and highway representatives which opposed the order of 1922 which would have placed a right angle turn instead of the present straight crossing, the commissioners went to the crossing and after inspection left the city. After deliberation the order dealing with the case will be issued in due time.

Increase in Traffic

Traffic over the Gibson Crossing in 24 hours over a period of one week from July 8 to 14, in the year 1931 averaged 3,700 as against a total of 858 when the order was issued ten years ago, said the representative of the Highways Department, who referred to the elimination of danger by means as in the case of the Moira River bridge, tracks at Shannonville and in the case of the highway near Trenton.

Fuel Driver

The assistant chief chairman, Dr. McLean asked the right angle approach to the crossing would have the effect of slowing up traffic to which Mr. Smith replied that there was always the fuel driver to be taken care of, who would not stop. "By the time he would get to the

New Policy Adopted to Aid Small Purchasers Premier States

TORONTO, July 5—Ontario is in the domestic market today for a loan of $20,000,000 it was announced officially by the Prime Minister and the Provincial Treasurer last night. The public is being offered a $20,000,000 issue of 14-year 5 1-2 per cent. debentures selling at 97 and accrued interest to yield 5.81 per cent.

In effect an appeal is being made and an opportunity offered for a small investor of Ontario, who in the last loan found the issue not desirable a security snapped up so fast and in such denominations that he had little chance to get his hands upon it. The appeal, virtually, is that the small purchaser wants to see money loosened up at a cheaper rate so that new business rate on new life with easier money, it should be prepared to subscribe the cheaper money by lending power to the wealthiest province in Canada, whose security is unimpeachable.

The opportunity offered to the small investor is found in the convenient issue of bonds as low as a hundred dollars at just as good a rate as is given to the man who has the resources to buy in much greater amounts.

The bonds are in denominations of $100, $500 and $1,000, and the issue is being offered direct by the province

Flooded Farmers Drive Cattle, Sheep Goats and Horses for Safety to Hills

San Antonio, Texas., July 5.—(A.P.)—Farmers living in the Nueces river valleys southwest Texas turned their backs upon corn and cotton yesterday and headed their livestock into the hills to await receding of flood waters which have claimed nine lives.

Crops in thousands of acres of low bottom lands, they agreed were doomed by the rush of water churning down them from the upper reaches of the Guadalupe, Frio and Nueces Rivers.

Their hope was to save their families, their household goods and goats, sheep, cattle and horses.

Highways, power and communication lines have been damaged by the floods which followed record-breaking rains in the hills west of San Antonio.

Railroads suffered. The Missouri Pacific lacked 250 feet of track between this city and Laredo, on the border.

Owing to the congestion in traffic, which occurs on McAnnany and Market Streets, especially on market days, which are held on Wednesdays and Saturdays, the council decided to have these streets "one way streets" during these days. All traffic will be required to travel to Pinnacle Street. The signs designating these streets as "one way streets" will shortly be put in place by the city engineer. Due to the dangerous condition of the chimney at the City Hall and the two fire halls in the city it was recommended that they be cleaned at once. Farmers Promise Produce to Take Place Cash for Farm Help

LONDON, Ont., July 4.—Vegetables are to replace cash. District farmers pay their wage bill, says Hardy Wray, head of the Government employment service here. He added that many farmers who are unable to pay wages in cash to men sent them by the city relief department have agreed under a contract to turn produce over to the city relief next September. The amount of potatoes, carrots, onions and cabbages turned over to the city will depend on September market prices and on the amount of the monthly wages.

"A number of these contracts have been signed," Hardy Wray said. Farm help in this district is being paid from $10 to $15 monthly."

Men working under the new plan are married and their families are being kept by the city.

Many Factors Attributable For Increase in Size

TORONTO, July 5.—(By the Canadian Press)—Women's feet, according to men, who all like them, become larger. Most of the increase in size is attributed to the modern woman's love of athletics and out-of-doors life.

Size four, these men say, is still the most popular, but it is amazing the number of woman who wear sixes. Sevens and eights are by no means the unheard of thing they were a few years ago, the athletic figure—and the frequent use of more room in the shoe heels, which the sports field demands, women's feet have lengthened.

JULY 4 TAKES HEAVY TOLL

Six Youths Blown to Pieces While Making Bombs in Montana

New York, July 5—Six youths blown to bits in Montana—ten men shot to death—8 dozen persons drowned in Texas floods.

These were the major tragedies of the country's July 4 celebration today, as automobile, fireworks and swimming deaths the country over brought the fatality total close to 200 last night.

Most spectacular of the tragedies was in Butte, Mont., where six copper miners' sons carried a case of dynamite into the Meaderville Baseball Park at Dalton Gulch and set off Fourth. Excitedly they broke into the box to make bombs. They started to wrap the dynamite sticks in newspapers. Then they lighted caps and fuses. One of them fumbled.

A terrific blast woke the city. Bodies of the youths were horribly mangled. Arms and legs were scattered through the air as far as 400 feet.

The feuds which rage intermittently in the Kentucky mountains and coal fields accounted for ten deaths. The "toughest" gunman in the bloody history, Constable Bill Randolph himself, was killed from ambush by a gunman avenging of his latest shooting escapade.

He had killed seven men in his career. The other deaths resulted from gang fights over factional, love affairs and illicit stills.

Constable Runs Amuck

Constable Sam Simmons of College Grove, Tenn., became temporarily insane, killed his cousin, shot down his niece before her mother's eyes. Then Sam took a bullet through his own brain.

In California there were five slayings and fifteen suicides in addition to drownings and automobile accidents.

Thirteen were drowned in Texas. Ten died in the flash floods in San Antonio. Record-breaking rains in the hills caused the torrents in rivers and streams billowing over fields, through villages and across highways. Most of the towns affected were soon isolated. The Red Cross rushed food and tents into the area. Damage was estimated at more than $1,000,000.

"NO PROGRESS" SAYS PREMIER

MacDonald's Conference With Von Papen Unfruitful

Lausanne, July 5 (CP).— An hour's conference—between Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and Chancellor Franz von Papen of Germany—failed to compromise settlement on reparations no nearer this afternoon.

The chancellor shook his head as he left the British Prime Minister's headquarters. "We will try again," he said. "We have made no progress."

Mr. MacDonald was endeavouring to get the German chancellor's agreement to the draft settlement, which has been reached by all the creditor powers.

Italy's Proposal

Lausanne, July 5 (CP). Cable)— Italy's unheralded proposal today for cancellation of all reparations, war debts, that is, as between the countries of Europe and including Great Britain, added confusion to the already complicated situation at the International Reparations Conference.

It came just when agreement at last was in sight on the formula for settlement of German reparations and debts in favor of a German bond issue to be floated by a $1,000,000,000 fund for reconstruction of Europe, which Premier Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain, secured agreement of all the chief creditor powers to do, as a draft representing settlement and was meeting Chancellor Franz von Papen of Germany this afternoon in an endeavour to finish the work.

BERRIES THREE FOR QUARTER

More Plentiful Than Any Time This Year on Market

A slight decline in the price of strawberries was noticed at Belleville's mid week market held on Tuesday morning. Strawberries sold at 5c a box or three boxes for 25c. There was a little more berry for fall selling at 10c a small box or 20c a small basket. The cherries were fine looking specimens and were soon purchased by the early buyers. One basket of strawberries sold his way for four boxes for 25c. Red gooseberries brought 10c a box.

New potatoes, slightly larger in size, than last week realized here-to-fore sold at the berry box. Quantities of freshly shelled, brought 30c and 15c a quart. New potatoes sold for a bunch as did new beets and lettuce. This year's cauliflowers were offered to the citizens at two for 15c, they being rather small in size.

The price of eggs remained stationary, however when they sold at a dozen. Other lines of green vegetables were quite in evidence and sold for the prices which have been in vogue all season. The mid week market was well patronized by residents of the city and district.

NOT MUCH CHANGE IN TEMPERATURE

Although the sun shone brightly on Tuesday there was no great variation in the past forty-eight hours' temperature registered. Monday saw the mercury register 76 high and 54 low, while Tuesday's temperatures saw the mercury fall to 48 and it had risen until it reached 71 at 1 p.m. The rainfall registered on Monday was .32 inches.

WELCOME SIGN MISSILE'S TARGET

Belleville's "Welcome" sign placed on No. 2 highway at the western limits of the city as a gesture of hospitality towards transient visitors who make this city one of their stopping places for short periods, has lately become a target for missiles of all sorts thrown by boys and those who pass the spot and is now badly in need of repair. The sting face of the sign has been battered almost beyond recognition. Considerable trouble with all road signs in the city has been experienced by the Chamber of Commerce through whose efforts the signs have been erected. On the top of West Bridge street hill where a large number of signs have been placed for the guidance of tourists, the practice of removing the posts and turning them to show false directions is particularly acute. "This is one of the most essential spots in the city," declared Mr. Herity, secretary of the local Chamber of Commerce, and added that molestation of signs was something which would not be tolerated. Police have been advised and will deal summarily with the offenders.

FISH CULTURIST TO BE PRESENT

Mr. H. H. MacKay, chief biologist and director of the Fish Culture branch of the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries, will be in Belleville on Thursday, July 7. During the evening he will hold a meeting in the city hall for the purpose of considering new methods for the preservation of game fish in the Bay of Quinte. A large attendance of local anglers and others interested in the conservation of game fish locally is expected to be present and air their opinions.

PRELIMINARY WORK ON ROAD STARTED

Active men and busy teams equipped with all necessary mechanical equipment are this week engaged in preliminary work for the construction of the section of Madoc-Foxboro highway recently authorized by the Hastings County Council. Just north of Foxboro a start has been made on the widening of the road and the installation of tile for drainage purposes across the highway. Local labor recruited from nearby sections of that vicinity is well represented, with the added possibility of more being hired when actual construction commences.

PASSES IN MUSIC WITH HONORS

Miss Hilen Hinds of Toronto, pupil of Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, is to be congratulated on passing the intermediate singing examinations with honours at the Toronto Conservatory of Music. Miss Hinds has been engaged as soloist in the Victoria Presbyterian Church, Toronto. Miss Hinds is a niece of Mrs. F. M. Jury of this city.

EVERYONE HAD A HAND IN LANDING

Apparently more than one angler had a hand in landing the fine specimen of "lunge" taken from the Trent River by Capt. O. E. Browne during the week end. It is understood "Cap" was trolling with a rubber Daroe and when the strike came, he thought the Daroe had caught on bottom. Mr. Daroe, immediately pulled in his line, stopped the boat and then rowed it to deeper water of the channel at the same time seeking aid from Col. Ketcheson and Mark Calder, who were in another boat nearby as Mr. Daroe believed Browne had a real one. After considerable playing with the fish the two boats converged and Mr. Calder threw the gaff into the "muzzle" and in this way he was taken into the boat. And as he is dropped in the boat one flip threw the spoon from his mouth and the policy were glad the "muskie" did not see fit to perform the same operation in the water. Anglers state the Trent is a good fishing ground at present with the fish in a hearty state and quite fleshy.

SIX CHICKENS STOLEN IN CITY

Mr. William Birdie, 59 Church street, reported to the local police Monday night, that six fine specimens of Brown Buff chickens had been stolen from his chicken coop, during the evening. Mr. Birdie informed the police that he had left home at 4 p.m. on Monday afternoon and the birds were safe. Upon returning at 11 p.m. that night six of his finest Brown Buffs were missing. The theft or theft has been broken into and the birds had been taken during his absence. It is thought. Sergeant Detective Truaisch is investigating the case.

JUDGE J. E. MADDEN RESERVES JUDGMENT

At a special sitting of the County Court Judge Madden of Napanee reserved judgment after evidence had been adduced on Monday afternoon. The action was by F. M. Moffatt, trustee in bankruptcy of the estate of Hugh R. MacDonald against his father Hubert MacDonald, of Bloomfield, to set aside an assignment of promissory notes of the face value of $3,866.46 for a present advance of $1,540.00 on the grounds that the assignment was fraudulent preference and invalid as against the trustee. Mr. Charles A. Payne, K.C. appeared for the plaintiff, while F. S. Herrington K.C. of Napanee, conducted the defense. Counsel addressed the court at the hearing and as considerable law is involved, Judge Madden reserved judgment.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Easton are Leaving For Minden

Members of Benjamin L.O.L. No. 276 met at the home of Mr. R. L. Easton, Ann street, to spend a quiet hour with them on the eve of their departure for Minden where Mr. Easton is employed in the Moira Power Office of the Canadian National Railways. He served in that capacity for a number of years from Belleville, but some months ago transferred to Minden.

"Len" as he was called was a faithful and active member of L.O.L. No. 276; The Royal Scarlet Chapter; and Royal Black Preceptory No. 535 ranking as Past Master in the Orange Order and at the time of his transfer from here was holding the office of Deputy Preceptor of Bellville Preceptory.

He has made a host of friends here and his presence will be greatly missed by those associated with him. Mrs. Easton will also be greatly missed as a faithful member of Lydia Lodge No. 350 L.O.B.A.

Before leaving Mr. C. W. Reid, Worshipful Master read the following address after which Mr. D. Anslette Deputy Master, presented Wor. Bro. Easton with a Royal Arch ring.

"Wor. Bro. Easton!—

"We, the officers and members of Benjamin L.O.L. No. 276 regret very much indeed that you have had to go to other fields of labor and that you have found it necessary for you and your family to move from our midst.

You have been a very enthusiastic worker in our fraternal order having attained the rank of Past Master, you have also been active in our Royal Scarlet Chapter and Royal Black Preceptory.

We feel that we could not let you go without showing our appreciation of your co-operation with us; therefore we ask you to accept this gift as a slight token of the esteem in which you are held amongst us.

We also wish you and your family happiness in your new home and every success to you in your new sphere, and trust that in the near future you will be called back to your old position in Belleville and be able to mingle with us again.

Yours fraternally.

Signed on behalf of Benjamin L.O.L. No. 276—Chas. H. Reid, Everett Bell, J. F. Paul, Wm. Kennedy, C. Johnson, D. Ferguson, D. S. Anslette, D. M. Farrell, G. A. Easton.

Mr. Easton replied thanking them for the gift and expressing his appreciation of the same. After which the members departed wishing him and his family prosperity in their new home.

CITY JOTTINGS

A cargo of twelve hundred tons of coal brought into port at the government dock by the steamer Coalhaven, Canada Steamship Lines, is being unloaded this week for the Consolidated Distilleries, Corbyville.

Bass season which opened July 1st so far has shown no decided large catches in this district. The rainy situation is felt in northern waters where reports of small catches of trout and other fish indicate that the fish are not biting freely at this period.

A milk thief has again been active in the vicinity of Dundas St. East. Several bottles have been taken since the beginning of the week from a number of homes on and adjoining thoroughfare.

A letter signed by hundreds of dealers throughout the province who are engaged in selling British made motor cycles, urging the elimination of duty, but the retention of the 33⅓ per cent. is being sent the Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce at the Imperial Conference. Elimination of the tax is expected to benefit all dealers and customers. One local dealer has forwarded his signature to the petition.

Coincident with reports of broken glass being 'rund on the streets and in the water of nearby bathing spots comes word from motorists that glass bottles are frequently broken on the highways in and about the city. Several broken bottles were observed on No. 2 highway some distance east of the city Monday evening.

A band of gypsies dressed in lurid clothing and driving large cars, passed through the city last evening, but left early. Following the motor caravan came a large truck hauling a larger trailer on which was built a regular house on wheels.

OCCUPANTS ESCAPE WHEN COTTAGE BURNS

Gananoque, Ont., July 5 (CP) — Fire early today completely destroyed the summer cottage and contents of Albert Engles of New York City, situated on the north side of Belfer Island, just east of Beau Rivage Island, two miles west of here. Damage is estimated at between $3,000 and $4,000. It is partly covered by insurance.

Fire started in the lower part of the building trapping Engles and E. H. Warnecke, of Brooklyn, N.Y., who were upstairs. They managed to escape by crawling along a window sill, from which they reached a tree and were then able to let themselves to the ground.

The building originally was built for the late William Byers, first mayor of Gananoque and has been owned by Mr. Engles since 1916.

GOVERNMENT EMPOWERED

government's proposal to recover the land annuities from the Irish Free State by imposing new duties on imports.

The House voted 321 to 43 against a Labor opposition amendment to the government's measure which would have had the effect of delaying imposition of the tariffs until a decision had been rendered on the annuities by an arbitration tribunal and the Free State had thereafter defaulted the payments. Earlier House also rejected by 346 to 44 a Labor amendment to exclude products from the duties, after J. H. Thomas, Dominions' Secretary, said such an amendment would nullify the government's plan.

Developments crowded thickly in a long day of the House of Commons and at the end these facts had emerged:

The first communication from the Free State rejects the British offer of arbitration by an Empire tribunal; instead insisting on an international tribunal.

Going Ahead With Measure

The British Government is going ahead therefore with the measure, introduced in the House by J. H. Thomas, Dominions' Secretary, which does not itself impose tariffs but empowers the government to impose duties up to 10 per cent. ad valorem as it deems advisable.

The Free State government while defaulting the semi-yearly payment of £1,500,000 in land annuities to the national treasury commissioners of Great Britain last week, is, however, paying the annuities into a "separate fund" pending arbitration.

PROVINCE TO SELL

vincial treasury, a departure from the usual course of selling them through the banks and bond houses.

The machinery is the same as in the case of the Dominion Government's National Service Loan of last Fall, an advisory committee of three, one from the Bank of Montreal, one from the Bank of Commerce and the third from one of the larger bond houses. Is assisting the Provincial Treasurer, W. H. A. Dunlop.

Instead of acting as selling agents for the Government at the branches of chartered banks the bond dealers and stock exchange members are free to act as agents for the purchasers—that is to say, that any person desiring to buy the bonds, may place his order with a bank or broker; the broker may purchase from the Government for his client, and for so doing will be paid a commission of 1 per cent. only. In this case of the last provincial loan the Government paid the bankers and bond brokers as his agents, 1-4 per cent.

Cautious Criticism

In bond circles last night there was a tendency to criticise, though cautiously, the Governments departure from the usual practice pursued by Henry was advised of the criticism, which was to the effect that the issue was "unsound" from any point of view of the way with the public; that July was not especially a favorable time for a loan, with many citizens away, and that the customary machinery was not being used. He commented: "We may expect the brokers to criticise. They are not buying used as they were before, and consequently are not getting what they regard as their toll. But if we can save the public money, the public will not be disposed to join the criticism.

"The strongest feature of the loan is that the buyer is able to buy the bonds any cheaper than a small buyer can buy them. A man buying a $100 bond can get it at the same price as the man buying a $100,000. The general public, when it was said last time, was unable to invest thus has its opportunity. We were criticised on the last loan because we paid the brokers what we did. This time some brokers may be expected to criticise because we are not paying them as much. The brokers can act as agents for the purchasers, and the province will pay the broker buying for a client, one per cent."

DECORATION DAY
RAWDON TOWNSHIP

Rawdon—On Sunday afternoon, June 26th the decoration and memorial service of the Orange Order was held in Canniff Church, Union Church and cemetery under the auspices of the local lodge, No. 1176. The church was decorated with cut flowers and the membership were in attendance. The members of the order were seated in the centre pews, the ladies and visiting lodges the circuit opened with that grand Hymn "Holy, Holy, Holy" sung by the class prayer. A full choir of fourteen voices led the choir. Chaplain officiating at the piano and at the close a duet "Sweet Calilee" was rendered by Miss Alma and Lucile Droope. The offering was taken by brothers Cecil Cook and John Soarr.

Rev. John extended a hearty welcome to the visiting Orange brethren on behalf of the church and officials. Mr. W. J. Cottrell of Marmora, past District Master, gave a half hour discourse on the text found in St. Luke 24:39 "It is I myself." The need on the personality of each individual and wondered would we rabble and steadily our loved ones who have gone on before. Prior to Christ's death He disappeared two great characteristics, His power and Divine Love, and today we need to suffer from Him more and more than ever before."

Rev. A. L. Geen of Belleville, a veteran of the Order discourned on "the memory of our departed brethren and what is it that they have left to us". He said we should so live here on earth that we can pull up our stakes and move on at anytime to that other land. The speaker eulogised the good things God has prepared for us and exhorted all of the brethren to pay more attention to their religious duties. Directly after the service the congregation proceeded to the cemetery, the Orange brethren in parade led by District Master Conyr McConnell and Worshipful Master Fred Thain.

At the cemetery about fifteen graves of departed members were fittingly decorated with lovely bouquets of flowers. The brethren then held a short service around a table draped with the Union Jack and Mr. Walter Reid read the names of the Lodge members who were buried elsewhere. Flowers were laid on the table and after singing "Blest be the tie that binds" Rev. Geen offering prayer. It was an ideal June day and a very large number were in attendance. ACCIDENTS CONTINUE

The highway slaughter goes on despite warnings and efforts of leagues of safety to bring about sanity in driving.

Despite such discouragement in the work of keeping the roads free of accidents the program of education must be maintained until the public and individual consciousness is thoroughly safety-conscious.

THE NORTHERN NEIGHBOR

New York Times, refers to Secretary Stimson's greetings to Canada on Dominion Day, calling it more than a formal greeting, recognizing a relationship which is "unique among the great peoples of the world." The Times says:—

"In the enjoyment with us of a common speech, which is vocal across the unbridled frontier and of a common freedom, which has found definition in institutions of a common origin, Canada finds herself in a world relationship. She is a member of a federation that embraces the globe and gives more than poetic hint of an ultimate 'federation of the world.' For the British Commonwealth of Nations Canada is to be host to the conference that is to meet late this month in Ottawa, representing a quarter of the population of the earth. This conference is frankly bent on deepening the channels of imperial trade and making the 'unrivaled resources' of the units of the empire 'available in greater degree for the diffusion of a higher standard of well-being among its people.' But its deliberations and decisions will be of concern to the other three-fourths of the world and especially to the people of the United States."

The Times reprints William Penn's letter written in June 1662 to "the Emperor of Canada" in which he offers "a fair correspondence" as a condition of friendly living together" adding but one word, in the paragraph "And this I will say that the people who come with me are just a plain and honest people that neither make (tariff) war upon others nor fear (tariff) war from others because they will be just. This added word is significant after the affairs of the past three years.

GOOD SWIMMERS RISKY

Over sixty per cent of drownings occur from May to the end of August and nearly half of the fatalities are among boys and men under 25 years of age, many of whom are considered good swimmers, according to Dr. Ernest H. Lines, medical director of the New York Life. Hence it appears that good swimmers take unwarranted risks which may result in their deaths. Their self-confidence, over-estimation of their strength and carelessness lead them to disregard the rules of sense.

Twelve good rules are applicable to swimmers—

Do not go swimming alone or at night.

Don't overestimate your strength. Because you have been able to swim a certain distance several times that day, does not mean that you will be able to do it again.

Never swim across a lake or river or from headland to island, etc., or in unknown or dangerous waters, unless accompanied in a boat and a strong, level-headed companion trained in life-saving. A sudden channel of icy water, fatigue, undertows, cross currents or treacherous tides, may carry you to your death.

At the first opportunity learn how to rescue drowning persons without unduly endangering your own life and learn how to administer artificial respiration.

Do not attempt to swim to a drowning person's rescue in rough or deep water unless no other help is immediately at hand and you are confident you are capable of effecting a rescue without sacrificing the drowning person's, as well as your own, life.

If possible before starting to a rescue, call to someone to get a rope, or a boat. If you are dressed, remove shoes, coat and trousers—an extra second or two removing clothing is time well spent.

Don't swim for at least two hours after eating, and never swim beyond your depth in very cold water. Severe indigestion or muscle cramps may result. Never drink any cold beverages immediately before going swimming.

Skylarking in a boat is dangerous. Learn how to enter and leave boats and canoes and how to manage them properly. Beware of sudden squalls and storms, strong winds and a choppy sea.

Don't duck or "tease" your friends who are not as good swimmers as yourself. This may create a panicky mind which in an emergency may result in their death.

Teach your friends who are poor swimmers to go bathing in pairs, (preferably with someone else who is a good swimmer), to stay in shallow water, to beware of hidden holes and sudden drops in the sea shelving, and to beware of heavy breakers and undertows.

Never dive in unknown, shallow or rocky waters. Even in clear waters remember that "a deep dive is a dangerous dive."

THE RUNAWAY ROSE

"I am weary of the garden," said a little crimson rose,
"And the moss-encrusted palings that around it ever close,
For the breezes tell me stories of the wonders they have seen,
And I wish that I could ramble while the land is fair and green."
Sang the thrush beneath the rainbow, piped the cricket saying mass,
Buzzed the bee among the bluebells set like sapphires in the grass,
Heliographed the golden firefly in the twilight flashing by Hummed the gray gnats wildly waltzing in the gloaming: "Go and try."

So the rose one morning early started out to see the world
With her tiny frilled and scalloped satin parasol unfurled.
O'er the pickets old she clambered, down the road she ran in haste,
Till she found a white pagoda just exactly to her taste;
But she soon grew tired of blooming in a clipped and formal way,
And she gathered up her flounces and resumed her journey gay.
Hanging near her rosebud bonnet by an humble cottage door
Where she tarried for a season ere she took the road once more.

Dressed in white, or pale pink ruffles, loveliest in her crimson gown,
Now we meet her in the country, or the suburbs of the town,
Climbing o'er a cottage window or a palace portico,
Giving nosegays bright to lovers as she wanders to and fro,

NOAH AND JONNAH AND Captain John Smith were great fishermen—but we recently met a fisherman, old and grizzled, who for guile and fishing wisdom had it all over the illustrious trio above quoted. This fisherman was anywhere between fifty and one hundred, hard as nails, baked by the sun until his skin resembled well tanned leather, and a vocabulary well spiced with "I reckon" and "hadn't orter." We met under the railway bridge at Napanee, just above the dam near Gibbard's furniture factory, he in a punt, with fishing outfit, me on the bank with a bunch of cigarettes and a half hoped to get a kick out of. My friend of the punt responded readily about the state of the crops, the effect of the copious rain, the fishing good or bad, and the chances for bass, in an interesting informative manner, spiced with a bit of humor and a twinkle in his best eye, the other one not being quite open for business. Having discussed the weather thoroughly and its effect on the crops with which he views from our well-informed friend, we turned to fishing. Yes there were bass in the stream if you could catch them, occasionally an eel would take hold, and hour or two like if you were not wise in the ways of eels. When the eel finds he is hooked he makes a great todoo, curling around rocks, or anything handy on the bottom and pitting his strength against the fisherman, generally breaking loose. Let 'em perform, said my friend, cut up all the didos they want, just keep the line fairly taut, and by and by old man eel comes to the surface all tired out and anxious to get home—then a simple flip of the wrist lands him in the boat. Take your knife and cut his mouth both ways and the hook drops out. Fairly good eatin' too, if you parboil the oil out of the meat, but you don't want it for eats too often. Take the mudcat, tho', there is fine eatin' any and all times if cooked right, must be nicely browned and not cooked too fast, said the sage of Napanee. Bass are something else again. Front fish we naturally turned to big business and big salaries. Sir Henry Thornton's $75,000 a year salary seemed scandalous to our friend who could not see how any one man could earn that much in one year. Give it to me for just one year, said he, and I'll not ask for anything more, or words to that effect. Railways and trucks and passenger busses were next touched up, and my friend said that the farmer was taxed to provide the fine roads for the commercial trucks and the passenger busses besides the deficits on the railroad caused by the competition and the high price of railway building which the truck folks did not have to pay, being presented with a cement highway practically free of charge. Coming finally to the government, that, too, was scandalous and to confirm, according to my friend of the fishing lore. Senate should be done away and Parliament meet only once in every three years, said he—and that was once too often. Having settled the most important problems of the day we parted, me with a memory of the brightest spot in a wet, gloomy Dominion Day—he, who knows? I hope with a pleasant memory of a chat with a passerby who was a good listener and didn't argue.

THE LIVERY HORSE

The livery horse was a wise animal. It did not take him long to learn whether or not the man with the reins was an experienced driver. If not, he proceeded to take advantages. With him the art of loafing along the road was highly developed. His finest bursts of speed were reserved for the homeward journey, when he became quite a spry nag. Usually, however, the man and the maid were not in much of a hurry, any way; and so long as the livery bill did not run over two dollars, the pace did not matter. If Dobbin wanted to go into high gear on the way home it was all right. —"Oldden, Prince!"—Toronto Globe.

The Infamous SHARKEY-SCHMELING FIGHT
Full 15 Rounds

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

It was with regret that the members of the Bay of Quinte Golf Club learned that the members of the Gananoque Golf Club could not make their annual trip to the Bay of Quinte golf course on Wednesday afternoon as pre-arranged. The members of the local club, however, are hoping that the contretemps can be their way clear to come to Belleville in the near future.

The sport loving theatre goers who attended the Belle Theatre the week end were rewarded with a grand surprise. The exponents of skiing in the picture "Deemed Satisfied" were without a doubt an education to any lover of winter sports. It was somewhat of a treat to see such experts, and this, as were photographed in the picture shown. Which reminds us of the fact that the fight lovers will have an opportunity to witness the Sharkey-Schmeling fight at the Capitol Theatre at the end of the week.

Manager Gerow of the Belleville Nationals groomed both Tommy Polster and Carl Casey at Monday night's practice for Wednesday's game against the Cobourg Panics. All of the locals were out in force on Monday but only hope to be in record position in the O.B.L. by the run down Wednesday evening. Hyrdie Trepp, who covered ahead in the outfield in the Kingston Panics some years ago, was a visitor to the practice yesterday. Hyrdie says that baseball "ain't what is used to be."

After today but one game in the last 28 played the Cobourg "All Stars" will badly jinx their side when the Belleville Fruit Jars idea took them into camp in the time of 11 to 2 last night. The correct score however, should have been 2 to 1 as number Vender dropped up a bit when he allowed Helen Smith's bat, which struck the Armourers building in left field to go for a four base clout. The ball was undoubtedly a foul. But taking these three runs which scored on that hit away, leaves the locals with a six run margin over their Cobourg rivals. Wednesday night Cobourg will be here and Tiny Lewis who shared the pitching honors with the Fruit girls let the visitors down with but four hits. Helen Smith snatched the apple for two circuit clouts while it, Pellow and the lefty catcher the all Stars, slapped the apple for their home run. R. McGuire for the Fruit Jars also collected two circuits while Ann Gaina, although she only got one hit, played one of her best games of the season. The addition of Ann Gaina and the two McGuire sisters from Napanee have rejuvenated the Belleville Fruit team at least 50 per cent better during the past two weeks.

When the Cobourg Kiwanis Company's intermediate baseball team beat the Trenton Juniors at Port Anne on Monday by the score of 9 to 8 they lined up even with the ever slipping Virs. Both teams have won two games and lost two while the third entry in the loop, Picton, does not as yet have any "home umpires." The teams are tied and should the present system of umpiring in their loop and a meeting of the league executives have been called for tonight at the Y.M.C.A. when any new suggestions will be thoroughly gone into. We cannot see how a team, playing in such small towns as the local Victorias, can hire or pay neutral umpires as has been suggested by some of the Belleville executive. If the senior C.O.B.L. teams cannot afford to pay neutral umpires, how do the small intermediate teams expect t emake their finances meet the expense of neutral umpires?

The local junior loop are playing games this Thursday, Friday and two games on Saturday afternoon to catch up with their postponed rain games.

BYSTANDER KILLED

San Pierre, Ind., July 5.—Seven men heavily armed shot and killed a bystander while robbing the state bank here at 10.00 o'clock early this morning. Warden Mitchell, Deputy Reeve Gray and Mr. James F. Hill, M.P.P. for East Hastings, were at the crossing when the board inspected the situation. Some reference was made to the obstruction of bushes and trees about two hundred yards from the crossing. It seemed be the opinion of the county representatives that diversion of the highway to make a right angled crossing would not be satisfactory.

ATTEMPTED HOLD-UP

Brantford, July 5—An attempted holding...of H. S. Trapeotis's drug store was revealed by the police yesterday. Miss Jean Woods was in the store when two young men entered and asked for quinine. The girl went to the dispensing room, and on her return was ordered to face the wall by one youth, who had a revolver. J. Toone entered at that moment and the two slipped quietly away.

Right Angle Approach to Gibson Crossing Would be New Hazard, Board Told curve bringing him on to the road at right angles to the track he would be about to turn over." Mr. Smith pointed out as a menace in the diverting of the road.

The chairman asked if it was the contention of the Department of Highways that the substitution of the right angle approach to the crossing for the present skew crossing would, on account of the two right angles in the road involved, increase rather than lessen the hazard. Mr. Smith replied that that was his opinion.

C.P.R. View

For the Canadian Pacific Railway, Mr. George D. Spence, K.C., said: "We are of the same opinion." He stated his belief that the right angle curves would more or less take the attention of motorists off the railway track and that in a moment they would be upon the rails. The present approach is straight and there was little danger. It would be only an instant after the turn that the motorist would be upon the rails.

"We are trying to protect motorists from themselves," commented Mr. Spence. "They will not stop."

"Suppose the angles were rounded," remarked the assistant chairman.

"The turn would not be so difficult and consequently the scientific would be less diverting, but yet it would insert the time of the driver to see the track," said Mr. Spence. He did not see how this would help.

Mr. Spence paid reference to the recent accident at the crossing and one of ten years ago.

Commissioner Monteman asked: "You would not go so far as to say that you would prefer a skew-crossing?"

"No, but I would say it was not advisable to have two right angles near the crossing. There was the possibility that these might cause more accidents."

Mr. McLean asked Mr. Smith what he thought of added protection.

He described how the crossing was protected.

"There is no light there."

"No."

"Are facilities for lighting available?"

"I think so. I am not sure of that."

Mr. Spence remarked that the absence of lighting the crossing had never come up.

At this junctures the board rose and left for the crossing.

KISS DISEASE CALLED FICTION BROOK AND COLBERT

Hollywood motion picture stars brand narcolepsy, the supposedly newly-discovered disease reputed to cause drowsiness after kissing a member of the opposite sex, as pure fiction. A dispatch from Philadelphia, where the subject of narcolepsy is currently under discussion by leading American psychiatrists, stated "narcolepsy might cause you to fall asleep after kissing a girl in a taxicab."

"I fail to agree with that statement," said Clive Brook, when the dispatch, quoting Dr. S. Bernard Wortis was called to his attention. "For the last three days I have been sitting in a taxicab kissing Claudette Colbert, and never once have I felt the slightest indication of drowsiness."

Miss Colbert, featured with Mr. Brook in "The Man From Yesterday," at the Belle today and Wednesday, says flatly, for which the taxicab scenes were filmed, also declared that if there is such a disease as narcolepsy, it has not revealed itself during her work in the studio.

Miss Colbert and Brook in "The Man from Yesterday," play the roles of wartime sweethearts parted in the haste during Brook's brief leave from the front. They are married honeymoon in a taxicab. Brook is later reported killed and, in time, Claudette falls in love with another man. Years later they meet again. Claudette is torn between her duty to her husband and the new love she has just found. Brook solves the problem for her.

Although Brook and Miss Colbert are together only in the early and final action of the picture the roles they play call for a great deal of kissing, in addition to which Colbert is required to kiss the other man, Charles Boyer, several times.

"FOLLY OF THE CIRCUS"
GLASSWARE GIFT
WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Blatant blare of clown calliopes, the cracking of the ringmaster's whip, peanuts, pink lemonade, elephants, sideshows, thrilling trapeze stunts, sawdust arenas, vast expanses of canvas tents, kaleidoscopic whir of color and action, these, with the memories they bring, these memories of circus life are brought before you in realistic manner in "Folly of the Circus," Marion Davies' brilliant new starring vehicle which opens at the Capitol Theatre today. (Glassware Gift Night).

Brilliant Performance

As the heroine of this romantic story, Miss Davies is her loveliest, her performance outranking even her previous successes. She is sworn as the scientist who falls head over heels in love with the small-town preacher whose every picture has in silk tights on the bill boards. He never has she reached the heights of dramatic characterization as she does in the climactic scene in this striking picturization of the Margaret Mayo play of Broadway fame.

Clark Gable—ah, girls—is the handsome rainister in the story. It is a different characterization for Clark and he makes of it an altogether different kind of minister than we have been accustomed to seeing. If there isn't a big boost in church attendance after several release of this picture, it will be a surprise to this reviewer. Gable is a polished actor and he turns in one of the most engaging performances possible in this role.

Alfred Santell directed the circus story with the same tenderness that endowed his presentation of "Daddy Long Legs." His camera treatment is beautiful and his handling of the amazing trapeze stunts is incredibly graphic and thrilling in manner of unconcern of the story. Santell's technique is eloquent in simplicity. He has achieved in this picture a sincerity that makes you accept it as a genuine happening.

C. Aubrey Smith is excellent as the old bishop and Raymond Walburn scores a distinct success with a weakness for liquor and an aversion for women. David Landau turns in another fine performance as the clown and Ruth Selwyn is a vivacious Minie. Maude Eburne is delightful as Mrs. Jennings, and others in featured roles of outstanding merit are Mickey Kelly, the midget, Edna Williams, Clark Marshall, Ray Milland and Lillian Elliot.

The settings and costumes are expertly executed and the production abounds with rare beauty. Whatever you do, don't miss "Folly of the Circus."

Golf Widowlogues

"No scuttle rays for me!" exclaimed Mrs. Green, as she pulled her becoming shade hat down a little farther over her eyes and led Mrs. Divot to the shady spot under the gay awnings. "I've never fallen for the sun-tan craze, and I'm not courting a peeling nose."

o—o—o

"One half-day lying in the sun and I can acquire a tan. But ordinarily, if I manage the make-up properly, I can pass for a demi-blonde," agreed Mrs. Divot, powdering her nose.

o—o—o

"Leaping from crime to cram is our national exercise," declared Mrs. Green. "We'll snatch desperately at anything that promises us beauty, health, youth or slenderness. And the more it makes us suffer, the more faith we have in it!"

o—o—o

"Any woman who has spent a whole summer rubbing soothing ointment on her husband's shoulders and hankering to his proud boasts of how it hurts, will agree that man's favorite sport is 'suffering,'" laughed Mrs. Divot. "I'm sorry for himself!" laughed Mrs. Divot.

o—o—o

"And HOW!" rejoined Mrs. Green. "We've seen our husbands sacrifice their beauty sleep, trying to get their daily doses before rushing down to the office. We've listened to their manin-songs, as they shudderingly braved the nerve-wrecking shock of the ice-cold shower on winter mornings.

o—o—o

"We've passed through the horrors of the new food fad, and grown about mumbling carrots, and uncooked prunes, when we were longing for a nice, juicy beefsteak with French-fried potatoes.

o—o—o

"Weve suffered from the aching void caused by the milk diet and tortured our stomachs and nerves with the Hollywood diet. We've stuffed spinach and calves' liver and lettuce down our rebellious throats until we nearly choked. And lots of us have had most of our perfectly good teeth pulled out to cure us of hangnails or fallen arches."

o—o—o

"Oh, well," said Mrs. Divot, lolling back comfortably in her beach chair, "self-torment is our favourite form of amusement. What shall we do for a new life-interest, if the health faddists did not find us a new way to persecute ourselves every few seasons?"

o—o—o

"Find one ourselves, I suppose," suggested Mrs. Green, "Look at all those lovely ladies under skinned girls lying out there on the sand courting a thick epidermis, burned back and nose-wrinkles—and burning the hide off their vestebras. If God had intended us to be lizards He'd have made us that way. But, if some bright young medico had told them that wearing a ring in their noses would increase their circulation or reduce their hips, they'd all be going around with rings in their noses!"

o—o—o

"Amen!" sighed Mrs. Divot, "and so would We!"

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Daily Bath is Beauty's First Law

Bathing promotes beauty and it promotes health. It isn't just something that mamma's nice girl must do. By keeping the skin surface all over the body in prime, vitalized condition, the complexion is likely to display that freshness which is necessary for its loveliness and well-being.

Girls and boys who are afflicted with acne, who find the reflection in the mirror hateful and heart-pressing, will be rid of their blotchiness more quickly if they bathe thoroughly every day. Jumping in and out of the tub doesn't mean anything. The skin surface is covered with foreign substances—dead scales, deposits of salts from perspiration, greasy exudations from sebaceous glands ,Yes, and dirt! This queen of waste materials doesn't move on under the influence of water. There must also be soap, energy and a firm heavy bath brush.

The soap are to be removed thoroughly, first with warm water, then with cold. The ideal bath is the shower, preceded by a vigorous scouring with soap suds. Keep on scrubbing while the warm water trickles over the body. Turn on the cold faucet and let 'er go. Victims of acne nearly always suffer from poor circulation. When the blood scurries round it distributes nourishment to cells, carries away waste, brings the skin to normal health.

To neglect the daily bath is to allow sweat glands and sebaceous glands to become blocked. Then troubles a-plenty start up.

Muscles and skin are toned by friction. Rubbing the flesh surface before the bath fluffs off dry scales. Scouring with soap and brush digs off another layer. After the warm tubbing and the cold shower the bath towel comes along and takes another whack at this business of getting clean. When finally the pink, feels tingling, the circulatory system has awakened and is out for a big time.

Women of the stage and screen to whom youth and good looks are money in the bank know the value of the daily bath. They make a rite of it. Relaxation in the warm water coaxes snapping nerves to stretch and yawn. There comes over the body and the mind a sense of luxury and ease. No wonder human creatures poled when they bathe!

Myriads of bacteria collect upon a skin that is not kept scrupulously clean. They burrow into pores, produce boils, carbuncles, abscesses, pimples. Soap kills some of them. Germs thrive on stale debris. But that's not all. The entire constitution is vitalized by the daily ablution. Energy is created. Yes, and self respect takes hold of one.

Bath tablets and perfumed salts make the bath more festive. You can buy them flavored with your favorite perfume and they will impart a sweet, refreshing fragrance. The toilet powder should be of the same scent. If legs and arms are inclined to get gooseflesh, there are greaseless lotions that discourage this surface habit.

Ten minutes daily of joyous tubbing will discount the rotting effects of birthdays, inspire one to step pretty, look pretty, act pretty. The best of all beauty treatments, and one of the most efficacious!

BATEMAN—SULMAN

Bridge Street United Church was the scene of a very pretty summer wedding this afternoon at two-thirty o'clock when Alice Isabel, youngest daughter of Mr. Charles N. Sulman of this city, became the bride of Mr. Edgar Ernest Bateman, son of Mrs. Robert Bateman also of Belleville. Dr. Ernest Hunter of London, was the officiating clergyman assisted by Rev. Dr. Bell.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with a profusion of ferns and daisies. Prof. W. J. Hunt played soft wedding music.

The winsome bride, who was given in marriage by her father was lovely in a gown of ivory satin, with jacket of Alencon lace to which was attached her train. She wore a Gainsborough veil caught with orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of Bridesmaids Hill roses with sprays of lilies-of-the-valley and wore the gift of the groom, a diamond dinner ring.

Miss Louise Wallbridge as bridesmaid was charming in a dainty frock of buttercup yellow net, with straw hat of the same shade trimmed with robins egg blue velvet bows and bow and gloves of the same blue. She carried a pretty bouquet of Talisman roses.

Little Miss Hilda Illsley as flower girl was dressed in pink net organdie with hat to match and Master Douglas Bateman, as page wore a little lord Fauntleroy suit of white satin.

Mr. Murray Bonnycastle of Toronto, acted as groomsman. The ushers were: Everett Palmer, Mr. Harold Bateman, John Ackerman and John Hicks, were boutonnieres of gardenia.

During the signing of the register Miss Leona Rapp sang "Beloved It Is Morn" with violin obligato accompaniment by Mrs. Richard Allen, (nee Helen Hunt.)

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's father, the roots being artistically arranged with ferns and garden flowers. Miss Helen Sulman, sister of the bride, received with the groom, while the table, a dainty frock of Lettice green eyelet net with a full flounce extending over the satin, bouquet of Brairciiff roses and lillies-of-the-valley. Mrs. Bateman, the groom's mother, was attired in midnight blue satin with metallic embroidery and lace jacket. She wore a leghorn hat and corsage of Rapture roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

For travelling the bride donned a navy sunsuit Beginner blue silk suit with blouse of oyster silk pique, hat and accessories in a matching shade. Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Bateman left on an extended wedding trip abroad and on their return will take up residence in this city.

WELLING PLANS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to be married very soon and had couldn't manage everything myself without your marvellous help.

1.—I work in an office with about fifteen other girls, all of whom I like very much. I am friendly with them all, but only intimate with a few. What is be correct to just invite a few of them or should I invite them all? I would like them all to come, but I feel that I might be imposing on them by asking.

2.—I am going to have a buffet supper after the ceremony. Is this correct?

3.—Could we just have a table decorating and with food and dishes, buffet style, or is a bride's table necessary, and if so, who sits there?

4.—Have soon after the best wishes have been given is it correct for the bride and groom to leave?

5.—How soon after wedding presents are received should "thank you" letters be sent?

Best wishes for the success of your coming.

Reader.

And glad I am to help you with the thousand and one questions that all like to answer and be friendly and thoughtful of you in such things. They are going to be thrilled this minute with your plans for your wedding, and so don't deprive them of the joy of being your guests on that happy day.

1.—Yes, this is correct, and the oftenest done, and the most convenient is the plan for any number that is more than a few.

2.—It really isn't necessary to have a bride's table, but it is such a picturesque and memory-making part of the Great Event that I hope you can plan to have it. It isn't very much more trouble. A table set aside from the guests, decorated in lace, or white and pink, if you prefer, and if you wish, the wedding cake as the central decoration.

At this table sit the bride and groom, at the head of the table, the bride on the right of her groom. On the right of the bride is the best man, and on the left of the groom is the bride's chief attendant. The bridesmaids and ushers then are seated alternately, as women and men are seated at any dinner. If there are a very few attendants (you did not tell me your plans about this), then you may ask your brothers and sisters and the brothers and sisters of the groom and these friends of both yours and of the groom.

The bride and groom leave whenever they wish, for this depends on their plans about trains and so forth. They usually do not stay until the end of the reception.

3.—Write your thank you notes just as soon as you can.... if possible, write each day times of appreciation for the gifts received that day.

Write me again if you wish any other question. And, if you wish to be married quietly, I shall be most sympathetic to various details of the wedding plans, send you booklets and envelopes and I shall be most happy to send them to you.

An initial step to smartness just now is having one's monogram embroidered on sports things, such as blouses, sweaters or scarfs. Smart is a short sleeved blouse of heavy white washable crepe, with a roundneck neckline and yoke and trimmed with large pearl buttons down the front front! The front brimmed hat in a tab which has the wearer's initial in black.

A good soldier note is seen in the demand for suits that are cut on military lines and on these lines is a suit of black woolen with a row of tiny gold buttons down its fitted front. The military neckband is finished with white antelope scarf ends.

Seeing black those nights is a frequent happening on many women are wearing frocks of coarse black silk net. This cool fabric is used for a lovely frock with bands of jet outlining the rounded neckline, and marking the hipline. The skirt is pleated.

Quite correct is printed chiffon even if some women have declared themselves against prints for evening. A pretty evening frock is of black chiffon with a small floral print in green, white and red. Wide shirrings give the waistline a wide belted look and the frock has a tiny vestee of Alencon lace and there are white vetret flowers just above the waistline.

MART TURNS REACTIONARY

Prices Steadier Towards Midday and Loss Negligible

TORONTO, July 5.—A portion of Monday's advance was lost as the Toronto Stock Exchange Market turned reactionary the first hour this morning. Prices were steadier towards midday and mostly above the point where they had left off last week, though down fraction to a couple of points below last night's finals.

SHARE SLUMP SOON CHECKED

Sailing Tendency in New York Does Not Go Far

NEW YORK, July 5.—A pronounced slump in the stock market at the resumption of trading today was soon checked and the list drifted wearily around the bottom levels of the June trading range.

Utilities, food and chemical stocks were again soft spots. The list turned extremely dull after the first half hour, but rallying tendencies failed to develop.

American Telephone tumbled more than 2 points, but met support at its old low. It maintained quite a flurry of selling which carried it off more than 4, but it then recovered a little. Miscellaneous issues under 5 points or so included U S Steel, Allied Chemical, National Biscuit, Liggett and Myers "B", Coca Cola, and Public Service. The last named penetrating new low ground. Rails generally held up well, as did oils. A few of the coppers were up fractionally.

Drug advances 1 5-8 then reacted. Royal Dutch firmed, both in this market and London.

Some brokerage quarters were inclined to link selling of the electric Power Stocks with the nomination of Gov. Roosevelt, in view of his stand on power regulation. There was virtually nothing in the news to account for the improved tone in coppers. Steel production has fallen 15 per cent of capacity or less, although orders for structural steel last week was said to be the third best for 1932 to date.

Launzine was watched closely for construction developments, and the action of foreign bonds provided some optimism.

BROKE BODIES TO SAVE WORLD

Decoration Day Observed by Canadian Legion Post at Trenton

Trenton, July 5 (Special)—The annual Decoration Day of the Canadian Legion Branch 110 was held here on Sunday. The officers of the Ninth Infantry Brigade, who succeeded Brig. Hamilton Gault under the command of Colonel Gillis, also took part in the R.C.A.F. Squadron No. 3 under command of Flight Lieut. Riddell. The members of the Legion followed led by Standard Bearer Geo. LaBrash, the other fraternal bodies of the town also took part in the parade. The parade formed up in the camp on Dufferin and led by the Northumberland Regimental military band marched past, following which a prayer and Scripture reading was given by Captain the Rev. Chas. K. Nicol, the entire throng, which jammed the park joining in singing the well hymn "Onward Christian Soldiers." Rev. Capt. Nicol was the speaker. Speaking on an actual experience that befell him as chaplain, at Passchendale and the finding of a Scottish soldier's body on the battlefield, the truth of the words "This is My body, which is broken for you" came to him with a new meaning. There and then on the field the padre made a solemn vow that he would be more devoted to his task. It was a reconsecration of his life's work. Continuing he brought home the reason that they had assembled there, "Today we honor those whose bodies were broken; they were men with the spirit of adventure; they were men who wished to see life; they were men who loved their homes; they were men who loved their friends; they were men who loved their country; they were men with ideals, dreams and ambition. These men were broken too, you. Wounds, health, spirit and outlook on life. We are not to forget their sufferings and willingness to make the sacrifices and their wounds; we owe them a great debt."

They believed that they were engaged in a righteous struggle. We do not believe that now, he declared, that there should be another war.

This can be accomplished by the spirit of sympathy, understanding and forbearance.

Following the address the Last Post was sounded and two minutes' silence observed. All the funeral orders represented in the parade placed wreaths on the war memorial. The service closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

9th Infantry Brigade Carry Out Programme at Trenton

TRENTON, July 5.—(Special)—Last week while visiting the Trenton Cold Storage, which was erected last year by Mr. Rhen James, the fact of how well fruit keeps in storage was brought home vividly after sampling an apple, that had been put in storage last fall. The apple was as firm and crisp as when it had been picked. So now one may have the apple a day the doctor prescribes.

Mrs Jessie Sanders

The death occurred last week in the Belleville General Hospital of Mrs. Jessie Sanson, relief of the late Robert Sanson. She has been ill in health for some time and had undergone an operation recently from which she failed to rally. Mount Pleasant Says Farewell to Neighbors

Rawdon, July 5 By Mail—Mount Pleasant W.M.S. met at the church on Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Ross Hoard in the chair. After the opening exercises the Roll was answered with a Proverb. Prayer was said by the president, "Lord, we would be reminded of Thy giving." Plans were made to entertain the mission Band on July 21st.

The programme based on temperance followed after a suitable Bible reading. Mrs. George Wagner read a leaflet "Our Stewardship of Personality," urging us not to let our talents rust but rather to use them for furthering God's work. Watch Tower and Temperance was given by Mrs. Gordon Smith, Thrasher and McKeown. A leaflet "At Thy Hand" was read by Mrs. Lorne Sharp.

The study in Korea was then given as follows:

"Science and Religion in Korea," Mrs. Thomas McKeown. "The Challenge Made by Youth," Mrs. Roy Thrasher. "Christian Leadership," Mrs. Frank Smith. "The Church of Tomorrow," Mrs. Percy MacMullen.

This study revealed to us that we should thank God for the thousands of young people in the land of the dawn who are reflecting this glory in their pure faces as they seek Christ, Christ, alone, Korean road. A season of sentence prayers followed and all sang the closing hymn "Come My Soul Thy Suit Prepare."

Mr. and Mrs. Blake Sharp entertained Mr. and Mrs. George Weaver recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Coney, Howard and Lloyd were guests Sunday evening of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Lamb of Stirling.

Miss Maggie Guernsey has returned home after a week's visit with friends at Campbellford and Peterborough.

Miss Bernice Booth of Hamilton, is visiting her cousin Miss Winnie Sharp.

On Tuesday evening Mount Pleasant staged their annual strawberry social with lots of eats included. A good crowd attended, guests coming from Carmel, Hoards, Bethel, Stirling and other points. The orchestra composed of Mrs. Arthur Pryor, Messrs. Harry Brown, Tom Furniss, Morris Rose and Russell Pitman gave several musical numbers during the evening. A basketball game between Hoards and Carmel was greatly enjoyed with the Hoards carrying off the winning honors. It was a perfect evening for a social and the cool air warded off the mosquitoes. The church lawn was also decorated for the evergreens and bunting for the occasion.

On Monday evening June 27th, over one hundred friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brown, Mount Pleasant to say farewell before they moved to their new home in Foxboro where Mr. Brown has been conducting a grinding mill for the past few months. For several years Mr. has been doing customs threshing in partnership with Mr. George Mostick. As he was so well known throughout the district, Mrs. Brown has always been willing to help with any social functions and their son Earl has attended both of the public schools in the district and will be missed by his little friends.

The pastor Rev. Fred Joblin officiated as chairman. And after a few appropriate remarks the boys' orchestra Messrs. Melvile, Higgs, Earl and Coggins gave several mouth organ selections. Readings were given by Mrs. Thomas McKeown, Miss Vera McAdam and Mrs. Percy MacMullen. Miss Ruth Gibson delighted with four solos with mando-in accompaniment Miss Flora Thrasher the following address and Messrs. Leonard Sharp, George Weaver and Burton Brown made the presentations.

To Mrs. Brown—An electric reading lamp.

To Al—A smoker cabinet.

To Earl—An electric bedroom lamp.

The recipients made suitable replies thanking their friends for the kindness shown and inviting all to pay them a visit in their new home. Refreshments then were served before the guests departed.

"EMBERS of LOVE"

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

COPYRIGHT 1931-32 BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

"Well, I'll get along," she said. "I know how you get in your work when you're substitute, or do any extra work."

Wanda was rummaging in a huge, amber topped tapestry bag. She drew out, a crumpled five and a dollar bill. "There," she said, "that's really till the end of the month, but we'll call it cloth because Walt is coming this afternoon. But you stay this morning and just set out my bills for me, will you, honey child? Put the 'please remit' ones in a pile, and just chuck out the new itemized ones, and if you can find my bank statement you might check that up for me, will you?"

Lily Lou promised. She sat down at the desk and went at it systematically.

Wanda slipped into a fur coat and went over the bureau mirror in her arm. With Wanda gone the work progressed rapidly. At eleven o'clock she had finished and there was nothing more to do.

She looked around her with a dumb wonder. She wouldn't be here any more. She was only substituting for Wanda's out of tune piano. No more running errands. No more brushing Wanda's hair. No more [illegible] she on the stereo score on the bench beside her. She sighed.

She thought of herself, a girl not yet twenty-one, left to fend for herself out of a job, almost penniless, going to have a baby. Funny that it should be she, Lily Lou Lanning. Things like that don't happen to you. They happen to people you read about in papers and books.

But then was she, all right.

Pretty soon everyone would know her mother. The church ladies in Woodlake. The men in Rafe Fletcher's store, coming in for a lemon soda or a package of smoking tobacco, and lingering to make some remark about Jack Lanning's girl.

Mrs. Fletcher, the old gossip, "Well, have you heard the news...."

But why tell them? They wouldn't know if she didn't tell them. Why tell anyone, unless she wasn't going to tell Ken? She wouldn't tell him, she'd made up her mind to that. Made it up last night, while she knelt, by her bed thinking up her reasons why it was practically her duty to call him. But thank goodness she had too much pride for that.

Too much pride..... Lily Lou's mouth tightened. She touched her slim body with her hands. She didn't want any! She didn't want Percy Gage's man. Let her have him. If she wanted him, he'd be what did she care. She'd manage. No one there. Alone. That's the best thing. She wasn't beaten yet. She told Ken's father that she could look out for herself, and she could. She'd succeed in spite of everything. Save money. Send Ken's father back his money, show him and Ken.....

For just a moment she forgot to be brave. She thought of the way it might have been. She and Ken together. Happy. It would have been nice to have old Ken he'd have been so proud...dear, funny Ken. He'd have taken her in his arms, and loved her and they'd have planned things for the baby. He didn't care for clothes. And a name for it. If it were a girl. If it were a boy it would be Kenfield Carey, of course.

The noon whistles blew.

She brushed her tears' eyelashes with the back of her hand. No use getting sentimental.

There was nothing more to do for Wanda Pillsbury. She'd go to Dwight Gwin's studio and pay him that three dollars for the doctor, and then she'd make the rounds of the employment agencies.

Her feet lagged. It was not easy to face Gwin again, but it had to be done.

She tapped briskly on his door.

It was partly open, and inside someone was playing softly.

"Come in!"

Gwin's fingers continued to run over the keys, coaxing a queer, haunting little melody. He didn't even look up.

"It's just I. I stopped to leave the money for Wanda."

"Thank you. You can leave it right there on the table."

She took a last look at his big, dim studio. She had always been interested in Gwin's studio. It looked, she thought, the way an old Italian painter's studio must look, rather a shame to be going away, where she'd never see it again.

"Do you mind if I look around a little?" she surprised herself by asking. "I've always wanted to—"

"No indeed. Look all you like. All the things came from Italy you know. I brought them over myself, at different times."

She looked at an ivamense shrine carved from wood. Curved and goldleaf. "That, too? All those heavy things?"

"Oh, yes—they've shipped slow freight you know."

"Oh." She stood, a little awkward for. There was no further excuse for staying nothing more to say. "Goodbye," she said, "perhaps some day I'll come back, and study with you."

He smiled. "Oh, I'll see you sometime."

"No, Im going. I've left Miss Pillsbury, or rather, she left me. She had her own conservatist back".

He stopped playing. "Did you enjoy your work with her?" he asked earnestly.

"Enjoy it!" she burst out in sudden vehemence. "I loathed it. Tum, tum, tum, tum, tum——I HATED it! What do I care for playing for a dancing school? It's a simple art!"

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

"A singer," he echoed softly. He studied her, his head on one side. "I know. Maybe you've got in you."

She was aghast at what she had said. Why think..... here! think she was so full of genius that she thought she couldn't bear it. Why in the world did she come back to, to lay herself open to that? She struggled for poise, for some laughing, cynical thing to say. And instead to her horror, she began to cry.

It wasn't that she minded Gwin's arm around her. He wasn't the least bit interested in her personally or about it. He just took her in his arms when she cried as if she were the most natural and normal thing in the world to do. That was good pooo fa.... all right Miss Lanning!

Lily Lou played. Her fingers were stiff with nervousness at first, but it was not very difficult, she had always read easily and accurately. She got through it.

After the baritone there was a young Russian girl who was coaching Mimi. "That," said Gwin, when she had gone, "is French as it should be sung. But alas, she does not sing."

After that another baritone with hopes of opera. Then a saxophonist at one of the big churches who flatted his high notes.

"You that it matters," Gwin said. "For his public likes him that way. Besides he has no ear—he's just as happy."

It was confusing and taxing, and wearying, as Lily Lou realized when the day was over. But what had! A chance to study with Gwin and a job besides and most of her mornings free for study.

Mrs. Manchester was out when Lily Lou got home. She rushed in to tell Sadie in the kitchen. "I'm going to study with Gwin—Dwight Gwin, Sadie—you must have heard of him! I'm his accompanist, and he thinks I have a natural voice. Oh, Sadie, isn't it wonderful!"

"Sure fine," Sadie said. "Seems like its your lucky day, Miss Lily Lou!"

About six Maxine came in, and flung her sketchbook on the floor. "Lily Lou! Guess!.....My ears and whiskers, Lansing, what's happened?"

Lily Lou laughed delightedly.

"And what do you think of that!" she finished, when Maxine had had every detail, even to the Russian girl's clothes and Gwin's trick of running his fingers through his curly grayish hair.

"I think it's grand. But how are you going to eat? Where are you going to get the twenty for board here?"

"Why, the same as before, I told you I'm going to be Gwin's accompanist. He's going to pay me the same as Wanda Pillsbury did, a hundred a month."

BRINGING UP FATHER

JULY 5 MR. AND MRS. - THEY ALL SAY IT, BUT NOTHING IS DONE ABOUT IT

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 66

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Several evenings before the house party disbanded, the young Englishman again referred to Meriem's story of her life in the jungle. There was one thing he wanted definitely answered before he committed himself to the plan he was considering. "Who was Korak?" he asked. Meriem laughed: "I used to think he was an ape—but now I know he is a MAN," she added, with emphasis on the last word. "A white man?" persisted Baynes. "Was he you—er—?"

The girl's clear, beautiful eyes looked straight into his. She was far too unsophisticated to guess what he was driving at. She laughed merrily: "No, he was not my brother. Korak—was just Korak!" and again she broke into a gay laugh, as she realized that never before had she attempted to analyze the relationship that existed between herself and Korak. That Mr. Morison said no more. But he thought of a certain luxurious apartment he owned in London.

The last evening they were to be together Meriem sat out a dance with Baynes under the tropical moon bathing the veranda. She had been listening entranced to his stories of London and Paris, all the fairy-tales to her fascinated ears. After a short silence he drew closer and bent his lips close to her face. He put his arm about her and she did not draw away. "I love you!" he whispered. She did not reply. "Tell me," he said, "that you return my love."

His lips had almost toucher her when a vision of Korak sprang like a miracle before her eyes. She saw Korak's face, she felt his lips hot against hers and then for the first time she guessed what love meant. She drew gently away from Baynes. "Let us wait," she said. "I am too young to marry." The Hon. Morison was perfectly sure he had not mentioned marriage. "Good night," she said, and left him. Baynes lighted a cigarette, blew the smoke toward the moon, and smiled.

Acting Mayor Woodley Casts Deciding Vote Against Motion Introduced by Ald. R.P. White

be secured and Alderman Spratt allowed his name to go on the motion with the consent of the Council. The motion of the City Solicitor asked for at the last meeting of the council was before the members and was read and in which he stated, that the motion was not according to the Statutes. Acting Mayor Woodley, gave the members the privilege to again discuss the motion. Alderman Bennett objected giving as his opinion, that the motion was illegal according to the City Solicitor and therefore against the law and there was no use to further the discussion before the vote. Alderman White, the original mover spoke to the motion stating, that at some time in the history of the city four councilors about the board as the present time had voted for flat rate assessment on some buildings in the city and his remarks were challenged by a member with the interjection "only for industrial purposes."

"Right or wrong" said Alderman White, "the motion is an amendment for building and it won't cost the ratepayer one cent. There has been things done wrong in the council before and it would not be stretching the point to pass this motion even in the face of the opinion expressed by the City Solicitor." Alderman Foster briefly stating, that he was pleased with the effort put forward by the mover of the motion, but it would be contrary to all procedure to accept the motion in council, when opinion of the City Solicitor was exactly to the contrary of what the motion embodied.

The letter from the City Solicitor, A. B. Collins, K.C., is given in full.

J. W. Holmes,
City Clerk.

Re Motion Fixing Assessment.

Dear Sir:-

"The assessor's duties in arriving at realty values are defined by statute.

On the question of valuation of land, the Assessment Act, Chapter 238, R.S.O. 1927, Section 46, subsection 1 reads:

"Land shall be assessed at its actual value."

Sub section 1, is further restricted by sub section 2, and sub section 2, with the result that it is laid down that:

"Buildings shall be assessed for the amount of the difference between the selling value of the whole property and the selling value of the land, if there were no buildings on it."

The result is, that if the assessor follows a strict interpretation of the Statutes he will be obliged to give consideration to any buildings or erections he may find on the land, when he makes his visit for the purpose of assessment of it.

In making inquiries one municipality was found where the practice is followed of deferring assessment on buildings until they have been completed and revenue bearing. It was a small municipality—what such case is dealt with separately by the council and given consideration before mentioned.

It is admitted that it was not quite according to the Act but it was a sort, of popular practice adopted and thus far no objections had been raised.

Worthy at the motion may be, it is doubtful if such mode of assessment would be upheld if questioned before the Court of Revision.

Yours truly,
A. B. Collins,
City Solicitor.

Church Street from Station To Dundas May be Re-Lighted In Conformity to New System

that as the estimates are already made for the year and that the city will have to take care of a number of residents due to unemployment, that the work be proceeded with later in the year and that the matter be turned on some time in December and the council would then only have one month's light bill to pay in this fiscal year.

Heavy Invested Capital.

Allan R. Schryver who was the first speaker of the delegation showed the council that Church street was one of the most expensive streets in the city and represented more invested capital, both private and educational, than any other and that the street should be beautified in accordance with the main streets that have already been done. The speaker named the several buildings that were on the street and stated that these after consulting the city boards of the street as an inconsequential unit and overlooked the beauty of their particular street. He also stated that it would be a saving in expenditure to the Board of Education if the street was relighted as he stated that for the past, the Board of Education has had difficulty in keeping the collegiate grounds free from trespassers. The police have been interviewed on the question of better patrolling but their activities are hampered and limited to the number of men on patrol. For the past few weeks, the Collegiate has been broken into" said the speaker "and during the absence of these depredations have occurred at the various public schools in the city." Mr. Schryver spoke in highest commendation of the police for their work in behalf of the board in keeping the property in good shape but believed that more adequate protection could be given if the street was lighted as well as the other investments protected, and considerable of the juvenile delinquency would be stopped.

"There is $600,000.00 invested in the collegiate," said Mr. Schryver, "and for a few dollars the council could save many repairs to the property. A good school also be done and this would alleviate the loitering that goes on in the doorways of the Collegiate after sundown."

Asked For Considerations.

J. M. Truesdell speaking for St. Michael's property and also as a ratepayer felt that the delegation asked the council for their favour consideration of the request. He stated the lower part of Church street from Dundas East to Station was in a bad condition but considerable help was given by the Hydro in arranging for the light at the Armouries entrance off Church street. A dangerous condition has been alleviated there," said Mr. Truesdell. The ratepayers of the street would all like to see the street relighted and hoped the council could see their way clear to do the work this year. W. Barlow, chairman of Sites, Buildings and Repairs of the Board of Education, substantiated the statement made by Mr. Schryver and stated that if repairs were to be kept to a minimum, there would have to be better lighting about the schools of the city. He also stated that couples were occupying the doorways of the various schools after sundown and this could all be avoided with proper lighting. He told of damage that had already been done to the schools by juveniles but paid a tribute to the police of the city for the interest they had taken in the board's behalf in trying to properly police the various properties. George F. Catron, representing Bridge St. United Church congregation, also asked that the council concur in the request of the delegation believing that the cost would not be excessive and said greatly to the appearance of the street and more fully protect the valuable property on that street.

Explanation Given.

Alderman Armstrong in replying to the delegation stated that a recommendation was already for consideration of the council and he explained that in regard to the procedure, that would have to be taken to equip the street with the new lighting. He stated that the committee had been made for the year and all expenditures had been charged to the bone at the solicitation of His Worship the Mayor, believing that any money available should be used for relief of those in want. The initial cost of the work will be borne by the Hydro Commission of the city and then proportioned out, the annual instalments and no money is paid until the light has been turned on the street," said the Alderman. "The committee believe as soon as that the work might proceed, the light not being turned on until the month of May, the saving in hydro bills makes only one month in this year in which thoroughfares of the county side, keeping his eye out for farm implements of the neighbors to "fix," to their earnest attention and thoughtful consideration and the members proceeded to other business of the session.

LETTER TO BE CONSIDERED

prived of its privilege. The letter follows:

To Mayor George O. Tice, and Councillors,

Dear Sirs:

The secretary of the Indigent Committee of the Women's Christian Association wish to bring up a few matters for your consideration. They feel that it would be for the best interests of the council and citizens in general that persons who are receiving relief during the past winter should strive in every way to conserve all they can and also to endeavour to prepare for the coming winter.

The Indigent Committee feel that no one should receive relief who can be unemployed during the coming season should not be allowed, to buy a radio or automobile, radio or motor permit. It has come to the knowledge of the Association that such things are being done at the present time and they would like if the council would draft some by-laws prohibiting the spending of money in that way. In justice to the taxpayer and to those who have to pay the collection for unemployment relief last winter, it is to be hoped that the recipients of relief and save any money they earn this winter.

The Inside Story of the FOX Picture

"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm"

Chapter V

Location, Studio Return

FILMING a picture on location is hard work. It is like fighting a battle on enemy soil far from one's base of supplies. Everything, even makeup must be foreseen since the studio with its complex organization for minimizing errors is out of reach. The schedule must be met just as exactly as on the home lot.

However, plenty of fun goes with a location trip where the players and staff live in security as isolated as if encamping to them as they are to the saviors. Sentiment, work and diversion each other's boundaries.

Such was the day when Alfred Santell was directing a bit of incidental action in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," that did not include Marian Nixon, who strolled away through the woods, near the location. She came to a stream that might have been the original Sunnybrook. It twisted and purled along, over and around rocks, through the leafy undergrowth.

It took but a minute to seduce Rebecca, who is the character Miss Nixon portrays, from the camera vicinity.

Cleft King, "still" cameraman with the troupe, stood on the opposite bank of the stream. Marian at her play. The result was a series of "still" photographs, beautiful and natural, which, in the taking, robbed Marian of her few free moments from the camera world.

Another impromptu bit of Santa Cruz entertainment followed the scene. Alec Hale and his rickety odd-jobs wagon. He was filmed as he drove singing along the leafy thoroughfares of the county side, keeping his eye out for farm implements of the neighbors to "fix," to their earnest attention and thoughtful consideration and the members proceeded to other business of the session.

Santell congratulated himself that he did not have to ask for a creaky of Ishe scene!

Dr. Adam Ladd, as portrayed by Ralph Bellamy in the Fox picture, entered the story after the introduction of Rebecca. When the first scene was rehearsed, the curious natives of Santa Cruz who came out each day to watch progress on the filming were re-paid doubly for their patience.

Bellamy's first scene is make of Dr. Ladd a kindly, human, understandable man. Accordingly, he dressed in loose tweeds, smoked a pipe and did not neglect to smile.

Ladd, in the story was a practising physician who met Rebecca as she came to Riverboro in the box of Jeremiah Cobb, a character played by Alphonz Ethier. From the meeting, occasioned when the bus broke down, their acquaintance ripened quickly into firm friendship, bordering from the start on love. Thereafter, they were filmed together along the leafy walks of Santa Cruz, under blossoming trees, in romantic interludes. The finish of the picture was even filmed while on location. When Bellamy lifted the frail figure of Rebecca in his arms, and kissed her, it was therefore a happy ending in more ways than one. It marked the beginning of the end of the company's stay away from Sunnybrook Farm.

There remained just one day of "pick up" shots, according to Andy Pierce, Santell's secretary and script clerk, who has charge of the records of scenes. Later pictures has kept close watch on every detail. These scattered odds and ends of shooting must be "in the bag" by the next night, so that the company could return to Fox Hollywood where all the interiors, the winter scenes, and the dramatic climax were to be filmed.

Early Monday morning, following the return to the studio over the week end, the Santell company was back on the schedule as being "interior — Sawyer home — day." Sawyer home — day — Culver City — 9 A.M. — Miss Nixon, Mr. Bellamy, Miss Mae Marsh, Louise Dresser Hale — extra and bit players as called."

There, in the shabby, stately hall of the mansion, Rebecca skated on Aunt Miranda's precious floors — crept under the covers of the big four-poster, in the daytime, to weep at her cold reception from her new stepmother. There in real away for a walk with Dr. Ladd — made friends with sympathetic, invisible Aunt Jane, whom Mae Marsh created.

And in the living room of Dr. Ladd's cozy home, warmed by his crackling fireplace, cheered by his understanding heart, he patiently tried to take the place of her own mother, whose memory she held sacred.

Busy days stretched into a week. The scenes, sometimes twenty-four days were telling on Santell. He was sustained, however, by favorable reports coming from the cutting room pleased with the enthusiasm of his players, and happy in the knowledge that he was still "shooting on schedule."

Only the minor sequences and the dramatic climax remained to be filmed. Then, for the cast, rest for him, on days of highly concentrated study of the two hundred odd thousand feet of exposed film comprising which the one thousand feet of "Rebecca" were to be cut and edited.

not. He admitted there might have been some trouble in controlling the boys but that rules should have been put down and strictly enforced. Alderman Woodley interjected that rules were put up and were enforced to a certain extent, but it was almost impossible to keep any semblance of order. Mr. Hamer explained that the $40 a week it was costing the city to keep the camp meant only about eighteen cents a day for each one and that was not exhorbitant and that the expense could have been cut by hiring a cheaper man to control the place. He took exception to the statement that the light bill was $36.73 for one month, he believing that the lights were not burned that long. He understood the door was again open but they had nothing to eat and he did not think $ is fair for the control of the domestic science.

Council's Decision

Alderman Armstrong further explained it was the council's decision and as the majority had voted there was no alternative and the boys trooped out and the session continued.

Walter H. Reeves appeared before the council on behalf of the Y.M.C.A. and asked for a permit to erect a dog kennel on Dufferin St. He stated the present time is to erecting a new home. Alderman Marshall, Bennett and Donahue, who were a committee to investigate the conditions, stated that no complaints had been received against the building of the kennel and that a petition had been received from a number of ratepayers in that locality offering no objections to the erection of the kennels and as far as they were concerned the application could proceed with his construction.

Mr. Reeves assured the council that the dogs would not be a nuisance to any resident in the district and that the kennels would be conducted in a businesslike and satisfactory manner at all times. Mr. Tilley also addressed the council for their action in the matter.

The letter from the Y.M.C.A. were reminded, the "Y" to pay all local improvement tax. also sewer, pavement, street sweeping and cleaning and municipal patrolling. Mr. Ald. Had Lowest Tender

Under the head of enquiries Alderman Brickman asked if sealed tenders had been asked for when wiring was done at the Pilkrafton Plant and Chairman Woodley replied that such was the case, and the lowest tender was accepted. Alderman Brickman further asked if all electricians had been asked to tender and the contract and an affirmative reply was again received from Ald. Bennett.

A number of by-laws were submitted for the consideration of the council and all were passed through the various stages. R. W. Archeman and Harry B. Stock were appointed justices of the peace by commission for a period of two years.

The by-law respecting the issuance of auctioneer licenses was amended by striking out the fee of $10 and anyone could take out a license to auctioneer for the sum of $5 per year, but the by-law as it now reads requires a deposit of $100 in lieu of which revised assessment before he can secure that rate. Also a non-resident license will now cost $150. The council in passing this by-law stated it was for protection of those engaged in the business in the city and who had been residents for a number of years. The by-law to provide the taxes for the year was passed as also a by-law calling off the sessions of the court of revision until Thursday, September 29th, and making provision for the handling of the city's business during that time.

Berlin, July 6 (AP) — James Mattern and Bennett Griffin, round the world flyers, landed at Tempelhof Airdrome at 5:40 p.m. (11:40 a.m. E.S.T.) today.

They brought their red, white and blue ship down on the field a little more than 18 hours after leaving Harbor Grace, Newfoundland.

More than two hours before they had been sighted over Hanover. Usually the flight from that city is a matter of less than an hour and a half, but they did not appear at Tempelhof within that time, those who awaited them at the field, including United States Ambassador Sackett, began to worry.

Weather Bad

It developed, however, that there was some bad weather between here and Hanover, and the globe girdlers had been obliged to go out of their way.

The Associated Press has reason to believe that his proposal was received with favor.

Colonel Pope laid the matter last night before a special meeting of men high in the councils of the Soviet Government. Among them were V. I. 'Thieves Kitchen' Says Free Trader of Imperial Meet

London, July 6 (Canadian Press Cable)—A picture of the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa as the "most shameless thieves' kitchen the world has ever known" was painted by R. D. Holt, Liberal free trader and former M.P. addressing the Liberal Free Trade Committee at luncheon today.

The committee generally expressed concern at the effect of the Imperial Conference on British trade.

Mr. Holt's outburst was grounded on the hylothesis that all the schemes put forward on behalf of unofficial delegates would be adopted.

"I believe," he added, "that these unofficial delegates are going to Ottawa with the most shameless conspiracy against the people of England, utterly regardless of what happens to anybody else.

"It is time we spoke out plainly about this nasty business of preference. This government is the agent of a protectionist House of Commons which was elected on something like a trick, and 'I would be dishonest to tie this country to any bargain with the Dominions which would last beyond the life of the present parliament."

SUCKERS INVADE LOWER MOIRA

An invasion of the lower Moira by suckers "almost as long as boat oars," was noticed by several citizens this morning. Dozens of the large fish were observed there and never was the water in the lower Moira more seen floating idly in the current as far up as the Lower Bridge. The fish have come from the bay by way of the Moira warm-water, attracted by the presence of marine food in the shallow water and are now there they are soft and useless for food.

REGISTRATION NOT AS HEAVY

Tourist Trade at Camp is Keeping Well to Standard

Authentic figures from the registrar kept at the city tourist camp show a slight decrease in the number of the tourists who registered at the camp as contrasted with figures of month of corresponding figures for the preceding year. During the months of May and June the total number of visitors there has been a total registration of 174. During May and June 1931 the registration was placed at 220. While year, according to Mr. Nelson, caretaker of the camp, there has been a noticeable increase in the number of tourists, who only use the grounds to prepare meals and they pass through and of them are carrying their own groceries. Registrations of the past few months show that they come from all points of the compass. American cars are leading their own very well and come from all points of the States.

The question arises: How much does the average tourist spend in Belleville as he stops for a day to look things over? It is answered by a number of purchases bought by Wm. McKeown of Toronto who made the most of his short stay two days during the recent rain. A list of expenses which he kept track of while in Belleville is as follows: Gas, $3.30; oil, $2.25; papers 10c; matches 5c; cigarettes, $1.00; Soda fees, $2.25; cap 75c; socks, $1.25; Food, $3.00; Total $17.75.

Larger motoring parties, declaring Mr. Nelson, are not stopping in Belleville each day for the day to look around, but are finishing up the poles, covering the rust streak, or black which had covered them.

Young Belleville Runs, Skips, Swings, Sings in Playgrounds

Little Human Animals Filled with Spotive Spirit

SUMMER'S GAIETY

The Spirit of Play has gripped the city and turned its quiet streets and parks into noisy playgrounds alive with the active tramp of hundreds of busy little feet and the joyful whoops of youth unrestrained, blowing off steam in the form of frequent, suitably days that are pleasant even in retrospect. It is a joyful sight for those years as you pass it echoes in gusts and eddies from the fringes of vacant lots to busy roads and byways of the city, where they play and shout oblivious to the danger of whirring wheels of motor cars which threaten life and limb and it bubbles and ripples in carefree laughter of little ones for whom to whoop as had all other boys and girls two class rooms ahead in school. It is holiday time. Youth is having its fling, forgetful of the days that loom ahead of vacation, a selling will hem them in even while tears regarded between the curl past the windows.

In East Belleville playgrounds there an all the city council has outfitted a park you will see them clambering, climbing, swinging with gaspy heights. You will see mothing sitting by, hunting, with watchful eye for the little ones who romp and slide. You will see them busy building sand castles which in their imagination are peopled with strange forms dear to childish minds. You will see larger ones, and slightly larger ones playing "Cowboys and Indians" through agile contortions of only children and plaids that no can perform. There's one there he can't keep still a minute. He runs to the top of a swing support and dares the others to follow. Many dirty faces skip a step, but he slides slowly down again unharmed. He has been rewarded by rank, but he's a boy!

In West Belleville you will find more of them. They, too, romp and swing and play, and are attracted over as they swing on the swings and teeter on the boards.

Then too popsicles and long sand pails in grubby little fists. But instead little fists are attached at the other ends, little smiles with contrast with grubby faces and delight over nothing. A few of these are seen wandering around their shoes and stockings and wade through the grass and sandy playground in search of fun with new and then seem to get in the way. It is all adventure. It is glorious and exciting and enviable, to the older folk who have left it behind. Things were different when they were a boy but the spirit of youth has never lost its urge even if the years have rolled inexorably on.

CONJECTURING FATE OF WOLF

Tyendinaga Farmers have No Reports of Wolf Slaughter

There is conjecture in the uplands of Tyendinaga.

A "gray ghost" which stalked carefully, silently and with dignity, appeared with his loot of lambs from the sheep flocks of farmers in the second concession of Tyendinaga without leaving a trace to follow over the hard rocks. But perhaps died or gone away. But there remained the possibility that that section will point to the fact that some timber wolf is still in hiding after a series of raids, and then reappeared again late in August and fall to stock the rocks, over. Then, more lambs fell prey to his wide jaws. He is a cunning and swiftly and again carried off the carcass to the rocks, it is said Scoff at Theory.

Nearly a week ago there were reports that the animal had been killed. He was reported to have been run over by a motor car on the highway near Shannonville, however that district soon put to rest the theory "It was a dog that was run over; they declare," it is said with the cunning he has shown wouldn't calmly stand on the road side to be run over by any automobile," they add.

But he has gone, declares Mrs. Goodfellow, from whose farm the lambs were taken. "We haven't seen him for a long time." "Maybe he's dead. Volunteered a resident. "Maybe," agreed Mrs. Goodfellow, but there was doubt in her voice as she said it.

SPEED FINE MAY BE AT RATE 'BERRY A MILE'

William Johnson of Foxboro, appearing in the police court Wednesday morning charged with driving his car on North Front street, at the rate of 45 miles an hour, told Constable Mikel was of the opinion that the car should be run at that speed but after learning that the accused was a hard-working man, the matter had been found breaking the Highway Traffic Act before recommendation and fleeted out a fine of $3 and costs after warning the accused that in the future all speeders would be fined at the rate of $1.00 per mile.

Two sisters and a brother, of London, attended their engagements on the same day recently.

MRS. E. BARNEY ACQUITTED OF MURDER COUNT

which he was killed in her apartment in a struggle for a revolver with which Mrs. Barney had threatened to kill herself.

"It is conclusive evidence of her innocence that her own and Dr. Sinclair prints were not on the revolver. There is no evidence here upon which you could be asked to hang a cat."

Fine Defense Plea

At the beginning of his charge Justice Hunkin spoke of Mr. Sinclair's speech for the defense was the finest he had heard in a court of law.

Sir Patrick told the jurors they must not be influenced by scandalous stories of Mrs. Barney's life, which you could be asked to do and are not considering it," he said. "It is your duty to see if we have to admit that she had been living a life of shame, and that it must be unduly prejudiced by that."

He referred to Mrs. Barney's marriage to Mr. Barney, an American vaudeville actor, from whom she secured a divorce in 1930.

"Her life was tragic, tied to an unsympathetic husband who could not divorce because the law of this country would not let him," he said. "Whatever may have been the character of this man who is dead, he was her husband. The trial was given to the jury at 1.5 p.m.

Mrs. Barney Testifies

Mrs. Barney testified that she had been married to Mr. Barney twice and that Stephen, seizing her pistol from his hiding place, had started to leave the apartment when she pursued him.

The trial had attracted great crowds since Monday, when it began.

The defendant was discharged immediately after the murder verdict given, but Justice Humphreys, who presided, ordered that she be held. Old Bailey until the crowds had been cleared from the streets in the vicinity.

Collapses on Acquittal

When the verdict of the jury had acquitted her, Mrs. Barney collapsed in the prisoner's dock in the court room.

Mrs. Lucinda Barney, her mother, also collapsed, but was revived.

MEMBERS TOLD OF CONVENTION

Carl Read, Delegate, Gives Report at Kiwanis Luncheon

Before the smallest attendance in the history of the Kiwanis Club in Belleville, Carl Read, delegate to the International Convention, recently held in Detroit, gave a full account of the proceedings at the luncheon held on Tuesday at the Quinte Hotel.

George H. Griffin, secretary of the club, was also present at the convention but owing to the limited time, his report will be given at a later date. Carl Read gave a very appreciative of the splendid report which he had received and his statement was so expressed by Charles E. Hanna. Bernard A. Collins, the president, was in the chair at the meeting.

Carl Read attended every meeting of the convention and gave just a synopsis of the work, that was accomplished, and brought back many ideas, that could well be incorporated in the local club. He advised running a contest for achievement in which every member could take part. Such a contest was of the opinion, that the president was not much benefited by failure of a club but the individual members. Mr. Read advised the keeping in touch, with the clubs also by having at least a speaking contest in the club in which the members at separate luncheons would give a history of their clubs, which in time some members might know them better. The convention also asked for more interest in boys' work in the homes and in the future, that Kiwanis could well be that the members was willing to put into the organization. It is the meal and the good fellowship that counts in Kiwanis but what a member can give to the organization," said the speaker.

The address of George H. Ross was reviewed, who pictured a glowing future for Kiwanis and who advised the Kiwanis Clubs to talk over with the local members of Parliament their requirements and how best to remedy the same, regardless of political affiliations. Another speaker advocated a "back to the land" movement as the cure for unemployment. The three year plan was discussed at the convention and it is said that a pamphlet on the plan will be presented to the clubs.

The convention also advocated the promotion of junior Kiwanians to be selected from senior high school students based on their academic and character standing. They would belong to the club for three months and then another group would be taken in. The message of the new president of Kiwanis was given as a final watchword, "I can't, you can't but we can."

FROM AFRICA TOUR CANADA

Mr. and Mrs. Sharman Keenly Enjoy Beauties Of Country

From far away Basuland, South Africa, came Mr. R. C. Sharman, to catch his last sight on the grounds of the city tourist camp on Dundas Street over night, and gaze for the placid waters of the Bay of Quinte below him.

The scenery through this section of the country is marvellous", declared Mr. Sharman who had two months ago left Africa for England, accompanied by Mrs. Sharman and their small daughter, and from England made a visit to Canada landed in Canada with their motor car, which accompanied them to which they will make a transcontinental tour to the Pacific coast.

Reading Alberta they will stop over for a few days, while Mrs. Sharman visits some relations in that province.

"People, country—everything here is so nice to us and so kind to us here", declared Mr. Sharman as he started to unpack his kit for the evening's stay at the camp. Mrs. Sharman corroborated this. "We actually feel at home here, people are so good", she unhesitatingly declared. "And the country seems so nice and fresh after Africa. Of course we have scenery there, and all sorts of climate, but it does get so tiresome after you're there for awhile. We are enjoying our trip so much. Belleville, especially has been one of the nicest places we have been in. We're all in such good spirits."

And to prove that they really were in "good spirits" they departed in a little from custom in signing the visitor's register before they left. Instead of the usual note about good service and excellent locations" under "Remarks", they wrote "Everybody's Happy!"

Riverside Literary Club Closes With a Banquet

On Wednesday evening, June 29th the Riverside Literary Club held their closing exercises in the form of a banquet at the Maple School House. During the afternoon tables were set on the lawn under the maple trees but about 5.30 p.m. rain arrived which made it necessary to meet inside the school house. Despite the rain (which was badly needed) over two hundred and twenty five were in attendance. Tables were laid for one hundred and the members of the Literary Club were given honored seats at two of the prettily tables, adorned with roses and candies. These were headed by Rev. and Mrs. A. Deggett of Frankford. The President, Mrs. George Montgomery, Secretary Treasurer, Miss Ruth Gibson and Vice-President, Mr. David McCumber.

SIDNEY TOWNSHIP

FAREWELL PARTY FOR REV. AND MRS. BUTLER

Bayside—One of the most pleasant events of the season was enjoyed Monday eve at the beautiful home residence of Mr. and Mrs H Brown, when the friends of the community assembled to bid farewell to their pastor, Rev. J. R. Butler, who has so faithfully and ably carried on the work of Bayside Circuit during the past four years.

Rev. Mr. Butler has been actively engaged in the ministry for the past forty-two years, serving on important Circuits all over eastern Ontario and at the close of his Ministry, there are thousands of staunch true friends everywhere who extend to Mr. and Mrs. Butler their best wishes for a happy and peaceful time in their new home in Toronto.

Early in the evening Mr. Frank Reid who acted in the capacity of chairman brought the meeting to order and a delightful and entertaining hour was spent. Mr. Arthur L. Burke, Revs of Sidney presented and read the following address:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Butler:

Having a knowledge of your retirement from the active duties of the Christian Ministry, which you have exercised faithfully for so many years and that you are about to move from among us, we looked upon as home, we have met not to say good bye, but rather to express to you from our hearts' full thanks and appreciatin for the untselfish and faithful service carried on which you have ministered to the people of this community.

In every phase of community life you have followed the example of Him in service for others. Not only in the sick room, your presence has been a benediction but also in the comfort and good cheer have brought to many lonely and sorrowful homes and lives and stimulated others to greater and more useful service. To Mrs. Butler, your faithful companion you extended the helping hand and in the practice of "Do unto others" have sown the seed of hope and encouragement in the hearts of those who might otherwise have fallen by the way. In the hour of bereavement and sorrow your hand clasp has been a message of sincere sympathy. Words fail to express how well chosen, oftentimes fail to express our thoughts, but we remember in every affliction you understood and from the comfort of the heart, spoke words of consolation.

In following that great command "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel", You have fearlessly proclaimed the glorious truth and been a usefull instrument in God's hands of leading many souls unsaved to a knowledge of sins forgiven and of greater usefulness in the world.

What a satisfaction it must be to look back over the many years you have been called to the Ministry, for that were spent in the service of others. Surrounded by many kindly feeling, forgetful of self in an earnest desire to bring others God to your people and then to know that at the close of your Ministry, you are to be rewarded with many of the countless deeds of kindness and the noble part you have played in making this world a better place in which to dwell.

May the God that has sustained you and made you such a blessing throughout the years, still guide and comfort you in your new home.

Kindly accept this purse and bear always in ming that the best wishes of the people of Wesley shall be with you in the days ahead.

Signed on behalf of Wesley, Mr. and Mrs. F. Reid. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Denyer.

Miss Gladys Rollins, Principal of Bayside Collegiate has gone to her home for vacation.

Mr. Gordon Frost is erecting, (what will be on completion) one of the finest barns in Sidney.

Mr. Blake Hunt had a narrow escape from serious injury and possible death, when his horses ran away while attached to a disc harrow. Mr. Hunt was riding on the machine when the horses were frightened by a train and he was thrown off before he could get the horses under control. Fortunately, Mr. Hunt was thrown clear of the machine and escaped with a severe shaking up.

MARKET STREET TRAFFIC

One-way traffic on McAnnany Street and Market came on market days,—that is only eastbound traffic is allowed on the streets on those days—will serve to eliminate congestion on Front Street and to remove the great danger of accidents with cars moving in many directions and pedestrians crossing the street at and near the market. Council was well-advised to pass the necessary motion in this regard.

RECORD GOLD OUTPUT

Canada's production of gold continues to mount. This fact has particular significance in these days when gold standards have been so freely discussed. Canada is now second in the world gold recovery, $55,687,688 being the total in 1931.

THE FAST DRIVER

At the session at Belleville of the Dominion Board of Railway Commissioners, one of those appearing before the board told of the fast driver whom a curve will not stop. "The driver that dashes into trains at crossings" was the comment of one of the commissioners. Another representative remarked that "we try to protect these people from themselves."

It is almost seems that this type of driver cannot be eliminated. The reckless type accordingly has to be protected. They have to do it in such a way as to have regard for his foibles and shortcomings in driving.

SILENT PLACES NOISY

Lovely spots sacred to silence for the rest of the year now suffer the inroads of noisy vacationist and camper and holiday-er. The semi-wilderness in all its beauty is sometimes little less beautiful. For the good it has done the bodies and minds of the invaders. It would not be so bad if a trail of emptied tins, newspapers, cast-off clothes, cast-off tires and old campfires was not left. This is one of the objections to the invader. Fortunately there are many campers who do not threaten and leave a train of disorder in their wake.

EXAMINATIONS

Premier Henry ought to get a lot of new votes some day from the little boys and girls of this day when they grow up if he can wait so long for support. He does not see the all-importance of the written examination test, neither does the Department of Education nor does the scholar.

Ability to present one's knowledge to an examinee is of course valuable training but the method of it may also help shatter the constitution of the youngster who is worried over such brief tests of a whole year's work. Some children cannot put their knowledge down with pen and ink in a brief paper and to them the examination is a poor trial of scholarship and mental training.

Gradually the detested examination is losing its hold but no substitute for it in its entirety has been devised. It is to be hoped that an inventor of another system will soon present his discovery to the boys and girls of the province.

Possibly it may not be as hard to find this as to find a true test of latent gifts. "Many a gem of purest ray serene" does not take to-schooling and his wonderness is lost on the desert air of a school room he does not like. Some find their way to a greatness which the pedagogue never suspected of that within them and in a sphere undreamed of. Let education find this secret out early and much talent will be saved to the world and much waste of school drilling will be eliminated.

LO THE POOR PEDESTRIAN

The Pedestrian Rights Association has been formed to protect walkers from motorists and from themselves.

Pedestrians in Belleville no doubt often annoy motorists but motorists irritate pedestrians by their right turns at the intersection of Front and Bridge Streets. Pedestrians seem to have almost lost their rights in crossing the street, what with cars coming from one street and another to turn across the pedestrians' right of way. Many times walkers can do no more than reach the centre of the road before the left light is announcing the other traffic.

When the pedestrian follows the red light he should be protected from motor cars coming of the road on which the green light is showing. The pedestrian has the right of way but many motorists rarely allow pedestrians to go first, though the being able to redeem the campaign promises of "prosperity" and "no more" made so glibly four years ago, before the great bull market went flooey.

HEART OF GOLD
By Aline Michaelis

Life is a flower with a golden heart;
Though petal after petal drop away
As one by one the swift-winged years do depart,
Still something of its charm and fragrance stay.
As ever wider open falls the rose,
Still heavier, more potent grows its scent,
And rare, new loveliness the hours disclose,
Surpassing speech, yet strangely eloquent.

A flower is life; yet, as youth's petals fall,
And flying years reach out with eager clutch,
Time is defrauded;-he can not take all,
But only graces valued overmuch;
For not until the final leaves unfold
Does it reveal its matchless heart of gold.

FRANKLYN DELANO ROOSEVELT, Governor of the State of New York, was nominated by the Democrats as their candidate for President, at the Chicago convention; after a hard fight in which Alfred Emmanuel Smith, ex-Governor of New York, and another candidate four years ago, fought his former friend to the last ditch for the honour. Al. Smith is a child of the people, he was born on New York's East side, a lower East side all beholded newsboy, lifted himself by his bootstops up the ladder of success, with the aid of Tammany Hall and the fighting character which raised to be conquered. His marching song is "Sidewalks of New York" written by Mayor Jimmie Walker, and he now owns the tallest building in the line in Manhattan. Roosevelt is another fighter, his hardest battle being against spinal meningitis which left him a cripple and in a wheel chair for years. Even now he has to walk with a cane. His opponents say he is not strong enough for the exacting duties of President, but Roosevelt says "just watch me, and if you think I am a weakling just start something in person, and I'll show you." From the Democratic convention speeches it is certain that President Hoover and the Republican administration will be charged with the slump in prices and for allowing the Bulls to Bear the Wall Street market and take the fleece and the skins from so many little financial lambs in the country. Also, the battle cry of the Republicans when the Bull market was crashing into so many savings accounts was "Don't Sell the United States Short." Candidate Hoover's fighting slogan four years ago of a home of their own for every family, a radio in every home, a motor car for every family—vote Republican and the full goldlined dinner pail, etc—none of which came to pass, may verify, by a thousand to one backs. Thus, like curses, election promises come home to roost. In any event the contest will be a colorful one for Democrats and Republicans by both parties are pledged in favor of the International St. Lawrence waterway improvements.

TWO HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FIVE crippled children have been treated by Belleville Rotary clubs in medical and specialists. Many more have been examined. One hundred and seventy-five tonsil operations have also been performed and many eye and ear operations. Crippled children patients have been under treatment from three to five years. Is it any wonder that in the government's Public Welfare Department report Belleville Rotary is given fourth place in effective organizations engaged in the amelioration of the lot of the crippled children? Belleville Rotary, in point of population, would easily stand first.

HERBERT HOOVER and the Full Dinner Pail, having licked Al Smith to a frazzle, four years ago, must again call and his record of Full, and will have a tough bout with this Roosevelt person, who if he is anything like "Terrible Teddy, of San Juan Hill, and Oyster Bay," will put up a good scrap. Roosevelt fights on an out and out wet plank, while Hoover will have to balance himself on a bone dry, half dry plank, which makes for slippiness. Then Herb has the additional handicap of not being able to redeem the campaign promises of "prosperity" and "no more" made so glibly four years ago, before the great bull market went flooey.

GARBAGE COLLECTION

From the latest available returns, Toronto is the most expensive city in which regular garbage collection is provided. Thirty-six other cities of these have collections twice a week. Most of the remainder have weekly collections. Disposal of this material is carried out by a number of methods. Dumping is the most common, and is practised in 83 per cent. of these municipalities, but incineration is increasing. As the municipality increases in size and the cost of transportation to scarcer or more remote, this procedure generally follows 13 per cent. of the cities are now using incinerators. The cost of garbage collection is not excessive but is not so high as some people might imagine. The statistics from the 1931 municipalities show the average per capita cost at 90 cents per year. This varies from about $1.50 and $1.75 per residence figures being quite low when reviewed in the light of the service provided.—Ontario Health Almanac 1932.

THE NATIONAL BACKBONE

Canada has only one two-hundredmillion of population in the world and yet it is second in gold production, second in nickel, first in asbestos, second in aluminum, third in copper, third in lead, third in zinc, first in silver, first in nickel—and has high ranking in many other products.

Per capita, Canadians are by far the heaviest producers of wealth in the world.

This metallic stiffening of the national backbone is enabling Canada to stand firmly against a worldwide storm.

Canadian metal mines are high grade in character, large in proportions and low in production costs. Canadian metal mine labor is highly efficient.

Canada's gold production is estimated, will approximate 41 to 43 millions of dollars in 1932 and between 45 and 55 millions in 1933. Canadian gold mines average the richest in the world, their gold ore deposits are of a remarkable rate, and a great number are now being developed ahead.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

NEVER BETTER

Alberta may properly give thanks that crop conditions are so promising. Never since this became a grain-producing province has the outlook been more attractive. Never been more attractive. The stimulating feature is that the crop prospects apply to every section of Alberta, not to certain favored areas. With generous moisture to assure germination and to carry the grain well into July, average weather conditions will make certain a heavy yield. At the same time, hay and pasture will be plentiful, so that cattle, sheep and horses will thrive. In short, with average luck, this should be a banner year in general producing year.—Calgary Herald.

FUNCTIONS OF HUMAN BLOOD MAKE STUDY

Rate of Coagulability of Blood Is Variable

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph. D. Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

In 1626 Harvey discovered that the blood flows in the blood tubes, in other words, that it goes, once, once only, as part of the body to another and directly or indirectly nourishes all the tissues. In 1836 Dr. Karl Lanst-ther, assoc ciate of Rockefeller Institute in New York City, received the Nobel Prize for research on his researches on blood, particularly for his work on the coagulability, or clotting powers, of the blood.

Thus for three hundred years scientists have studied and analyzed the blood, and to this day there remains much concerning its properties and its functions which they do not like to know.

Indeed, the way this vital and life-giving fluid pervades the entire body is a real cause for wonderment—in its organs but also reaches into the cells, as proved by most fascinating story. In the whole realm of human knowledge will be more interesting. In fact, if we take the trouble to study the life of the special activities of our bodies we are amazed to discover how the social order is governed.

Blood, of course, looks red. This is due to a red coloring matter called haemoglobin, which is carried by, and, indeed, painted in the blood, the red corpuscles.

The composition of blood is not as simple as it appears. However, it is highly complex, especially in its cellular structure. Besides the red corpuscles there are also white ones, and, in addition, a number of "blood-plates", all floating in a transparent and slightly yellowish fluid called blood serum.

These solid substances in the blood, however, are extremely microscopic in size. It has been estimated that in a single drop of normal blood there are approximately five hundred thousand blood plates. Red blood cells number, on the average, three-thousand-two-hundredths of an inch. The white blood cells are somewhat larger than the red, but still mighty small.

Red corpuscles are round discs and are biconcave, that is, they have a central depression on each side. As already stated they carry haemoglobin and this is the coloring oxygen, which is taken up from the lungs as the blood passes through its tiny tubes. The heart then pumps the oxygen-laden blood throughout the body. It is in the lungs also that the carbonic acid, or waster, carried by the blood cells, is given off, or sent off and later exhaled. The more oxygen there is in the red cell, the brighter the blood looks.

The white blood cells have been referred to as the "policemen of the blood" because they have the special function of defending the invasion of disease germs. In pus from a boil there are millions of white cells which have been destroyed in this process.

While blood cell vary in shape, they are also numerous in the red cells. There is approximately one white corpuscle to every four hundred red cells. The white cells play a highly important role in the blood coagulating.

The plasma of the blood is a watery substance containing the digestive or suspension the nutritive elements derived from food, as well as waste products taken up by the tissues. Among these may be mentioned proteins, fats, sugars, and various salts.

The rate of coagulability of the blood differs in different people. In some it is prolonged, especially in the condition known as "Hemophilia Disease" or "Haemophilia". Here the coagulability of the blood is so low even a slight crutch wound may become a source of danger from hemorrhage.

There is much more to be said about blood than can be crowded into this article, but there are many books which may be obtained at the library on non-medical, that are readily understood.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE FILM.

The film is part of a nation's heritage. A child-rank gentleman two week after week in which vulgarity and crime are displayed unchallenged if the intellect of the audiences is flagrantly fouled, if morality value is discarded either blatantly or with a certain guile, the mental tone of the people will inevitably suffer deterioration. We are told that children are not genuinely so much affected by the "pictures" as some would suppose. Probably that is the case. But imagine the mentality as a man of the boy who from hunger years has been nothing on the screen but what is purveyed from Hollywood or Broadway.—Belleville Intelligencer.

NEWARK FACES HARD TASK ON COMING TRIP

Team Not so Hot When Playing Off Home Pasture

LEAFS WIN

Take 11 Inning Tussle From Rochester Red-wings

(By Clay Tabot, Associated Press Writer).

Leading the parade by a game and a half, the Newark Bears today faced an important road trip, that may decide whether they can win the International League pennant.

Notoriously hard to beat on their home grounds, the Bears' first road trip was no unalloyed success. Their trip into the north, starting at Montreal today, does not promise an important bearing on the race.

Al Mamaux's hopefuls closed their home stay yesterday by whipping the Jersey City Skeeters twice, 3-2 and 5-0. Welch and Jones staged a pitchers' duel in the first game although neither was able to finish. Welch stayed around until one was out in the ninth and then gave way to Jim Shaver, who stopped a threatening Jersey City rally. Harry Rolselaw gave the Skeeters all they in the second clash but was extremely effective with men on base. The fielding of Jesse Hill and Forrest Jensen was the feature of the day.

The two Newark ace-holders collected seven hits, including three doubles, a triple and a home run and drove in eight of Newark's 10 runs.

Buffalo dropped a 6-3 decision to the Montreal Royals. Buffalo slugged Joe Bloomer and Roy Bergstrom for 12 hits including home runs by Hoyle, Hogan and Bergen. Bill Werber kept Buffalo in the game by collecting two singles and leading a Bison attack, that collected only five hits off Lefty Walter Brown.

A double by Rodbrock and a single by Schiltz and another double by Poser gave Toronto two runs in the ninth to win, 3-2, over Baltimore and the Rochester Red Wings.

Hal Schulte, in his first full for the winners, allowed only six hits and struck out five. Schulte pitched well for the Red Wings until he collapsed in the 11th.

Reading and Baltimore had an open date.

B.A.A.A. KIDS IN PLAYOFF

Defeat "Crystalacs" by Score of 13-6 to Assure Place

By winning from the Crystalac Juniors by the score of 13 to 6 the champion B.A.A.A. kids assured themselves of a play off berth in the Intermediate Junior Series at the Fair Grounds last evening.

The Baseball Kids "Bad End" kids pressed the champs until the dying innings. Then the Crystalac youngsters went to work and bagged seven of their 13 runs in the last three innings to win. Wilkins led the field for the winners and pitched steady ball. Batteries: Wilkins and Smith; nine scattered hits Manager Art Thomas was hurried to the limit to try and stop the onslaught of hits coming from the Baseball Kids' Crystalac but without avail. Rigby started on the hill top for the Crystalacs and gave way to Hall, who was replaced in the last innings by Ray Bird. The B.A.A.A. youngsters collected 15 well timed hits from the offerings of the three opposing pitchers, many of them bunched for extra bases, and the McGuire did the catching for the B.A.A.A. while Don Thomas handled the backstop duties for the "Lac" buriers. Besides catching a stellar game Thomas was the best battery for the losers, were the lithe fielding of their keystone duo, Smith, Wilkins, Walshe and Ernie Smith were the best assimilths for the B.A.A.A. aggregation.

The B.A.A.A. kids play in Wellington on Friday evening and meet the Moose juniors a double header at the Fair grounds on Saturday. If the Association kids manage to win two of these, then games they will be assured of first places in their loop having lost but two games to date.

The lineup:

CURRENT SPORT
Knocks and Boosts

There are fish stories and then again there are fish stories. As a rule the best fish story is about "the one that got away" but believe me, I have just heard a fine fish story about the one that was caught and then mysteriously disappeared.

It seems that on Saturday last a fishing party was arranged by one of Belleville's ex-star hockey players in order to entertain some Americans friends, who were here over the holiday. The host of the party then took them over to his camp on Muscote Bay and later ordered out in the boat his American friends just how large Canadian bass grew. The party quickly made their appearance of bass, good sized ones too, and then decided to return to camp. It seems that during their fishing excursion the fishermen tied the fish caught on the end of a cord and let them trail behind so that they would be handy. The host, in his excitement, when starting the boat motor forgot the fish, which had been caught and tied to the boat with the result, that the vibration of the propeller cut the cord and when the party arrived at camp the fish were still swimming around in their native haunts in the beautiful bay of Muscote. "Tough luck, we cnils it."

There is a current rumor about town to the effect that Johnnie Walker, Toronto's grand old man of swimming, will coach Tommy Pedder of Belleville for the big C.N.E. event this year at Toronto. Walker must think Belleville's young swimming star has a chance to set up a splash in Toronto, also the Canadian Olympic committee at Los Angeles this summer. Even Percy Williams, Canada's pride, will wear a made in Belleville bathing suit in the coming Olympic games. To receive an order to outfit the entire Canadian Olympic team with blazers is one of no mean ability and the Dearen Shirt Company are to be congratulated on their efforts. May they turn out a blazer which will be worn by Canada's world's champions.

The town baseball league in Lindsay which is being sponsored by Harry Pringle, late of Belleville and Joe Fraser, formerly of the Nickel Belt League, is going over in a big way. "Tubby" Williamson, former outfielder for the Lindsay "Merchants" and late catcher, "Jerky" Logan, are still in the harness and are bringing to produce future senior ball players for the "Merchantmands". If the project is carried through Lindsay will be back in the C.O.B.L. inside of two years. More power to those behind the issue.

In order to catch up with their schedule games which were postponed on account of rain the local junior loop are playing a game on Friday evening and three games on Saturday afternoon. Should the B.A.A.A. kids will meet the Moose juniors in a double header on Saturday afternoon at the Fair Grounds.

Belleville's pride, Lionel "Gunner" Arnaut, is a visitor to the city this week. "Gunner" brings back word about the days when Belleville Maroons had things pretty much their own way in Eastern Ontario, not only in hockey but baseball as well. Oh well, the days remain and the days go and then Belleville will once again take her rightful place in the realm of sport.

Catcher Bill Dickey found that fighting in the big leagues does not pay. He was indefinitely suspended yesterday for soaking Bill Reynolds of the Senators on the jaw. Manager Gibson's Pirates are the surprise team of the big leagues this year. Gibson seems to have worked miracles with the Buccaneers and all Canadian sportsmen are pulling for Georgy Gibson's Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League. (More power to him).

The Cobourg Ponies are playing at Belleville this afternoon while the Belleville seniors battle the Kingston Penies.

SASKATOON LILY IS GRANTED A DIVORCE

RENO, Nev., July 6.—(AP)—Ethel Caldwerood Hilliard, known throughout Canada as the "Saskatoon Lily" and a former Olympic athlete, was granted a divorce in the 1928 Olympic stadium in Amsterdam, Holland, in the woman's high jump, was divorced on grounds of non-support here Tuesday. Hilliard, Lilian Hilliard of Toronto.

The divorce action was tried last October, but Mrs. McLaren declined to proceed at the time, saying that her residence in Nevada would jeopardize her chances to represent Canada in the coming Olympic games. She refused to discuss her plans in Canada yesterday, however, said that she was in training.

The marriage of Mrs. McLaren were secretly married in November 1929, in San Francisco last December, it was announced at that time she obtained her divorce she was to be married to Byron Mitchell, socially prominent there.

MAX BAER SCORES 20 RD. DECISION

King Levinsky, Chicago is Victim in Bruising Battle

Reno, Nev, July 5—Max Baer, California heavyweight, scored a 20 round decision over Julius Levinsky of Chicago in a bruising battle here yesterday.

Baer, sharp, Californian scored effectively all the way with a damaging right hand attack to win referee George Blair's decision. There was no dissension at the verdict, as Baer piled up a big lead throughout the bout.

A crowd of approximately 8,000 fans turned out for the fight. It was Baer's second victory over the former flail peddler of Chicago, Levinsky having won a decision over New York last year.

LOWLY LEAFS ON SHORT END

Belleville Fruit Girls Move up to Second Place By Win

GRETA GARBO IN "AS YOU DESIRE ME" NEXT AT BELLE

Following close upon the heels of her brilliant success in "Grand Hotel," Greta Garbo makes her latest appearance on the screen in "As You Desire Me," filmization of the widely discussed Luigi Pirandello play which was presented on Broadway last season. The picture will open at the Belle tomorrow for two days, matinee daily.

"As You Desire Me" is Miss Garbo's seventeenth production in this country, marking the close of her sixth year on the screen since 1926 when she was brought from Sweden to the United States to make her debut in "The Torrent."

George Fitzmaurice, responsible for such cinema successes as "Mata Hari" and "Strangers May Kiss," directed the new Garbo film and is said to have mounted the picture with a wealth of beautiful settings and natural backgrounds.

Resembles Lost Wife

In "As You Desire Me," Miss Garbo plays the role of a Budapest cafe entertainer whose remarkable resemblance to a woman believed to be dead brings about an amazing dramatic conflict. Melvyn Douglas, who played opposite Gloria Swanson in "Tonight or Never," has the leading male role as the Italian nobleman, Erich Von Stroheim accepts Zara, the cafe singer, as the wife whom he believes to have been killed by invaders during the World War. The renowned character actor, Erich Von Stroheim, enacts the role of Salter, a malignant novelist, who seeks to turn Zara from her wrestling free of his lecherous grasp. An important role is also filled by Owen Moore as the manager of Zara's cafe in the cafe scenes her to masquerade as another man's wife.

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Summer Time is Reducing Time

Fat cells are at their weakest in warm weather. They're off their guard; that's the time to catch 'em and slay 'em. Appetite lacks gnawing pangs, gets along with tidbits of groceries. The lady with the roller-like figure, whose robe heaves her chest whenever she meets a female friend who sports standard weight, might just as well do it now. The bustle won't be terrible. She'll win.

The average diet of today contains too much fat. Pastries are rich with butter and lard. Vegetables are simmering in fat. Butter is used generously on bread. A hard working man needs only two tablespoonfuls of butter a day for the well being of his body. The plump gal's diet as well as her figure, will be the better for a smaller allotment of greasy substances.

It isn't wise to completely eliminate carbohydrates—the sugars and starches. They burn up body fat, and prevent acidosis which in some times the result of a starvation diet. That doesn't mean that the candidate for the reedy slimpy figure can tooth it straight through a box of chocolates or dash three teaspoonfuls of sugar into her coffee. She can get sugar by eating fruits, raw or cooked. Candy is concentrated food. A little goes through.

When reducing drink plenty of water. It is necessary to carry away the corpses of the poor slaughtered fat cells.

Cottage cheese, buttermilk and lean meats will supply protein, and won't put on an ounce of weight. Many vegetables can be included in this class of weight-defeating foods—asparagus, spinach, onions, tomatoes, cauliflower, string beans, cabbage and cucumbers. It is not fried. Potatoes are excluded. All fruits except bananas and candied alligator pears.

Green salads are among the best of reducing agents. Make the dressing of lemon juice and mineral oil. The "Just Reducing" diet book is clear. Cereals are not good. One egg a day is permissible.

What the bilbery girls don't realize is that their need about half as much food as a thin individual. The extra thickness of fat that blankets the bones acts as heat insulating medium, so that body heat is lost slowly. By cutting down special viands that create this fatty covering, adipose coatings of muscles and fibers will gradually weaken.

A normal, active woman of average weight, needs about 2,500 calories a day. A woman who is overweight needs less than half that number.

Reducing is speeded up by exercise, though in excessive hot weather that may prove depleting and depressing. But a three-mile walk every day is no hardship. It is what every human creature should have, fat or thin.

The right mental state is necessary for reducing. By that we mean that the usual indulgent "take-things-easy" attitude won't get the reducer anywhere. She must be determined to win out. And she must keep herself highly energized.

The Marry-Go-Round

Some modern women might save a lot of money, by ordering their orchids direct from the cat-load and buying season tickets to Reno, with return stop-overs at Niagara Falls.

The first thing that Amelia Earhart did, after flying the Atlantic was to run down to a millinery shop and buy herself a new hat. A woman is always a woman!

Perhaps the worst fate, for an idealistic girl, is to go through life looking for a Lancelot or a Don Quixote and to succeed in finding only a Don Juan.

HOW TO TRAIN YOUR CHILD

BY

Constance Cameron

Threats — Which are Quickly Forgotten.

(By Constance Cameron)

To my mind parents who threaten children show an emotional and transitional mental weakness, and a gross incompetency, not only in dealing with the child himself, but in handling life in general.

If something is to be done about misconduct or the breaking of household rules, the sane, well-balanced parent does it, and does it NOW. The weak, undecided, inefficient parent THREATENS to do something—and usually never goes through with it.

And in doing so, he takes a child long to discover that a threat is just so much "hooey." And feeling perfectly sure of this fact, it comes to have no meaning to him whatever. It is but a momentary annoyance or a second of suspended play, dismissed with a shrug.

Giving Fair Warning

I do believe in giving a child a fair warning as to his conduct. For instance if a boy were throwing a ball so that it was inclined to break a couple of windows, it would be quite in order, indeed to tell him that unless he threw the ball in a different manner he couldn't harm anything the ball would be taken away from him for the rest of the day. That is only stating the rules of the game. Then if he continued to throw the ball near the windows it would be taken from him as he had been told it would. That isn't threatening. That is only playing fair on both sides.

A simple statement of what can or cannot be done is appreciative to good home and child management. A quiet but firm carrying out of the results stated as a penalty for infringement of that rule is justifiable. But a threat of something to happen in the future — usually forgotten or allowed to slide—makes for bad discipline which eventually leads into no discipline at all. And the child is not to blame. He is used to words that bring no consequences! And you may be sure he will see how far he can go when he once gets that thought firmly in his mind.

Correct Manners

BEST MAN'S PRESENT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please advise me if it is proper and in order for the best man at a wedding to present a wedding gift to those being married? I know these two people only through a church connection and do not associate with them except when in contact with them in church.

N.

Yes, the best man should send a wedding present to the bride-to-be. Even if you know these people as slightly as you say, you have been given such a definite honor by being invited to have such an important position in the wedding party that it would seem thoroughly out of order for you not to send a wedding present.

(Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers).

Kill all Flies

and Mosquitoes Quickly by A Perfumed Mist Based on

Japanese Flowers

There is a spray based on an extract of Japanese flowers. It was developed at Mallon Institute of Industrial Research by Rex Research Fellowship. Ten years and over $100,000 have been spent in perfecting it.

The name is Fly-Tox. When used in a new-type Fly-Tox sprayer, it fills the room with a cloud of perfumed mist, harmless to people, stainless to anything.

But that flower extract is deadly to flies and mosquitoes. It kills them quickly at a touch. And they can't escape if Fly-Tox is used right—to fill the whole room with that floating mist.

Fly-Tox, at a cost of 1 or 2 cents, rids a room completely of these deadly pests.

This is the latest, most efficient, most economical way to free your home—and keep it free—from these germ-bearing insects. They contaminate all foods they touch —infect when they bite. They destroy over 50,000 lives per year, mostly lives of children. Employ it liberally and often to be safe.

FLY-TOX ONLY

A Rex Research Product

Use Fly-Tox only, and always in a new-type Fly-Tox sprayer. Then every stroke will release into the air some 150,000 particles of spray.

Fly-Tox is efficient beyond all compare. It is all-pervading, quick and economical. Every lot is tested on flies in our laboratory. Its potency is guaranteed by every delivery. Use nothing less efficient when the safety of your home is at stake. Fly-Tox is sold everywhere throughout the world. Harmless to people. Stainless. Fly-Tox is made in Canada.

ALL STOCKS SHOW GAIN

Oil Group Does Not Respond to Higher N.Y. Market

Toronto, July 6—Toronto Stock Exchange market was steady this morning with prices of prominent shares showing gains of fractions to a point. The exception in this generally good undertone was the oil group, which despite buoyancy in New York, appeared heavy locally. Higher bids invariably met with quick offerings and prices declined back again. Prices of the leaders were unchanged to fractions lower while in the Industrial and Utility list Brazilian, Montreal Power, C.P.R., F. N. Burt, Ford of Canada, Fleet Harvey Tubes were trading on a point higher. Consolidated Smelters at 39 was up a point and the equal of its recent high on the recovery.

International Nickel settled in the second hour showing a small loss at 15¾.

Goodyear Tire Preferred came out at 74, up 2 points above its previous close.

MINE BOARD AGAIN ACTIVE

Golds Continue to Provide Leadership and are up

Toronto, Ont., July 6— Despite early irregularity resulting from some lack of buying interest, trading again predominated on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market at midday today.

Golds continued to provide leadership, Lake Shore selling up 50 at 2.30, Pioneer, at 2.C. 30 at 1.70, Hollinger at 19 at 8.10 and Home 3 at 11.35. Wright-Hargreaves improved 5 to 2.70 but Teck Hughes and McIntyre were steady.

Among coalgazer issues Ventures advanced 3 to 34 and Sylvanite 2 cent to 30 Howey and Moss closed a cent on the light side. In the penny section Amo and Tashota were active and firm at fractional higher.

Eldorado eased a couple to 81.36 and International Nickel slightly below last night at $5.25. Noranda was up 10 to $14.50 however and Sherritt Gordon added another scope to recent gains to sell at 3.20.

In the oil group Olga was active and 2 higher at 22 but Ajax and Consolidar Pete showed small recessions.

POLICE COURT

Michael Coules of Renfrew County, appeared in the police court Wednesday morning, charged with being intoxicated in a public place. Coules was arrested late last night by Constable Taylor in an allegedly drunken condition on the front of the Globe Cafe. As Coules could not afford to pay a fine he will spend the next ten days in the county jail.

J. W. Fyles of Point Anne, appeared in the court on a similar charge but pleaded guilty to the Provincial Police at Point Anne, last night. He was fined $10 and costs or a few days to allow him time to collect the necessary money together.

SHAMROCKS WIN FROM AIRMEN

Fliers Score All Their Runs in First Four Innings

TRENTON, July 6.—(Special)—The R.C.A.F. suffered another defeat at the hands of the Shamrocks here on Tuesday night when they were beaten by a score of 14 to 3. The airmen were unable to score at all during the first four innings of the game in the fifth they were able to get their runners across the plate to two in their half of the seventh. The Shamrocks had no trouble in the matter of scoring runs as they tallied in every inning of the match. Graham hit the only homer of the game in the second inning. Colletta started in the box for the Flyers but injured his hand in attempting to stop a hot one in the second inning and was replaced by Winder. Coughlin was on the mound for the Shamrocks, as they were taking no chance after being beaten by the Millionaires last week. Several of the Flyers, that have been on the team have been released due to the fact, that a number of the men are away on summer vacation. The change seems to be for the better, as they had never been able to score even five runs previous to this. Letters from England

From Mr. G. M. James for His Former Student in Everywhere

No 11.

The days here are bright and fairly warm but mornings and nights are decidedly chilly for summer. The various hotel rooms are not heated as they should be in view of the amount paid by the visitors. The same was true in London in a considerable extent. I have repeatedly complained that all guests are not Eskimos.

During my preliminary skirmish about Edinburgh like a dog or a cat in a strange place. I was confronted by an incident that from many standpoints has an unusual interest for me. Almost on the very spot where my feet first touched the pavement of this historic city (near the National Art Galleries) I beheld an old street mother (she reminded me or my own departed mother) preaching so humbly and eloquently to a reverent, listening, motley crowd. "Come home, you are welcome home. Salvation is free or the rich would live and the poor would die. I am no-body at all, just an old washerwoman but I expect to enter the pearly gates and abide in a beautiful City of Gold with my Saviour whom I love and serve."

This dear old lady was inspired from above and held her listeners spellbound. I think it was something like Pentecost. Her language was amazingly eloquent in its simple and sincere appeal. I had never heard before quite appropriately. She was reverently dressed in a long black cloak, severely plain. About one hundred yards away at the immortal Scott overlooking in his stately monument. If he could have heard his kinswoman I am sure he would have been proud of her talent and loving devotion.

Bit by bit I am solving my problem: "Why do Scotsmen hold the position they do?" Scotland is the nation having such mothers and washerwomen cannot help but be leaders in a hundred ways. "Scotsmen who are men," will honour," saith the Lord.

A few yards away from the saintly washerwoman was another speaker, a man of quite a different type. He was a typical Glasgow man, shabbily dressed, was soliciting bets on the horse races now being run at Ascot near Windsor in England.

"I am your friend. I would not deceive a working man. Give me six pence (five cents) now and you will receive back to you twenty times that amount. You cannot lose."

This young man implied indirectly that he had inside information and could name the winners. It is not necessary for me to point out that winning horses are rarely picked out in this way before the event and that this fellow was not a friend of the working man's best fund. As far as I could discover, no person was caught by this fakir. The Scotsman is on the battle of life because he is not a fool in the common sense.

Princess Street, Edinburgh, is not only one beautiful street in the world but also the most wonderful. It runs east and west and is a wide like Broadway in New York. On one side one's mind is carried to the books then and back on the other side one beholds the new part of the city built of beautiful stone.

On the south side of Princess Street is a park sloping sharply down to railway tracks and up again still more sharply to Edinburgh Castle, and the old of the old. The park is a veritable garden of the most beautiful park composed of trees, flowers, grass and promenades and is in the form of a deep ravine with a little river and lake. As one looks at the north side of Princess Street is a large cuckoo clock ten feet in diameter in the form of a flower bed. The hours are indicated by the different colours of the large round flowers. The clock stands on the ground, are coverdl with small flowers. This clock strikes the hour and is the other remarkable cuckoo clock that I have ever seen.

Edinburgh is uniformly built of stone with slate shingles and although there are apparent differences in structure, in general it is like the motley touches of color so apparent elsewhere in these islands are absent. This drab uniformity is in keeping with the climate which is described by the natives as consisting of winter and three months of very bad weather, mostly rain. Of course the real reason is that the public buildings is very plentiful chose building.

On a fine afternoon we took one of the famous SIR WALTER bus tours around the city visiting the points of interest. We started from Sir. Andrew's Square a block north SCOTT'S MONUMENT. of Princess Street. This square is said to correspond to the famous corners in London (Bank of England, Royal Exchange, etc.). Already described as called the "Lombard Street of Edinburgh" because of their banks and other wealthy institutions. The bus glided down a slope and Scott's beautiful monument on Princess Street. Scott is seated in a chair of stone, sitting in a chair all of white marble while above is a canopy of richly carved work, resting on an altar, the whole being a beautiful piece of street level. Spiral steps inside lead to the top. Various figures carved on the monument represent characters in Scott's novels. The monument is the finest of its kind that we ever saw and shows that Scotland pays filling tribute to talent and merit. Princess Street National Gallery and Academy are built on a hill (to the south) which leads to Edinburgh Castle. The inner or citadel part of the castle covers seven acres, but the outer castle, which is now used for parade acres, all so strongly fortified by walls, height and position that it has been considered safe since its long history. Many times it withstood several times. The castle consisting of a dozen or more parts is built on a solid rock two hundred and fifty feet above the level of Princes street level. You must pass through seven gates to enter the citadel or main part. Then you visit buildings dating back to 1434 where Mary Queen of Scots lived. The Crown of Scotland with the Stone of Scone was born, where banquets were held and where the Scottish crown, sword and sceptre may be seen. Here also are the regalia of Scotland or numerous as those already seen and described in the Tower of London. The various rooms we visited are filled with relics of Scotland's fort and cheriries beyond description. The most important building by far is Edinburgh Castle is the Scottish National War Memorial which exhibits the war relics, and memorial tablets for every branch of the service and includes not only the Scottish War, 1914-1918 and the Great War, 1939-1918 but several previous wars of Scotland. Almost the first object that meets your gaze as you enter this building is a tall cenotaph of Scottish granite surmounted by a figure of victory of glittering medals on his breast. His chief vocation is to see that irreverent visitors take off their hats.

THE FINE building shows thrift because it is com-HATS OFF posed largely of material which formerly stood on the same sight. Fine new IN WAR stone has been worked into the main entrance, corners MEMORIAL and memorial chapel. Nothing has been wasted, nothing and makes the best of all that lies within his grasp. There is not nearly as much sentimentality connected with war memorials as young people as in England and not more as far as I have seen than in Ontario. There is more stress placed on the future than on the survival of the fittest.

Edinburgh Castle is now merely a "Show Place" with sixty soldiers as a guard and splendid views of the city are obtained from the Castle walls and buildings. From here we went along the "Royal Mile" or "One Mile Street" (really High Street), Canon Gate church, and then Presbyterian, then Anglican and now Presbyterian again. In the distant past the poor had to bring a friend to sit on an end stool. Jeanie Geddes was one but faithful worshipper in those days and she was devoted to Calvinism. When her minister read a proclamation from the pulpit proclaiming new doctrines, she promptly let fly her stool at his head. The Scotsman has clear, well defined doctrines in religion and will suffer if need be for them. Like the Irish and the Welsh there are two landmarks of much interest. One is the "Mercat Cross" where executions took place including that of Montrose. The other is a small brass tablet in the street pavement marking the spot where John Knox lies buried since 1572.

Continuing our journey we passed the house where Robbie Burns lived for four years, where Sir Walter Scott was born and where John Knox lived over a shop. Then we passed the house where the last prince of Scotland's nobility, but it is now the slum district. The streets are narrow and dirty and the houses old and out of date. Many old-ered washings fluttered frequently far above our heads as we passed along.

Finally we reached Holyrood Palace built in the form of a square on level ground. There are tall towers on each side of the entrance and a large open court of lawn in the centre within. This palace is in perfect repair and is often occupied for short periods by our King and Queen. We were shown through many of their state rooms and found them to be very comfortable and life grandest we had ever seen. In an unusual part we saw the historical apartments occupied by Mary Queen of Scots, her bed and bed room as she left it, her tiny supping room where her secretary, David Rizzio, was seized by companions of her jealous husband, Lord Darnley, and murdered and the spot marked by a brass plate where they left the body. This was a most interesting visit in many Ways. We saw many fine old oil paintings, much wonderful old furniture and antiques.

CHEERY IT is the custom in England and Scotland to pay a small fee to enter all rooms of interest. It is also SMILE FOR the custom to give your special guide for each room ALL IN SCOTIA or department a small tip. In Scotland the recipient always gives you a cheery smile and "Thank You." In some other places we have known he looks at the tip gloomily as if to say "Not nearly enough, begone I'm frightfully bored." Just think. Once I asked myself the question: "Why do Scotsmen hold all the best jobs in the world?"

Like ancient Rome, this lovely city is built on seven hills and throughout our tour we saw them all and saw Edinburgh from every side.

We passed the Royal Infirmary (Hospital which has two thousand beds and six hundred nurses, all absolutely free to rich or poor.

I forgot to mention that at Holyrood Palace I saw the original letter written by Mary Queen of Scots to the King of France the night before her execution. It is a pathetic letter, the ending of a more pathetic life.

The city of Edinburgh has a population of four hundred and twenty thousand, about one-half the population of Toronto and one-third that of Montreal. Like these two Canadian cities it has many fine looking, well-dressed young people and fewer general shame-the-looking, well-dressed young people and fewer general shame-less signs of joy, friendship and prosperity. We feel as much at home as in Toronto or Montreal. The taxi busses are similar to those in London but much newer in appearance. Double decki street (electrcars) run all-over the city and there are busses like ours but none of the monsters like in London.

The stores on Princess Street close at one on Saturday but the rest remain open. A small cottage built of stucco (rough cast) in the suburbs costs from three five thousand dollars and larger two story houses built of stone the size of most of those in Bellevile would cost much more. The cost of meals, clothing and other necessities of life are about the same as in Belleville or in some cases a little less.

We visited the National Art Gallery and found only one picture which we had ever heard of before: "Girl with broken pitcher" by Greuze which did not impress us as favourably as our reprints of this picture. The other pictures (quite numerous) were, well lighted and well arranged. Our guide was particularly eager to be sure we saw the Lorimer (three galleries). They were unknown to us because they concerned chiefly celebrities of Scotland not famous in Canada (generals), religious and legendary or mythical subjects were also numerous and in every case excellent in every particular. The people of Scotland may well be proud of those art treasures.

We next took a tour through Scott's country ex-YOUR THRU tending for one hundred miles in a circle around SCOTTISH Edinburgh and back again. With COUNTRY few exceptions the country is much like rural England. The land already described. Here and there are taloes, turnips, barley and oats, many sheep and a few cattle (Ayrshires). The soil of Scotland is naturally poor but has been transformed that the land is more and more going out of cultivation and returning to pasture. The hedges and stone walls are kept in good repair and carefully cultivated wherever that was done. Practically all the soil up to the Grampian Mountains (northern part of Scotland) is under cultivation or supervision. The country is fine much more waste-land both in England and Scotland. Two bad weeds are much in evidence namely the Canada thistle and the wild mustard in the spring crops such as oats and barley. The fences in Scotland are better than in England and are almost entirely renewed from the fields but there are also a few hedge fences. Trees are plentiful and just as beautiful as in any part or rural Ontario.

We passed a few coal mines where great quantities of waste material were piled up. We passed Bothwick Castle, the oldest castle in Scotland still inhabited and from which Mary Queen of Scots escaped on horseback to the castle of her supporter, Lord Hepburn.

Gorse or broom is a low wild shrub very common in both England and Scotland. It grows to a height of about three feet, branches out, give the landscape a bright, cheerful appearance. The flower is similar in shape to our sweet pea, as it belongs to the legum family. We were bringing some of the seeds.

We came to Abbotsford House on the River Tweed. It was built by Sir Walter Scott and for many of his last years he lived here. It is now owned by descendants, also called Sir Walter Scott. The present owner is not a literary man but lives on the three thousand dollars a year he receives in fees from visitors.

Wild flowers are rather scarce in Scotland but I found an interesting one growing by the roadside which I had never seen before. It was a variety of wild geranium. Ferns similar to ours in appearance are common and beautiful.

The highways in Scotland are about the same as ours and busses run at about the same speed, about thirty-five miles an hour.

WHERE GREAT We left Edinburgh in the early afternoon and passed through a lovely country of green fields, high hills and many trees. Our driver stopped on a IMMORTALS high hill overlooking a beautiful valley and told us that it was twenty LIE miles around it. "This was Scott's favorite view and he drove here frequently," he explained. "Sometimes he would walk and sometimes the horses from long habit stopped." As our driver gave us this information, I decided that any person might be similarly enchanted. Scott was a genius and knew how to appreciate beauty. And he wrote.

Later in the day we came to Dayburgh Abbey, an interesting ruin, where Queen Margaret, wife of King Malcolm, the chief commander in the World War, are buried. It will be proof of those heroes at the time of the great resurrection morn.

Another important ruin was at Melrose Abbey, another ghastly ruin, which exerted such a powerful influence on Scott's romantic imagination. The illustrious past was very much in our minds but the present was not left out of sight. We passed a flock of sheep of 1,000 head and we saw coal mines, not very beautiful, and factory towns full of high chimneys and dirty smoke. Scotland is not the smoke home of Canada. The largest and most interesting of these was Galashiels about thirty miles from Edinburgh. Here Sir Walter Scott and Thomas Carlyle met many leading Scotch tweeds. The small stone one story homes joined together in long dismal rows were built for the mill operatives. Everywhere in Scotland there is existence such a contrast to our major thoughts and emotions that day.

On this wonderful tour we passed the Forth Bridge which is one and a half miles long and greater than the bridges at Niagara Falls.

We passed Stirling Castle where a large castle now in ruins stands in which Mary Queen of Scots was born. The castle is square with towers at each corner. It stands on a high rock and from the top chief merit is the lovely surrounding country. It was no place for a king with impetuous Scots to live in. Edinburgh is the capital of the kingdoms.

STIRLING We came to Stirling and saw the Wallace monu-ment and Stirling Castle, both of great importance in AND STIRLING history. Stirling is about like Belleville and Port Hope, a beautiful city on a rocky cliff similar in many ways to Edinburgh Castle but a few miles from Stirling is Bannockburn where the most famous victories was won. We went past this battlefield now in the form of a golf course.

Then we entered the rough country, mountains covered with trees or rocks, deep valleys and numerous streams. The scenery was similar to the Muskoka district. This is the famous Trossachs, every part of which Scott has seen and most of which he traversed on foot. We saw Ben Venue where Scott lived while he wrote "The Lady of the Lake." Loch (lake) Katrine in which is Ellen's Isle where Fitz James first saw Ellen Douglas and all the other scenes mentioned in that enchanting story. Scott's descriptions are faithful to the facts as we saw them. We can never forget the enchanting scenes connected with Scott's life and work. His writings will now have a greater appeal for us than ever. Wordsworth and Coleridge visited these scenes in 1803 and ever after felt their charm.

We had tea at Callander, a lovely village, all nice homes and stores, just after leaving the Trossachs. We were served in a large handsome hotel tea room but there was not a single smile. This village depends entirely on the tourists who visit the Trossachs during the month of the year and this year is an unusually bad one.

Crusty rolls are served in Edinburgh but they are not in high favor as a rule. As far as we have been able to judge the scone, a native of Scotland, is the favorite article of food here. It appears in several forms, triangular with a mixture of bran; round, thin and white with flour still adhering to its complexion and finally round or long, and thick like our tea biscuits with a currant shot in here and there. The last is our favorite because in taste and appearance it is so reminiscent of comfortable teas at home with jam and pure tea well deluged with Quinte cream. "It will be nice to be home again and enjoy our own cooking." Thus we often talk to each other when away for long periods.

As it will be impossible to finish Edinburg and Scotland in this letter. I will send the rest in my next perhaps from London.

Best wishes to all.

THANKS for the enthusiastic reception you've given

Cocos Isle Pirate Treasure Located by B. C. Expedition

San Francisco, Calif., July 5 — Pirate treasure—$60,000 in pieces of eight, gold and silver bars, and church relics—has been discovered on Cocos Isle by an expedition which left Vancouver, B. C., May 1, under Capt. R. D. Adams, a member of the party, reported yesterday.

The treasure was said to have been buried by "Captain Graham," a one-time British naval officer who turned buccaneer, and became notorious for his raids on Spanish galleons.

The treasure was located with the aid of an electric "divining rod," a mechanism of metal phone, and the known as a "metalophone, and the invention of one of the leaders of the party, W. S. Clayton. The body was located near Petrowsky, in the camp established by Sir Malcolm Campbell, British speed ace visiting the island. It was said.

The expedition was said to have had the protection of the Costa Rican government during its work. Armed bands posted about the camp at all times.

Missourian Had to be Shown As Number is Rubbed Off

The man from Missouri (St. Louis) today had to be shown, but it took coon-dhound explanation to do it. It was a local gasoline station man to do it.

The man entering Missouri license plates and cumbered with camping equipment called into the gas station on West Bridge street. "Just a couple of gallons enough to get me home," with came the voice from inside the machine. The gas man stepped to the rear and observed the smoky tank and scratched his head. "Mention'd did you say?" "Yes!, Montreal." "You'll need more than a couple of gal. tank to get to Montreal," came back the mystified gas man. "You'll need a couple of tanks of gas with that car,—or any other car," he harmonized. The man from St. Louis thought he was being kidded. "What," he asked, "do you think I can't tie it. I can get more than four miles a gallon with this car." "Not in this United Montreal is!" asked the gas man who had begun to see the light. "Well, I'm not on the side of the city we came in says 24 miles. Why?"

Investigation brought to light the fact that the numerals under the lobster with a perverted sense of humor had carefully removed nearly scraped the "2" from the "240" miles on the sign at the west limits. The sign now reads: "Montreal-24-miles." This was the second time such an imitation have been reported.

Riot Follows Memorial Exercises At Garibaldi Shrine at Rosebuck

New York, July 5—One man was dead and a dozen nursed clubbed heads today in the aftermath of a riot during memorial exercises at the Giuseppe Garibaldi Shrine at Rosebank, Staten Island.

The Sons of Italy met yesterday to honor the Italian liberator at the house where he once lived. Three hundred Italian-Fascisti numbering 250 appeared to lay a wreath.

Police ordered them to wait, till the first ceremony was over. When some one threw an iron bar and hit a Fascist on the head the police charged the crowd.

After the ceremonies, Fascists and anti-Fascists met on a crowded car in train, when some one shot Salvatore Reali dead. Clement Lisk was arrested on a felonious assault charge. He denied he fired the shot, and no weapon was found.

And He Barker.

Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved ones.

FIND ADVERTISING PAYS

The head of one of the largest firms of cereal manufacturers announces that it is adding a cool million dollars to its advertising appropriation for the coming season. The bulk of this appropriation will be spent with newspapers. And the reasons for this decision are logical concerns still persist in thinking that advertising does not pay.—Brockville Recorder Times.

MAKING A MOTION PICTURE

The Inside Story of the FOX Picture

"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm"

Illustration Chapter 6

Ralph Bellamy, Marian Nixon and director Santell view scenes from the Fox picture, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" through the camera's finder. Bellamy and Miss Nixon have the leading roles in the picture, co-starred by Ralph Dietrich, film editor.

Chapter VI

Rushes, Cutting, Previews

RUSH parties are a current fad and perhaps the chief enthusiasts can be found among the film players. This is an appropriate simile for nothing so resembles the making of motion pictures as trying to fit together the various parts of a jig-saw puzzle.

The average feature picture is made up of 115,000 separate photographs or "shots." They are 16 to the foot and are screened at the rate of about 1,400 to the minute. Hence, to make up from 100 to 200 scenes, in Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, for example, the master scenes, 'Each of these, when completed, may run from one to perhaps merely 5 smaller camera scenes, dimunishing to 126 in all.

A picture is rarely filmed in the smooth sequence of events as they appear in the story. This is so for economic technical reasons, most of which will be apparent immediately after the first day's work. Director Santell found that it was that both the beginning and end of Sunnybrook Farm would be filmed at Santa Cruz, California, as well as all exterior scenes, which would require the presence of these scenes all assured the company's arrival back at Hollywood.

That a perfect mental picture could be had of everything that had gone before, Director Alfred Santell, Marian Nixon, Ralph Bellamy and the staff spent the first hour of each morning looking at the work of the previous day, eliminating all false "takes" of each scene are made, from which the best is chosen to be incorporated in the finished picture. This is the purpose of looking at the "rushes" as the daily work is called.

From the two-hundred odd thousand feet of film normally used on a major picture, some seventy to eighty thousand feet selected as the best of the lot. Then comes the task of assembling the scenes, in their proper sequence. Director Santell and the film editor, or "cutter" as he is known in the studios, in the case of Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, Ralph Dietrich, will have their work cut out for them. The director, and the cutter have the matter of the continuity of the picture are largely in his hands. By reason of the art of filmmaking, the cutter, or film editor, or "cutter" as he is known in the studios, is the key man to the picture. The director and cutter now take their work to the projection room for the first showing of the film in its finished form. This is known as the "preview." To the player, the preview is the most interesting part of the entire picture. The player is called "cutting" and requires from one to seven days of rehearsal time after the cast has been dismissed.

Ralph Dietrich, whose name will appear on the main-title credit of Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm as "Film Editor," was Santell's chief assistant during the making of the picture. "To the player, the

"And five lessons besides!"

"Yes. Why.....Is it.....Isn't it all right, Maxine? Don't they usually pay when they—"

Maxine looked up her sketch book and the lesson had flung on. Anything's all right that you can do now, she was smiling slightly yet awry with in this town," she said.

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

Gwin was a miracle worker. No wonder that he could plot and choose his pupils. He slaved, he inspired, he roared, he reasoned, he students to tears, to profanity, to the depths of despair.

He walked the floor. He wrung his hands. Tears of rage, of delight, disappointment, flashed in his small, dark eyes. His hawk nose twisted and turned. His mouth became flailed. His wiry graying hair would writhe under his frantic fingers.

Unless he wasn't interested. In that case he would walk the floor, examining bits of bric-a-brac, smoke cigarettes or sit on the edge of tables, with the air of an amateur discovering fine points in a picture. His pupil could sing anything, any way he wished. Gwin was a man of whom he had hope of real achievement he hardly listened at all.

But if he was interested, nothing had to pass muster. He'd take a line, a phrase, a trill over and over. "Again, please, once again!"

Lily Lou could never decide which was the most tiring, trying to accompany scales or Gwin's critical ear for her and whom Gwin wouldn't trouble to correct, but would come home over and over with the fingers ached.

But she loved it. She slaved. She learned. She took to heart everything he said. Every song she accompanied she sang in her mind.

Her old dreams of success were with her again. When she heard Gwin at the Metropolitan, she was the Marguerite. From her place in the balcony she silently sang every note.

Gwin gave her showers of tickets. Plays. Operas. Concerts. "They're given to me. You may as well use them," he said.

Sometimes she worried about that. Gwin gave her too much. She was getting too hardened to him.

But just about the time she'd begin to fear that Maxine's sly innuendoes were right, and Gwin was unintentionally ruining her, he would fly into a rage over her poor German or Italian, and by a while she'd be convinced that he almost hated her.

He even...He called her a fool. Her teacher the seventh daughter of a fool. What were they thinking of, to let her go so far without lessons. Singing! Gwin would have her able to say "Hello! Goodbye! How are you? Go to the devil!"

"Exactly!" he believed. "Really! Are you another of those poll-parrot singers with no intelligence, no soul!"

His thrust hooks into her hands, talked to her in French, Italian, German. Made her answer in half-words, sounds, beamed when she was right, snarled when she was wrong.

She made friends. Miss Carlton, the pianist across the hall. They met Schlarlli, the violinist. A group of students.

Three commercial artists had a studio in the rear, rehearsed in the afternoons. She came to know them somewhat.

Gwin frowned upon it. "You have no time for such trash," he told her severely.

Lily Lou shrugged. She did not know how to answer she no longer knew right from wrong. What was there to do What should she do? What did it matter what happened to Her now? She was just pretending she was going to have a career. She was really going to have a baby instead.

There was no one to talk to, no one to care. Sometimes, in the middle of the laughter and chatter of one of the studios teas, with Mignon Hedley shouting the tea-table to everyone talking at once, she would wonder what they would say, if they knew.

But don't think about that.....don't cross your bridges until you come to them. Forget about the baby. Don't let yourself think of it. Sing! Laugh! Make it come true, all that Gwin promised.....career .....success.....

It was easy sometimes. Easy to think that the past was all a dream, and that she had never had any life but that of Gwin's studios, her singing, the gossip of Maxine and Wanda Pillsbury the ease and luxury of Manchester's flat.

"A bright girl can get anything she wants in this town. Look at me," Maxine said, stretching comfortably across the endless crepe de chine bolster she had wheeled away from Mrs. Manchester.

"I stick-indeed all the way from Los Angeles. I started with ten dollars and arrived in New York clad with two thin dimes and no job, and now here I am! Swell clothes, swell address, swell friends, swell job—because of my swell personality and winning ways.

"I haven't pinched a milk bottle in eight months, and no pinch bolls bottles when I first came to town. Did I ever tell you, Lazarus? When I lived at Mrs. Grumpas—before I began to get on. He quite likely only you must get up early, or forget me."

Lily Lou laughed, and showed her uneven white teeth, in a flash of impish remembrance.

Lily Lou laughed, too. It sounded very gay and innocent. But she knew that it was stealing....What said. would the folks think back in Woodlake?

For a moment Woodlake would seem real again. She'd see it as it was on the day she was married. An old, shabby little town with one main street, the new unfinished high school.

Then that too would pass. The whole panorama of what had been her life would fade, and sheer ugly horror that she was about to bring lovingly, sickeningly alone, with no one to turn to, and to take that she was afraid to think of, coming nearer every day.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

Lily Lou had come to New York. Or was it four years? She was a frightened, panicky girl when she came. Now that she had so much more to be frightened about, she was not about, she was quiet and poised. And much more beautiful.

Man had never paid her much attention in the old days. If they had happened to give her a second look they looked again, impressed by her dark, flashing beauty. But she had been all too unaware of them, too pulled in her own direction.

Now she saw them, saw their interest and her own leaped back at them. Not that she cared for any of them. Not that she ever would. But it was a tool to learn by wedding one's interest to one's singing. Sometimes she felt that he was even more attracted to her, that he was waiting biding his time, sure of himself, sure of her.

Her modest, amusing yoga cries, wrote more frequently. Her letters were full of innocent revelings. She made Lily Lou, grown-old and wise in four short months, want to laugh and cry all at once.

"I am afraid that you will acquire a taste for so much luxury, and be disconcerted when you leave Mrs. Manchester's home," she would say in her nice, ladylike script. "Remember that you come from plain people, dear, and that it is the plain, sweet things in life that endure."

And again...."Must it be opera, Lily Lou? Don't you think that your life would be cast in plainer places if you did oratorio instead? I am sure there are good Christian people on the stage but I cannot feel that they are just our kind."

Our kind....what was her kind now? Lily Lou didn't know. Her best friends were Gwin and Tony Schlarlli, the her best friend had always been girls before.

Schlarlli would seem strange to the folks at home. He was often extremely untidy, buttons off, more unpolished, flowing tie hanging limp over a faded shirt.

"He's in love with you, poor devil!" Gwin told her, and laughed.

Lily Lou had been indignant at that. She didn't want Tony to be in love with her, and she couldn't imagine herself or anyone else in love with him. But she didn't want him laughed at.

"He'll be more famous than either of us!"

"Of course he will. He's a genius!" Gwin shouted. "What has that to do with it?"

"Nothing. Only—"

"Only it causes him for being dandy-legged, and bald-headed and—"

"How can you be so unkind!"

"I'm not unkind. It makes no difference what he looks like. In fact it's an asset to a violinist. And a conductor! I predict that Tony Schlarlli will be world famous. That lump is worth half a million dollars—"

"I thought musicians talked about music, and not personalities!"

"You were wrong. Did you think by chance that I typed you because of your voice?"

He was delighted by her dismay. Threw his head back, laughed uproariously.

"Your voice is all right, child. It is a good voice. It's a perfect colorature, and there are few perfect coloraturas—even fewer that keep their voices after a season or two. But! Do you know how many girls right here in this country have voices as good, perhaps better? And in France—and Germany — and Italy—"

"You've just admitted that my voice is good!"

"Yes, and I'm just telling you that that isn't enough. Out of the hundreds who come to me and others, intent on careers, how many have the build, the beauty, the personality, even the intelligence and the pure animal strength to go through with it. The voice is such a small part of it! ... But you are so much, why couldn't you have looked ahead. Oh, it's a pity—a real pity—"

She knew what he meant. That it was a pity that she was going to have a baby. He knew, of course. She had known that he laughed at it sometimes, but he had never spoken of it before. Nobody had spoken of it.....

She sat, with her head bent, picking at the frayed red velvet of an old chair studying the intricate, carving of the arms memorizing each tiny detail, trying to pretend that she did not know what Gwin meant.

"When is it to be" he asked her gently.

"In April, I suppose," she answered. There was no use pretending. He'd just insist on making it plainer.

"Perhaps I can help. These things cost money. And there are arrangements to make—"

Lily Lou rose and opened the window, letting in a breath of fresh air, and a flutter of wet snowdrops. "I have everything arranged," she things into her suitcase.

Sadie, the maid, stood at the door, rolling her large, dark eyes. "Were you going some place, Miss Lily Lou? Do you want me to help you pack?"

Stung with the realization of what she was doing Lily Lou sank back on her heels, staring a little stupidly at the half-packed case. "No. I was just getting a few old things out of the way," she said, and thrust the bag back under the bed.

"Oh, all right, Miss Lily Lou," When the girl had gone she dragged out the case, put the things back in her bureau. What was the use? Whom could she go? Better to stay here....wait a while.....

She didn't know it but two days later she was to have it all to do over again.

"You ma'am, Miss Lily Lou knew she was going all right," Sadie told her mistress after Lily Lou had said goodbye for the last time. "I saw her packing her trunk and back as cast Thursday."

"Where's no use planning your life," Lily Lou thought afterward. "Things just happen to you, or they don't happen. Nothing you do helps pen to me, and now everything goes."

It had been an ordinary morning. Nothing to set it aside from other mornings except that Maxine had a cold in her head, and was in bad temper, and Mrs. Manchester spilled the cream and scolded Sadie for it.

She had looked with distaste at her reflection in the mirror as she packed on her hat and prepared to leave for Gwin's studio. Last night's make up hadn't improved her appearance. She thought she looked ill and rather sullen.

JULY 6 — MR. AND MRS. — THE JOKER IN THE DECK.

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 67

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

The house party guests departed with Bwana to guide them on their week's trip to the nearest railway station. Morrison Baynes stayed on, however, and with My Dear and Meriem waved farewell from the veranda. The young English rose lost no opportunity of pouring impassioned words of love into Meriem's ear. But always he urged her to go with her him to London, saying they would be married when he reached home.

During Bwana's absence his ranch foreman had employed a new assistant who went by the name of Hanson. He was a tall, well-knit man of thirty, blonde of hair and smooth shaven. On the few times that Meriem had encountered the newcomer there was a tantalizing familiarity about him that convinced her that she should be able to call the fellow by name, yet she was unable to do so. Tomorrow he was to conduct Baynes north to the caravan trails.

At sun-up Meriem, from her bedroom, watched the little party set forth. Meriem had avoided Morrison Baynes the evening before, nor had she bid him farewell, she was uneasy at his attitude. Why had he not spoken to Bwana of his love for her? Why would he not permit her to tell My Dear? It was all very puzzling to the little jungle girl. But now that he had gone Meriem missed his gay companionship. Did she love him?

Meriem could not answer her own questions as she wandered that day in the garden. She was restless. For the first time since she had come to them, Meriem felt a prisoner in the home of Bwana and My Dear. It was evening when she heard a step beyond the rose-hedge, and saw a hand reach toward her. It held a message from Baynes. "I cannot go without seeing you again," she read. "Come alone to the clearing tomorrow and say good-by to me."

MEAL PRICES NOT ADVANCED

Restaurant Keepers Say Rates Not Boosted For Tourists

Restaurant hijackers, who take advantage of transient trade from American tourists to boost their prices, evidently meals will not be found in this city according to local restaurant owners, who have been approached on the subject. A unanimous decision from them, that meals will not advance in price during the coming season has been obtained. While several reports emanating from the vicinity of Beamsville, Ontario, that prices had been purposely advanced to meet the exorbitant heights, and that bacon and eggs in some cases had been advanced to the price of $1.75 a plate with a corresponding increase in and other food, the action was deplored by the local restaurant owners of local cafes and lunch rooms.

The question was referred to Mr. J. O. Herity, Manager of the Chamber of Commerce, while it is well known, that there are almost 1,000 who are bound to take advantage of the tourist trade to raise their prices whenever possible, we have had no complaints locally, nor do we anticipate any. Belleville has long been noted for its square dealings with tourists and we have long enjoyed co-operation with all local business men. To raise prices on such commodities would be to give Belleville a black eye from which it would take some time to recover. We are trying to encourage them in every way we can," declared Mr. Herity, "and to drive them away with higher prices, which have been said to expect would be equivalent to killing the goose that lays the golden eggs.

Chief Green was testified Mr. Pennesy had issued the threat: "If the magistrate sends Costello down it will mean his job."

SUPPORTED MAN FOR TWO YEARS

Sensational Evidence is Given in London Murder Trial

LONDON, July 6.—(AP)—Testifying in her trial for the murder of Thomas William Bentley, Mrs. Elvira Dolores Barney, told how she had supported the young man for nearly two years.

Stephen, son of a bank manager, was killed in the Croydon apartment after a party on May 31. The defense is that the fatal shot was fired as Stephen tried to disarm Mrs. Barney, who had threatened to commit suicide.

Testifying only few specializers were admitted to the Court room.

Four years ago. She testified she married John Barney, an American flyer. He was cruel to her and they separated in 1930.

She could get a divorce because she had acquired United States citizenship because of her marriage and the technicalities made it difficult, she said. She had an income of her own and lived alone until she met Stephen.

So far as she could learn, he had no means of support and although she got a little money from his mother, once in a while, Mrs. Barney supported him almost entirely. Sometimes he too was unkind on one occasion he frightened her so that she called a policeman to the apartment.

HAY CROP IS ABOVE NORMAL

Needed Moisture From Recent Rains Greatly Benefits

Toronto, July 5 (CP)—Rain was fairly general throughout Old Ontario last week and the needed moisture was of great benefit to farmers, according to the weekly crop report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Except in Northern Ontario and districts such as Parry Sound, Nipissing and Muskoka, hay cutting has been general. In most sections the yield will be up to or better than average. The rain, which was of great value to pastures and growing crops, made curing of hay difficult and delayed cutting operations. Kent county reports the hay crop almost completely harvested and in excellent condition. Eastern sections suffered from dry weather, however. Glengarry anticipates only a 50 percent crop. Although yield is good in Frontenac, Lennox and Russell farmers expect such a poor crop that some are already buying old hay for winter food for dairy cattle.

The strawberry crop in North Simcoe, apparently almost wiped out two weeks ago, has staged a "comeback" due to ample rainfall. Late varieties are being harvested in the district of Muskoka, unnecessary chances of his valuable hereof. Guernsey cattle being shipped from there this season.

Fall wheat appears in good shape in most districts. The rains of the past week benefited it considerably.

SHANNONVILLE MAN ENDS LIFE WITH SHOT

Wife Makes Discovery of Husband Lying in Pool Of Blood in Hen House

John Mayell, 55, Despondent Shoots Self With Shot Gun

NATIVE OF PLACE

Wife Hears Shot—First Thinking it Sound of Tire Blowout

Shannonville, July 7—(Special)—Hearing a report, that sounded like the bursting of a tire, Wednesday afternoon shortly after five o'clock, Mrs. John Mayell, Shannonville, rare from the household duties to the yard of her home and after a short search to ascertain the cause of the report, was horrified to find her husband, John Mayell, aged 55, lying on the floor of the hen house in a pool of blood and a shot gun close by his side. She raised an alarm and Dr. H. E. Rickard of Shannonville, Coroner for this district, was summoned. The man was past human aid on the arrival of the physician, having blown the top of his head practically off. After learning from the wife, that her husband had been in ill health for the past few months and at times being very despondent through having no work, although no decision was made of taking his life, the Coroner decided an inquest unnecessary and the body was removed for burial.

The deceased was a native of Shannonville, being well and favorably known in the community. For many years he fished on the Bay of Quinte and was never happier than on the water or in the woods hunting game. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife three children at home and two brothers, one in Calgary, Alberta and one in Moira Jaw Sask. He was a member of the Anglican Church.

Lansbury Moves Rejection of Bill Authorizing Duties

CLASHED

Claims Free State Has Right to go Outside Empire

London, July 7 (CP)—A heated incident, between J. H. Thomas, Dominions Secretary, and George Lansbury, Parliamentary Labor leader, featured last night's debate in the House of Commons on second reading of the Government's special act authorizing new duties on goods from the Irish Free State, which was carried 231 to 41.

Mr. Lansbury moved rejection of the bill, urging the Anglo-Irish dispute over the Free State's nonpayment of the land annuities should be settled along lines of goodwill. Mr. Lansbury proceeded to argue that "if Canada and South Africa find a dispute and decided to go outside the Empire for arbitration, not a single member of the British Government would dare to prevent them."

Mr. Thomas interjected, "hear, hear."

That remark, Mr. Lansbury said, knocked the bottom out of the government's case. If South Africa and Canada were entitled to go outside, so was the Free State.

Mr. Thomas arose and said it was very important there should be no misunderstanding of Mr. Lansbury's point. He had answered Hinsley Mackinnon Henderson, by Mr. Lansbury that if South Africa or Canada wanted to go outside the Empire.

Mr. Lanchury interrupted, he said he referred to a hypothetical case of South Africa or Canada choosing to go outside the Empire for an arbitration tribunal.

Mr. Thomas did not pursue the point.

Issuance of text of the measure yesterday revealed that the government is prepared to combat the threatened repudiation by the Free State of the entire financial agreement with Great Britain, a general default, which the government declares has existed in the last Free State note.

Third Cut in Destroyer Tonnage is Advocated

London, July 7 (CP)—Concrete naval disarmament proposals were put forward by Stanley Baldwin, Acting Prime Minister, in the House of Commons this afternoon when he welcomed the plan produced by President Herbert Hoover for cutting the world's armaments by one-third.

Declaring the British government would do all it could to put through the Hoover proposals, Mr. Baldwin went on to deal in detail with naval armaments limitations, in which aspect the British do not consider the Hoover plan goes far enough.

Numerical Reduction

Mr. Baldwin declared it was not practicable for Britain, with her world-wide interests, to reduce the number of naval units below a certain point, but if there is a limit to numerical reduction it is possible, and highly desirable, to secure by other means a large diminution in naval armaments, Mr. Baldwin stated.

Gun calibres, ranging up to 16-inches in the capital ship, were at present, far too high, declared the acting Prime Minister. He proposed that capital ships laid down in the future should be limited to

Greatest of Events Since Peace Treaty

Manchester, England, July 7 —(Canadian Press Cable)—"The world will not have seen the like since the days when the Treaty of Versailles was hammered out at Paris", declared the Manchester Guardian today in discussing the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa.

"Not that Ottawa has inherited the baleful associations of Versailles. Although it has something in common with it."

The Manchester Guardian continued, "It is called, if not to end war, at least to arrange a truce on one particular battlefield.

"The war is world-wide and not less deadly because it is waged with the bloodless weapons of tariffs and quotas. We now have the chance to make a separate peace on the large, if limited, field of trade within the Empire.

"The Empire may have remained relatively free from the worst forms of national exaggeration but it has not escaped the poison of that spirit and it is for a demonstration above all of a change of spirit that thoughtful people are looking to Ottawa."

WOUNDING IS LOVE SEQUEL

Ball Player Tries to Prevent Rejected Girl From Suicide

CHICAGO, July 7.—A woman almost took the life of Bill Jurges, star shortstop of the Chicago National Baseball Club Wednesday.

Brooding because the youthful baseball player had rejected her attentions, Miss Violet Popovich, a pretty brunette, forced entrance into his hotel room, made one final plea for his love, and then attempted to commit suicide. In the struggle for the gun both were wounded, but not seriously.

Jurges is due to report for the fun, a .22 automatic, which the woman pulled from her purse, was shot into. One bullet struck him in the right side, ricocheted off a rib, and came out the right shoulder. The second ripped the flesh about the little finger of his left hand. Miss Popovich was struck by the third shot, which entered the left hand, and passed up the arm six inches.

Dr. John Davis, Cub physician, was standing in the lobby of the hotel where the shooting occurred, and gave immediate attention to the wounded couple. After a thorough examination Dr. Davis said neither was injured seriously, and Jurges probably would be able to return to the game in about three weeks, barring unexpected complications.

Beyond the statement that the incident was "all over," Miss Popovich refused to answer questions from police. She first gave her name as Violet Valli, but a check revealed her identity and then Popovich of Chicago. She gave her age as 21. Jurges, too, refused to speak of the shooting, except when requested an affair that the girl attempted to shoot herself because he rejected her attentions.

A search of the girl's room tonight revealed a note written just before the shooting, and addressed to the girl's mother, in which she threatened to kill Jurges, as well as herself. The latter also blamed Hazzie ("Kiki") Cuyler, star Cub outfielder, and others of Jurges's friends. Lew Steadman, for breaking up a love affair.

Note Pinned to Baby Left Abandoned in Motor Car

Oshawa, Ont., July 7—A baby boy, apparently about six months old, its clothing in rags, was found abandoned early this morning in an automobile owned by Wilford Hornby, Bowmanville. Attached to the child's clothing was a small piece of blue card board, and on it was written the following:

"Please care for my baby, as I am too poor. No work." Mr. Hornby took the child to the police station, and turned it over to Chief Venioe, who took it to his home for the night.

This morning it was taken to the hospital to be cared for, as it was plainly undernourished. No clue has been discovered as to the identity of the parents of the child, but the Bowmanville police chief is continuing investigations.

Smith Promises to Back Entire Ticket Quiets Stories of Cleavage of Democrats

Whether He Will Go on Stump in Campaign Not Known

RIVALS TO MEET

Smith and Roosevelt to Speak From Same Platform

NEW YORK, July 7.—Alfred E. Smith said Wednesday he would support the nominees of the United States Democratic Party after expressing an opinion that the formation of a third party would not be practical "at this time".

Smith amplified a prepared statement in the affirmative manner, to say that his declaration of support for the Democratic ticket headed by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt and Vice-President-elect John Nance Garner, of Texas, neither of whom was mentioned by name in the statement.

His answers to all other inquiries were negative. He would not say whether he would "take the stump" for the ticket, or what he thought of the party's chances in November.

Just Waste Rest

He denied he intended to run for Governor, and said his chief interest at the moment was to "get a little rest."

While Smith was clearing the political atmosphere, Roosevelt managers were making plans for a campaign tour in modern-day United States politics. He intends to start their four-month drive for the White House tomorrow and leave the campaign in metropolitan crosscurrents behind.

This is much the same strategy followed in 1928, when Roosevelt was seeking re-election as Governor, and in the preconvention campaign. Then the supports of the delegates was being sought.

There is a possibility that Smith and Roosevelt will speak from the same platform at the Utica Centennial celebration on June 23. The Governor already has accepted an invitation to speak and Smith also expected to accept.

Leaders Hold Conference

Meantime, prominent leaders who played an important part in the Roosevelt victory met in a short conference, but it was said they had not discussed any definite plans. The conferees were James A. Farley, Jere Cunningham; Arthur Mullen, Roosevelt floor leader, and William G. McAdoo, who led California and Texas into the Roosevelt camp.

Farley said the formation of plans would be postponed as long as possible in order to take advantage of the flood of suggestions that already has begun to pour in from all corners of the country.

Meantime, the Republicans formally opened their campaign to reelect President Hoover, by establishing national headquarters in Chicago.

Police Chase Strikers from Dump And Sewage Plant in York Township

TORONTO, July 7.—(By the Canadian Press)—Police today dispersed a meeting of striking York Township Relief Workers after a barrage of threats but without serious discord, racing first from the municipal dump and then to a sewage disposal plant. The police were kept busy chasing the demonstrators from the neighborhood.

Relief men employed on relief work went on strike several days ago, asking that they be paid cash instead of grocery orders by the township.

Armed with a list of names of unemployed to whom voucher money is owing, 300 of the strikers marched to the Township Relief office where their demands were rejected. The men later marched toward the parliament buildings in an effort to interview Premier George S. Henry.

NOVEL ADDRESS IS READ BY MISS WILSON

Rawdon—At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoard on Wednesday evening last the following novel address was read using the presentation of a pretty chesterfield table and a fancy caddy dish was made by Betty Hoard, Harvey Couch and Donald Johnson on behalf of the pupils and residents of S. S. No. 4 Rawdon, better known as the Williams School.

To Miss Olsen:

The pupils of S. S. No. 4 Rawdon were packing their books in their book bags in preparation for the midsummer vacation.

"Hip, Hip, Hoorah!" sang Kay Brown as he fastened the last strap on his book bag, "well I declare" he said, as he patted Gladys Summers, a beginner brush a tear from her eye, "what ever are you crying about?". "I don't want to leave school", she replied, "Catch me crying because school is closed just think two glorious months of holiday", read out Spencer's clear voice, "I don't want to see one of those books again until September," said Betty Couch. Oh my kids when September comes Miss Olsen won't be back and we shall miss her very much", said Vera McShane, and her voice was full of sad. "Yes and she has been so kind and patient with us too" spoke Betty Hoard. "Oh, I'll say she has, I never have had," spoke Billy McAdam "and I hate to be so" "I'm only wish I had known her longer" said Helen Spencer. "I have just 8yrs. sun to realise what a wonderful friend she is". Before she goes we must thank for her patience and kindness," spoke Babe Hoard in a husky voice, "I'm sure glad to do in summer holidays, but don't tell my mother that, as she will be sure to have errands ready", said Donald Johnson. "Well" replied Douglas McAdam with a sigh "with a teacher like Miss Gibson we might have school every day" "Every cloud has a silvery lining and this is not a funeral," said Norman McConnell in his deep bass voice, "Let's give Miss Gibson these presents not for their value but as a slight token of our appreciation of her three years stay with us."

Signed by the pupils of S. S. No. 4, at the close of Mr. Will Potts moved and Mr. Conger McConnel seconded a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Hoard for the use of the home for the occasion, which was very pleasantly spent, although every one present was sorry to have Miss Gibson leave our school and community.

TRUCKS AND RAILS

Some light appears for the railways in the statement of the Minister of Highways, the Hon. Leopold Macaulay, that the day is coming for legislation confining freight traffic on the highways. This would be along lines similar to the rules controlling freight on the railways. The minister says that there is a limit of say one hundred and fifty miles after which it is not good economic policy for trucks to compete with railways.

Out of the turmoil of the rivalry and competition of rails and highways will come a solution more rapidly than if patient conditions had not emphasized the situation.

A HUMANITARIAN OFFER

Toronto Y.M.C.A. has taken on a new burden as a result of water temperatures of 70 degrees. The plan is to give free lessons in swimming to all boys in that city.

Water accidents have shocked the people of that city and have aroused such organizations as the Y.M.C.A. to take a radical step. There will be no membership fee or charge and every race, creed is admitted.

In the average boy can learn to swim in six lessons, according to swimming instructors.

If the boys of Toronto who cannot swim take advantage of this fine offer then the swimming tanks will be filled with would-be swimmers.

For York township the school board, the collegiate, Rotary and other associations are co-operating with the Y.M.C.A. to give the non-swimmers instruction.

This is a very fine demonstration of community work of the most vital kind. It will place a heavy strain on the association but that is not the immediate concern.

LOAN TAKEN UP

Ontario's new loan bringing 5.81 per cent is rapidly being taken up, full proof that basically the province is sound, that the people believe it is sound and that the people have a reserve of money. Opportunity which is given the small investors from one hundred dollars and up was one of the interesting features of the loan.

After years of experience in fluctuation of everything people have come to the decision that the finest of all securities are the government bonds of one's own country. While in periods of decline those who can put money like this aside for the purpose of investment, nothing finer to be found. Then again even when bonds decline, government bonds decline least of all, for they are the final sign of the stability of a country.

It is no wonder that the people who have a little money to spare put it into this loan.

THE MAKING OF NAMES

What a riot of names the screen brand Moviedom is even worse than the legitimate stage. You can scarcely tell the nationality of a player any more by his or her name, thanks to the substitution of Russian, Swedish, Turkish and other names for Christian and family names. Some of the manufactured names given themselves by actors are so ridiculous I think they do better than their parents in naming them, are very musical; others are meaningless.

Only there John Smith or a Mary Jones of the stage! They would seem like our own people not hothouse growth or exotic importations from foreign lands. Our publicity departments are at the back of this craze for foreign-isms.

A man going into business has almost as much right as an actor to call himself anything for the sake of trade especially if he opens up business in a city where he is not known.

But changing of names is so necessary, parents might almost give up naming their children until these intellectuals reach an age of discretion when they can choose for themselves.

ROOSEVELT AND SMITH

Al Smith's statement that he will support the Democratic ticket and that includes Governor Roosevelt for the presidency, ought to settle the question for millions who felt over the possibility of cleavage between the ranks of the followers of these two Democrats.

The possibility of the placing of Smith in the race for governorship of New York is one of the questions of the day. Some feel that Roosevelt thought he could get more votes if Governor Lehman succeed to the gubernatorial post would even be willing to see Smith there because of Smith's ability to help Roosevelt in the coming race against Hoover. Some say that Smith must be placated by some post for his turn-down at Chicago, but then Smith may not be seeking anything of the kind. He may not require to be placated. Anyhow he has come out for the full ticket headed by Roosevelt.

THE KING'S HIGHWAY
By Florence Wilson Roper

I know a road whose ribboned length,
Smooth surfaced as a floor,
Was once the route of cavaliers
In stately coach and four.

Here gallant beaux in powdered wig,
And belles in ruffled gown,
To many a party, ball and rout,
Rode down to old Jamestown.

How still it is along the road,
How most divinely still—
The sunlit pattern of the leaves,
The shadows on the hill!

My motor purrs in warm content,
A rabbit scurries by,
A drift of crows with lazy wings
Climb up a drowsy sky.

I pass an orchard that has foamed
To clouds of feathery pink;
The air is thrilled with mating call
Of thrush and bob-o-link.

I catch my breath! Across a field
Of wind-blown silvery wheat,
Like sentinels are phantom gliides
On light elusive feet.

Through field and wood and sleepy town,
The road winds on its way,
White drifting clouds against the blue,
Frail butterflies at play.

It winds with many a bend and curve
To cross a singing river,
Where pale green willow fringes trail,
And tall marsh grasses quiver.

If you are worn with city streets,
Her choked with dusty fret,
Ride down the road with Washington,
Match wits with Fafayette!

HASTINGS COUNTY is attracting more and more tourists every year, bringing considerable money for local circulation, mostly in food stuffs, jewelry, furs and souvenirs of various kinds. This week a party of tourists from the United States motored through Belleville returning from the north. They were very enthusiastic, especially about the bass fishing, as they had no difficulty getting their quota. They are coming back next week and were thrilled at the legends which cluster about that locality, including the "Lost Silver Mine," for which prospectors have been searching for more than fifty years, without success. At a summer boarding house near Myers Cave eighty tourists mostly from the United States, sat down to dinner on July 4.

SACRIFICED ON THE ALTAR OF PATRIOTISM, several thousand people were killed in the United States on July Fourth, celebrating the birthday of that nation, when it formally declared itself independent of the mother country, Great Britain. It is doubtful if many of the casualties knew just what the celebration was all about, but a good time was had by one and all. Each year the list grows fewer deaths from fire-crackers and explosives generally, a great many from automobile accidents among holiday makers, a fair quota are from drownings among the many who sought the cool places by the sea, stream or lake. Large though the list annually is each year the gradual establishment of a "Safe and Sane Fourth" is reducing the mortality among the young in the lessening of which the courts made a great many folks come to Canada on the Fourth and escape all dangers except the perils of heavy traffic on the broad highways.

BUILDING PUNTS is a new hobby taken up by a number of boys who are making a good job of the enterprise and will soon launch some very seaworthy craft. It is expected that a program of races for boys' punts will be arranged later in the season with attractive prizes to the winners. Back to the water by the boys is a good sign for there is no cleaner sport or exercise than that of swimming, sailing, sculling, canoeing and even motor boating, although the latter detracts a great deal from the idea of exercise.

"Back to the water, no dust, no muss, that's us," is the slogan of the young boat builders.

FOUR STALWART YOUNG MEN, out of employment just now, evicted from the "Municipal Dugout," have rented a small bungalow on the banks of the Moira at the reasonable rate of $10 per month. When the larder is empty they can fish off their front porch and catch a mess of perch for dinner. They worked last winter on road construction where they developed great muscles and greater appetites. They are ready to work at the drop of a hat, and are now inquiring the service one to four good husky young Canadians can reach them through this column.

MATTER OF COLOR

As to a suggestion in this newspaper concerning the embarrassing similarity of Commerce passbooks and liquor permit cases, Chatham Banner comments: "After all, it is appropriate that these books should be of the same color; they both keep a record of liquid assets." But are they of the same value in keeping a balance.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

A FISH DAY FOR BRITAIN?

In search of mediums through which national economies may be effected, Britain is undergoing a thorough krei-hauling at the instance of the politicians and the press, to say nothing of the Government's many experts. Among the most interesting suggestions made up to date is the establishment of one compulsory fish day every week. It is estimated that the British nation spends $1,100,000,000 per annum on meat, of which no less than $450,000,000 is said consumed on the week-end, a day upon which the sale of meat or its serving in public eating houses or the home would be prohibited—would result in a reduction in the total expenditure on meat of $150,000,000. On the basis of the Canadian fish catch, which, if deducted from British imports, would cut down the adverse trade balance by one-fourth. —Montreal Star.

HE PAYS

He is a bompous, choleric old chap at times, and, one can deal with all things to speak in the ensuing fuss" at in his backyard, but he has his points. He does not like weeds, and never "welches," and without preaching it very much practises the comfortable philosophy of the copybook maxim that honesty is the best policy. The old boy pays. The going has been pretty rough lately, still worse is to come, for a new couple of hundred million dollars last summer, and he is expected now to accommodate him. They knew their man. Things are a bit short with him now, all the same, does he do? Characteristically, he pays. He has paid $4,000,000 of that loan. His name is John Bull, home address, London, England. He pays for all the capitals and most of the crossroads of the world, investing pretty much all the cries of history, and, somehow or other, contrived that the cloth through.—St. Louis Post Despatch.

THE FAR NORTH

Canada is still the land of romance and adventure. Hundreds of thousands of square miles remain in the happy hunting ground of explorers souls with the true pioneering spirit. So much is this the case that Canada has not yet grasped how a country like ours can be suffering from unemployment when there is so much for strong hands and hearts to work. Opportunities there still further afield, there are the little-explored regions of the north, about which there is misconception prevails. According to competent authorities with first-hand experience, they are not nearly so forbidding and arctic as popularly supposed. The development of aviation, it is pointed out, will make it a short time endow the Canadian northland with an importance never dreamed of in the past. The shortest air passage across the top of the world from Great Britain route for those to whom speed is the great consideration. The new Arctic regions are coming in for increased study and attention.—Hamilton Spectator.

"CANNED SPEECHES"

Some United States politicians are inviting a heap of trouble by their decision to have phonograph records made of their speeches, for dissemination over the radio during the presidential campaign. It smacks of lack of foresight.

According to a dispatch from Los Angeles politicians are already having such records made, and the idea is a fad to other parts of the States are expected to follow suit.

Someone should tell them about the embarrassment caused by phonograph records in the recent Newfoundland elections.

Sir Richard Squires, who was recently defeated in Newfoundland, had his speeches recorded and sent to constituencies which he was unable to visit in the 1928 campaign. A number of these records fell into the hands of the opposition members who used them to good effect. It is doubtful if the public many of his election promises during his tenure of office.

This method of disseminating blah is a very convenient way of reaching the ears of every nook and cranny. But it should also be borne in mind that "canned speeches" have a peculiar way of backfiring into the hands of the owners.

CALGARY HERALD

As an indication of the proverbial optimism—undoubtedly fully justified—of the West, the new premises of the Calgary Herald in moving into new quarters, described as "one of the most modern and commodious newspaper premises in the West," is impressive. "The Herald believes in the continued expansion of Calgary and has always had faith in the future of the city and district it serves by investing in large premises for its own quarters." It is explained.—Hamilton Spectator.

EVERY DREAM HAS MEANING ALL ITS OWN

Original Repression is Responsible For Dream

BY LOUISE E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Some say they dream every night while others claim they never dream; but as a matter of fact we all dream, and yet many of us do not remember what we have dreamed.

For the dream is a sort of safetyvalve mechanism in the mind.

LOUIS E BISCH thoughts stored away unconsciously, but if you will—are let loose during sleep and come to the surface. The result is one or more dreams. If we do not recall our dreams, it is because they are still more repressed; so much so that consciousness during the waking state does not want to know about the repressions.

We may dream in fragments; at least, that is all we can recall the next day; or we may dream in great detail and at great length. Dreams may be short, or they may be extended; or they may be very mixed up, confusing, or they may be amazingly silly. A dream may disturb us considerably, or it may not. This depends upon the degree of disagreeableness of the original repression. Some dreams are so terrible that impossible for the dream.

Frequently a more or less therefore everybody dreams; and since most of our repressions date from childhood, it follows that most of our dreams deal with childhood experiences.

This statement probably seems rather startling, but it is helpful to harbor disappointments and what not for so many years.

Let us clarify its case. Indeed, it is questionable whether any experience is really important. Important is the right kind of ideas, constructive ideas, be inculcated in a child's mind; for what matters most upon the plastic, growing mind is never wholly effaced.

The point is that we dream mostly in symbols, not in terms of that actually happened, no matter how recent or remote that may be. Because, although we may not seem to concern a recent occurrence, it may be found to be a mere disguise for a childhood upset.

Mrs. A. A. Brown, that a person walks along a busy street and all of a sudden there is a crash behind him, and he turns around in time to see a huge automobile coming at him. Now a few hundred people-perhaps more, perhaps less-have witnessed the disaster, but not all dream of it. Mrs. A. A. Brown dreamed that some of them the tumbledream of her childhood upset.

Mrs. A. A. Brown, does dream that she is walking in her china closet fell to the floor because one of the shelves broke. In addition she dreams that her mother, who is dead, was present, and that she blamed her mother for the accident. Mrs. A. A. Brown, was a child, was playing in the china closet when her mother's special warning and the shelf broke, and frightened her. The child at the time wished, she might be old enough to play with her mother and not alive, her mother, would like it if she were punished for her carelessness.

In the dream the old repression of childhood came to life, and besides the wish to retaliate against the mother, Mrs. A. A. Brown, also feared the mind well as material by means of which to relieve itself of the repression. Mrs. A. A. Brown, tumbled-in building actually did occur, for example, that a

The interpretation of dreams is indeed interesting, and one can learn to analyze many of one's own dreams, but the complicated subject is beyond the scope of a detailed.

NEIGHBOUR

She sits there at the window,
Looking out.
And you wonder what it is She's thinking about.

You know she isn't staring
At any one thing.
For nothing seems to happen
That's interesting.

There's just a row of houses
Along our street,
And just the kind of people
You always meet.

I wonder what she's seeing
That we can't see
In such a quiet street
As ours seems to be?

The lawn social which was held at Wellington Grand, the beautiful residence of Mr. and Mrs. John McIlmoyle, Main Street, under the auspices of the Ladies' and Men's Bible classes of St. Andrew's Church was a great success and most enjoyable. The night was ideal as was also the lawn. Seldom does one see such delightful workers as the ladies proved themselves to be under the capable leadership of their president, Miss C. Bellaghter and their teacher, Mr. W. B. Horle. The residence was thrown open to the visitors and the Honorary President of the men's class, Mr. McIntosh, Mrs. McIntosh and Miss Calder did everything in their power to make the evening one of great pleasure. The refreshment committee was composed of Messrs J. McIntosh, W. B. Horle, D. Hagerman and Geo. Wilson; Mrs. Horle and Miss Browning. The games were in charge of Mrs. Wm. Leslie, Miss L. Debts Parley Meeting Lasts Only Half Hour But Nearer Solution

Agreement Between Big Six is Not Fulfilled

STILL CONFIDENT—

MacDonald's Work in Removing Difficulty is Lauded

Lausanne, July 7.—Hope that a reparations agreement would be reached "within a few days" was expressed by British last night following the unexpectedly early adjournment of the conference after a half hour of threshed out the final differences. Despite the failure to reach definitive conclusions, of one compromise after another in the past week-end, it was practically all the major obstacles to an agreement, the heads of the delegations of the five principal powers" met last evening, Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Belgium and Japan were represented.

It was understood the conferences were prepared to stick it out till dawn, if necessary, in order that the negotiations might be completed tomorrow before Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, chairman of the conference, leaves for London and the conference ends. Some of the delegates left the meeting before half an hour was up. The French and Belgian delegates even expressed pessimism. The British remained confident that the difficulties could be overcome.

The British Prime Minister did much yesterday to speed the work. First he settled the Italian claim for reparations which Premier Mussolini debts along with the German reparations, reproducing a proposal which the Italians said removed their misgivings.

Next the British led in fixing up the German claim for elimination of the war guilt clause from the Treaty of Versailles, a claim which met strong objections from France. This was got around by insertion of the draft agreement of a phrase abrogating the reparations clauses of the Versailles Treaty, which are headed by the war guilt clause.

Then the British were able to announce, before the evening session, that French and Germans were in accord on practically all the points of difference.

A new issue was understood to be blocking completion of the great task of the reparations settlement. It was a resolution engaging the powers to keep the peace over a period of years and to refrain from acts to upset the European status quo. The purpose of this resolution is to course to strengthen confidence by guaranteeing the continuance of security which not be disturbed by political convulsions over such problems as the Polish Corridor.

To France and Germany this resolution was important because Germany has been anxiously pressing revision of the Dantzig" regulations which by establishment of the Polish Corridor, severed East Prussia from the rest of the Fatherland by a wide strip of land which France jealously guards the integrity of Poland, which, as an ally, affords a path to the sea for Poland, her ally.

In addition, there remained a gap of $375,000,000 between the billion dollar figure set by the creditor nations as the sum of Germany's liability and the $125,000,000 which the German offers. The German delegation has taken a firm stand and the final figure may be somewhere between $625000,000 and $1,000,000,000.

Tomorrow Chancellor Frans von Papen of Germany and Premier Edouard Herriot of France will meet for the first time in the conference to discuss the bank and the total sum of liability.

Jimmy Rees, veteran swimming coach of the Montreal A.A.A. will be official coach of the Canadian swimming team at Los Angeles and coached the Canadian swimmers at Amsterdam.

FORCE MANY OUT OF WORK

Abitibi Canyon Work Likely to Close For Lack of Funds

Toronto, July 7.—Word reached Toronto from the Wembley office of Premier Prasserdale on the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway and from Cochrane, Ont., that work upon the $23,000,000 Abitibi Canyon power development will be stopped by Power Service Corporation was to close down Thursday, throwing more than 800 men out of employment.

Premier Prasserdale, it is understood, stated that he had been informed of the intended shut-down last night long after the Cabinet had spent the entire afternoon considering plans to take over the project, operated by a provincial enterprise.

The whole company, he said, had been having difficulty in getting money to carry on the construction work and he presumed that they had now come to the end of their ready resources in that direction.

That it would have "some effect" upon the government's consideration of plans to take over the development, he said, was undoubted, but he declined to say what the possible effect.

The shut-down today brings about one of the things that the government's investigation recommends concerning taking over the canyon development was intended, it was said, to prevent the throwing of nearly 1,500 men out of work.

The recommendation of work is said in best-informed circles, to be the first step in the policy now being developed in the plans of the government to take over the power project.

The government, it is reported, would be prepared to give guarantee to the Dominion Construction Company to complete the work, that the government would pay for any work they did during the period in which the company was not own the enterprise.

It was reported, but not confirmed, that the loan taken by some of the bankers to finish the Hydro Electric Canyon development bonds did not augur any too well for the success of negotiations for the province to secure the power project at a reasonable price. And it was also rumored that, even after the government took over development and the default on the bonds, certain interests were willing to provide enough capital on behalf of the bond-holders, and thwart the government's plans in that way.

It was also stated that the government's plans to take over the property had almost run on the rocks at an earlier stage, after Premier Prasserdale had first been notified of the intention of the company to default the bond interest.

Premier Henry, called after midnight Tuesday to meet the Cabinet, was aware, no new crisis had been reached in respect to the negotiations.

Poor Fielding Robbed Former Nat. Hurler of Closer Contest

Displaying a wide sweeping curve, a perfect drop ball and a fast one with plenty of hop, Tommy Pointer, elongated southpaw of the Nationals literally mowed the Cobourg Combine on their heads at the Fair Grounds Wednesday afternoon and the hometown lad left the diamond with a 7-1 victory tucked under their belts and with a much improved position in the league race. It is the first time the Nationals have been fifty fifty in games won and lost and from their play on Wednesday they have apparently struck their stride and are ready to drive down to the wire for a playoff berth. Pointer was assisted by some smart fielding on the part of the entire team behind him and by the potency of the winner's bats with Peeney Mills being the hero in this regard as his two triples almost singlehanded beat the Lake Shore town boys.

"Steer" Is Unlucky

It seems that "Steer" Gibson, who used to curve them for the Nationals in days gone by, cannot get in good with the town against his old team mates. Of course he has been on the team himself but that used to carry him to many victories in a like uniform and he is not saying as good and possibly a little better than he did some years ago right now. If the Cobourg outfield was on a par with the inner works the team would be one to be feared, but they are woefully weak in the outer garden and Steer's game on Wednesday was spoiled by their misplays, especially that of Walkley, by the right garden. His misfielded one drive and had two more that hit him on the chest that should have been easy outs and were instrumental in the run getting. Gibson had perfect control in his game, working the Nationals but he allowed twelve hits, the majority coming when they were most needed.

Pointer Was "On"

Pointer, on the other hand, was "on" and when he is that way there are few better leftHanders in the Province. He was throwing that curve where "Peeney" wanted them and when a hurler is doing that little thing best his side is going to be as scarce as fleas on grasshoppers. He drop ball was astonishing for the first time this year and many a Cobourg batter was fooled on what looked to be a fast one but broke away from the outshoot when the batter thought any damage was done. It was a fine pitching game and he appeared to be ready for a real summer. He was handled around by the boys behind the team as a whole were on their toes during the pastime.

Credit to Manager

Walter Cook is managing the youngest ball club in the loop and he has worked wonders with the material at hand. The latter has at times forget, but Walter, who is the soul of politeness tells them of each error and it is not often the same mistake is repeated. Harry Barriage still persists in holding his throws, while in base running and out of the box he has not use their grey matter. A run was thrown away in the game the writer was told of but he told of his fault and it will not happen again. The remainder of the three boys who should develop into headliners are performing like game as the Nationals still further if that is possible. One play that stirred in the field and the other two are Shod Ethier and Cy Barriage. The last mentioned had a bad break on two fences, but he is certainly the best custodian of the hot corner that the team has had in many years and that is saying a lot of praise. He has a wonderful arm, knows how to play, a ground ball and can hit to either side. He is always on his toes and makes every play count. His double play combination had a gem and took Pointer out of a bad hole.

Alex Weir, Peeney Mills and Harry Morgan put the sunshine in the afternoon and they wrecked the hopes of fifteen or more than one occasion. The "old boy" behind the plate is coming like the warm weather. He started to hit in the pinches. On Wednesday his triple in the first inning was the one that wallop in the seventh were the two and you read about his action see. They were on a line and far away and had Scarlett been playing the utmost out of the park, he would have had another. Alex Weir smote Gibson for three singles in five tries and Harry Morgan had a double and two singles to his credit, while Chambers was credited with the other safety he got a hit. In fielding, the team played better than par with the errors committed affecting the play in only one instance. Nationals worked hard to work early on Gibson and in the first frame scored a brace of runs. Alex Weir hit the first ball pitched for a single and was nearly annihilated on the put to second by Scarlett. Cretney came next with a single and Scarlett held at third. Mills' hot fielding on the part of Hodgetts, latter cracked the ball for a long one with a long triple to right field, both runners scoring. In the next frame after Barriage had whiffed Chambers got a life on Walkley's muff, halting at second. Pointer popped to catcher, but Alex Weir lifted a long one over the left fielder. Again in the third after two Nationals were out Hutton at short, Ethier singled cleanly to right and Harry Morgan drove him home with a double.

Pet on Ice

The game was put on ice in the seventh when Alex Weir again hit safely to centre. Scarlett walked, Cretney scored him with his second triple of the afternoon, the first sacker home with the hit of the day, a triple to right field. Ethier sidled cleanly to right and Harry Morgan drove him home with a double.

Pet on Ice

The game was put on ice in the seventh when Alex Weir again hit safely to centre. Scarlett walked, Cretney scored him with his second triple of the afternoon, the first sacker home with the hit of the day, a triple to right field. Ethier sidled cleanly to right and Harry Morgan drove him home with a double.

Cobourg got their lone run in the sixth after two were down when Hudson, ss, singled, stole second and third but each time Pointer was equal to the task and cut off the rally. Hudson, at short, for the locals played a consistent game with seven chances handled cleanly.

The Nationals are postponed game in Peterboro on Saturday and can now better their position by cutting the Lift Lock squad for a loss.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

..Now let's see how the C.O.B.L. situation stands. The Ponies have won five and lost two, the Peterboro five and four and just three while Bellevill's National have won four and lost four. The C.O.B.L. race this year is the keenest ever to open with at least except Cobourg, in there fighting for a playoff position.

Toronto Pointer came into his own yesterday, when he returned to form to let the Cobourg Ponies down with but five small hits. He struck out 13 batters and literally coasted through to victory. Had he got the support the world champion Yanks yesterday, well they would have fared about the same as the Cobourgite.

According to press reports the Kingston sport fans were anything but pleased when Umpire Calder who was working the Peterboro at Kingston game yesterday, called Jimmy Arnold out at third place in the eighth innings. At that stage of the game the score stood 4-2 and Ponies would have forged ahead had the score not been called. There were three on the paths at the time and pitcher Gibson elected to throw out the base runner at the plate for the third out. It seems that the fans in the grandstand players thought that the pitcher should have attempted to touch Arnold on a forced play.

Vern Rose's 11th win was one here of the day when he hit one of Hewitt's pitches for a home run, with two on to the ninth innings. It was a grand and long drive and a nice win for the Peton, Another feature of the game was the fine office got to the speed Tommy Jamieson and Jimmy Arnold attempted to all perils of the bot. Later Jimmy Arnold stole the home plate who did not fare much better than his predecessor. Both teams had eleven hits while the league leading Ponies committed three costly errors. Meanwhile the Nationals mowed up the worst play of the day, Manager Peterson of the Peterborough Prince switched pitchers. In the eighth innings when he replaced Miss Kinsella with Erwin Haines, Erwin's slow curves completely baffled the Nationals and they failed to retired the side with the tying and winning runs on the paths.

Once again the children seem to reign supreme at the crossroads Lawn darling grief softball games. The youngsters had their day on the lawn in general and we noticed a couple of them Cornwall and Peterboro the other night as well. The officials are going to have a ruling during these hidden inside the backyard until one of them is severely injured and then there may develop a suit for damages. It is a poor time to lock the stable after the horse has been stolen. We understand that the teams in the girls' loop are working under a financial strain and cannot afford to hire a policeman. This difficulty could be overcome by the managers of the two teams, not playing the night in question, acting as the policeman and patrolling the park. Once the children found out they could not play there the ball diamond they once would forsake the Armouries Lawn during playing hours.

The first meeting of the Bay of Quinte intermediate league, which Tuesday night last, the loop executive finally decided to adopt the waiving umpiring system. Their system of home and home games has been given a trial and has been the case in all such umpiring systems. The Bay of Quinte league last their season of umpiring immediately and although the system was somewhat unusual they should at least get their league organization. Umpiring can either make or break any league.

It seems as though the Canadian Olympic committee are trying to keep out Percy Williams the Vancouver flash. After Williams has proved to the world that he is in the very best of condition the Canadian committee next comes to Hamilton for the Canadian trials. He has been made captain of the Canadian Olympic team and now he make his travel from Vancouver to Hamilton and then from Hamilton to Los Angeles the very next week is going to be a hard one. Williams are trying to make it as hard for Williams as possible. If they would have him at home he would be given a walk but from Vancouver to Los Angeles he would have to be much better rested than he will be after travelling across the continent and back.

BEAVIS'S HOME RUN WINS FOR PETERBORO

Kingston—July 7—Beavis's home run in the ninth inning, with two on, gave Peterboro a thrilling 4 to 2 victory over the Kingston Purples in the Ontario Baseball League here today, winding up a see-saw battle in which both teams had chances for the lead, with the Petes showing the greater punch.

Four pitchers toiled throughout the game, with Jamieson giving way to Smith after he had allowed four runs in one inning. The Ponies batted back and tied the count in thrilling fashion in the eighth when they scored two runs, but Beavis's clouted the game with a circuit drive in the ninth. Kitchen was credited with the Peter win and after Quinn singled in the ninth he relieved Jamieson and retired the rescue with the Ponies being retired with two men on the sacks.

It was a tragic game most of the way, with a decision by Umpire Calder, who he called G. Arnold out at the plate, arousing the ire of the Kingston fans.

BISONS HAVE WON BUT TWO OF LAST NINE

Ray Schalk Worried Over The Play of His Team

LEAFS DIVIDE

Newark Bears Winging Along Serenly in First Place

(By Associated Press)

With the Newark Bears thundering along in front of the International League pennant race and the Baltimore Orioles a close second, Manager Ray Schalk is looking about for some way of stopping the steady decline of his Buffalo Bisons.

The Bisons, with a patched line up, have won only two of their last nine games, dropping from the lead to third place from where they trail Newark by three games.

Yesterday Schalk's hoopfuls dropped a 9 to 4 decision to the Jersey City Skeeters in the opening of the north south series. Bill Gould, pitching for Buffalo lost his first game of the season as the Skeeters collected 13 hits, including a home run for the Boone. Fresco Thompson and Jimmy Jordan each got three hits.

Increase Lead

Newark increased its lead over Baltimore to two full games by trouncing the Montreal Royals 7 to 3 behind the five hit pitching of Rufus Meadows. One of the hits was a home run by Wallace Moses also connected with two singles. Rochester and Baltimore divided a pair of well pitched games the Red Wings winning the opener 3 to 1 and the Orioles the night cap 4 to 3. Riley hit a home run with Gautreau on base in the seventh inning of the latter game to give the Orioles the second tilt.

Breaks Even

Reading and Toronto also broke even, the Keys taking the first game 6 to 4 in 13 innings, and the Leafs the second 3 to 2. The latter scored four times and the Leafs once. Chris Chambliss provided the final inning when Toronto struck across the tying and winning runs.

National Maids Score Two in Eighth to Win

In one of the best played games of the season in the girl's softball league the National Maids staged a belated rally to win from the last place Victoria outfit by a close score of 3 to 4 at the Armouries on Tuesday night.

The game was evenly matched throughout and the winners only managed to get across the plate in the dying moments of the game. Manager Peterson of the Maids had an pitcher Molly Gray to hurl the game for the locals and she rose to the occasion by letting the hard hitting Victoria players down with but 10 scattered hits. Every circuit registering was made by "Tiny" Tuttis, the big first baseman for the Tuttis was the big hitter of the game, getting a home run, a triple, a double, and a triple during the five innings.

The game was filled with fast fielding plays throughout, which saved many plays being registered by both teams. Although the Maids committed three errors they did not seem to effect the morale of the team in any great extent.

The line-ups:

Claco—Baker, Doolittle, Howie, Morgan, Cameron, Thompson, Gray Canning, Dey.

LODGE BOYS LOSE CHANCE

Wellington Kids Draw Near Playoff Berth by 14-4 Win

In a closely played game the Wellington juniors pulled a little nearer to the playoff position when they defeated the Moose juniors by the score of 14 to 4 at Wellington Wednesday evening.

Bill Noble hurled the game for the winners and although the game well in hand all the afternoon. Nobles' shoots were far too good for the "Lodge lads" as they could not seem to solve his deliveries long enough to assure themselves of a win.

Flunder hurled for the losers and the loss of the game cannot be laid at his door as he buried good enough ball to win any average game. Wait, Fillingham and Phillips were the big hitters for the winners, while Tapp and Bennett were the best performers for the Moose kids. The Wellington kids are well in line for a play-off position in the local league and will bear watching in the play-off series.

The line-ups:

Wellington—Stein, Noble, Mohrer, Green, Wait, Mann, Fillingham, Vandervoort, Phillips, Young.

AMELIASBURG SOFTBALL LOOP

Consecon, July 7 (Special)—Playing easily being splendid pitching by Roy James, Consecon Tuesday night polled themselves out of the cellar position by beating Victoria 10-6. With a newly arranged infield and Carter in the outfield, the Consecon team worked nicely and gave Victoria, who seemed to imagine the game an easy thing, a surprise. After scoring seven runs in the first two innings, Consecon just coasted along to win, and though, Wannamaker replaced Walbridge as pitcher for Victoria in the fourth, the damage was done. In the sixth Victoria were in a fine scoring position with two on and none out, but only succeeded in getting in two.

After scoring four runs in the first and blanking their opponents, the Victoria team commenced to go backwards in batting of the crowd, and allowed the Redneresville boys to score seven runs in the second, three of them on Dempsey's home run, one run in the second and one in the 5th and 6th. July 12—Carrying Place at Consecon.

EDDIE McDONALD TO BE DEPORTED

In Limelight When He Usurped Mayor's Chair

Oshawa, Ont., July 7 (CP) — Deportation of Eddie McDonald, for long recognized as leader of Oshawa's unemployed, will shortly take place, according to information reaching here. McDonald is now in Kingston Ontario Reformatory.

McDonald was last in the limelight when he created a disturbance at the city hall, forcibly occupying the mayor's chair. He was on numerous occasions at the time on a charge of stealing railway ties.

Immigration authorities say McDonald arrived from England to Canada in 1927, although McDonald himself contends he was born in the Dominion.

WEDDING INVITATION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—We have never met the bride-to-be. We intend to send money for the wedding. How should this be sent and how soon?

H.

1.—You do not say what kind of invitation you received to the wedding, but I am taking it for granted that it is the usual formal engraved one. Also I am taking it for granted that the invitation included an invitation to the reception following the ceremony. (If the invitation is to the church ceremony only it is not necessary that we acknowledge it.)

The formal invitation to the reception is acknowledged like this, if you are "request" it:

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hall regret that they are unable to accept Mr. and Mrs. (Bride's parents') kind invitation for Tuesday, the first of August.

2.—Money, as a wedding gift, is often sent in the form of a gold piece, and this is a charming way to do it, I think. Or it may be sent in the form of a check, or of a money order. (The check is preferable to the money order.)

With the gold piece or the check or the money order should go a short "good wishes for your happiness always". The gift is sent to the bride-to-be, even if you do not know her. And it should be sent as soon as possible.

SHAKING HANDS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

On leaving two friends of mine whom I had been visiting, I shook hands with them, but only nodded good evening to a friend of theirs who was also visiting my friends and with whom I was slightly acquainted. Should I have shaken hands with the third person also?

Joe.

Yes, it would have been better if you had, after you had shaken hands with the other guests. You should always be on the safe side that the third person would "feel slighted, and it is so easy to do this.

PARTY ATTIRE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister and I are going to a catered affair which will take place in a large hall in the city. It starts on a Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, and will continue until about one in the morning. Would it be proper to wear a formal gown or should we wear Sunday night dresses? I believe several evening gowns will be worn.

O.

Since the party is to begin so early in the afternoon I think you would not be appropriate. An informal evening dress or an afternoon dress would be proper; say a chiffon, plain or printed, with a jacket perhaps or made with the new fashionable cape effect. Any type of evening wrap will be worn over the arms.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are expecting a new comer in our home and I have been advised by my physician to employ a nurse professionally for same, to please let them know when the baby arrives. Should I inform them (dentist, my former employer, etc., one or two acquaintances, or what would you suggest I wish to do the right thing, also the proper thing, and feel that you are the best source of information. Hoping and I also enjoy your column and profit from it.

Reader.

Since apparently you are planning to send announcements, it would be quite appropriate and correct for you to send one of these to each of these people. Then you will be so kind and friendly in their attitude. (And may I add, one thing which to you, dear lady, for this wondrous event "trailing clouds of glory" and thank you for your friendly comments on the column. Please come again when you can help).

Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted to her.

RESPITE

How red the sun that sank into a sea,
The sun himself had stained a fiery red—
As if his mighty heart had burst and bled
From one day's effort to scorch valiantly
Man's bended back and force him to be kind,
To shrivel up the river in its bed;
To burn the grain and with each ripening head
Of grain, and scar the leaves of every tree.
But night is come at last and filfully
A sigh goes up from the parched earth, a prayer
Of thankfulness for dusk. Interlude of rest.
Man lifts his head to breathe a freer air,
As flowers lift to catch the tiny pool
Of dew that must come with the evening cool.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

How's The Hair Doing These Days?

In one respect, anyhow, providence is kind to women. The sisters don't have to worry about getting bald. If a woman were to become afflicted with a hairless pate and false transformations were not obtainable, she would retire to a dark cellar and remain there to the end of her days. To cavort about, be pleased with herself, after the fashion of skittish old baldheaded boys, would be impossible. Anything could be born except that.

There's a theory that the daily shower is the cause of baldness. Which kills sounds a shiver of sesephenian through the nervous system of the woman who dampens her permanent wave every day. Might be something to it. Better may be to buy the fingerwave every fortnight and not go in for the wet push-up system.

Water robs the hair of natural oil on, which it thrives and-which is a certain cure for. Many hair specialists are oil fans. Just as all conscientious whose creams which keep the skin from flaying it salt and keep it pearly pearly, taking on the surface form of a nutmeg grater.

Men kill young hair by whacking the little sprouts with heavy bristled brushes. The brush goes through the thatch like a hurricane through a young forest. Each bristle should be trained to forgo vigorous brushing because of the upkeep of waves they have had placed upon their foreheads. Brushing removes dust. It does nothing more than that.

The glorious crown, like the other organs and elements of the body is dependent upon constitutional vitality, and health. There was that man Samson, for instance. A Philistine pulled his sweetie-mama sheared off his brain mat. There is the caveman, presented with a bushy floor mop style of coiffure and ferocious whiskers. Nobody knows why. No artists alive today ever saw him. But we go associate strong muscles, good circulation, reliable digestion with a normal abundant, healthy growth of hair. Frail little whippy women have stinky, whippy hair.

No doubt nutrition has a lot to do with it. We're not considering men now. They're getting bald younger all the time. Women have better hair than they ever had. They take more scientific care of their hair than men do.

When do men wash combs and brushes?

Between scalp and skull, there is a layer of fat. Illness or age may make this adipose substance to disappear, when the scalp tightens, becomes fixed. Blood vessels go dry and fail, and that's bad, because blood vessels are bread tickets for the hair.

The more friction the scalp gets the better for its condition. A little added during the massage is a help. Rubbing alcohol diluted one half with water will serve. It benefits because it creates warmth. The scalp should be lifted and moved from place to place. Clamp down the finger ends in a rotary movement with the thumb pressing firmly into the tissues.

But never worry about baldness. That is one trouble that doesn't depend upon a woman's head.

What's A Girl to Do When "The Boss" is a Cad?

(By Beatrice Fairfax)

An authority on Problems of Love and Etiquette.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have a swell job, and I need it most awfully, as my family exchequer has shrunk to about nothing and that keeping me is quite appalling. One night we had to work late over some income tax figures, and the boss' kisses almost paralyzed me by asking me if I'd dine with him. I went and he told me how much he had admired me since I had been with the firm. I was pretty uncomfortable.

Since then he's invited me to lunch three times. I accepted once, declined twice. I'm afraid now either to accept or decline. I'm married and has grown children. I have a great deal of my own, whom I hope to marry as soon as times get better and my family is less on my hands. I am terribly.

Puzzled.

What steps to take depends so much on the type of man "the boss" happens to be. If he's got a decent sense of sportsmanship, and can be made to realize that you are not thanking unwelcome attentions on a girl who has her living to make and needs her job desperately, you may be able to handle the situation.

But if he is a cad, he'll be one to the bitter end. One girl in the same situation as you find yourself, said when "the boss" invited her to lunch: "I'm so sorry, but Bob and I are lunching at the drug store. He's my fiance, you know."

That particular patriarch had much better luck next time and again suggest lunch; but just as likely as not, he might have fired her.

Another girl thought a fib was the means which justified the end and said "The last time I lunched with you, Mr.—, I heard you go 'round about way, your wife knew about it, and that she wasn't pleased."

Again with a little adroit flattery, she might put the situation up to him and tell him she admired him so much as a lawyer, financier, clerk, captain of industry, or whatever he happened to be, and she wanted to keep her illusion about great man. Madame de Maintenon pulled one like that on Louis XIV of France and eventually married him, but that sort of thing enables a positive genius.

If you're a thoroughly efficient employee "the Boss" is likely to keep you, even if you turn him down in a lunch-with-me-line. At bottom, these elderly sultans of the business world are often quite naive children, and a clever girl can pit her wits against them and come through the ordeal triumphant.

But what sublime egoism they have to imagine a young girl could have any real interest in them; that one who did accept their invitations would do so for any but entirely impersonal motives!

The Beauty Box

Pick up your foot and walk. Miss Beauty seeker, Do a bit of lively stepping every day. A three mile canter is good for lingering thoughts. It stralghtens, cures nerves, puts flesh and fire into the eyes, does more for the complexion than all the creams, lotions and powders compounded by frenzied cosmetic chemists. If you are easy to please the dear ladies. Plump girls will discover to their satisfaction and delight that the daily constitutional shake loses fat cells helps them to qualify for the slenderest silhouette. It was intended that human feet should travel under their own steam, not loll in motor cars and grow rotund lines that are difficult to banish.

Keep in the swim while the swimming is good, but see that the complexion is protected from the sun's burning rays. Don't wade into the waves complete immersion tends to equalize complexion of the blood and to hasten the reaction from the shock of cold water. Wait two hours after a meal before you play mermaid. If you take dips in the ocean don't fail to rinse the hair with clear water.

When oil or cream is applied to finger nails it must be removed by means of a towel. Never leave before a polish is applied. Otherwise the rosy glint won't be a success. The application of the red varnish, now popular, gives a better, more delicate, effect than two. Nail white to remove stains from nail eaves and tips should be used first. Dry shampoos are only makeshifts to be turned to when the sudsy cleanser is not possible or convenient. The best medium is made by grating orris root, corn root and corn meal, equal parts. Put in a flour sifter shaker and sprinkle over the scalp. Brush the hair vigorously. Give a final brushing with a piece of white piece of cotton placed over the bristles of the brush.

A convenient way to use brilliantine is to put a few drops in the hair with an atomizer. There is even distribution.

Facial blowsy is a major beauty crime. An insignificant detail of the toilet may be the undoing one. For instance, a soiled gardenia placed in the bosom of a white dress or white gloves that show darkened knuckle spots. Run-over heels ruin the picture of a trim ankle, brown lipstick and a strain on leg muscles and ankles. These are only a few examples given in dress, even if fastidiousness of appearance is somewhat overlooked. A girl should be dainty. She can't be dainty unless she is scrupulously clean in habits and in personal appointments. It is par tantalizing to find skin of shoulders have her powder evenly distributed and wear her lip stain straight.

A new finish to the collarless neckline is made by using necklaces. One model shown in Paris of white crepe was completed by a necklace of heavy ivory rings strung on a coarse black silk cord. A large knot in front, finished by a strand of bronze medallions on a black cord.

You may wash some of the new evening dresses that have been made this season the thing. A new frock is made of white linen plaided in green blue, lavender and green. It has a harness back and a sash of green ribbons in the various colors of the plaid. The skirt is long and full.

Be sure to include a lace evening ensemble in your wardrobe if you are going away. It packs beautifully and is indispensable. A charming model is done in red flat silk lace. The front neckline is high with long shoulders, but the back decolletage is very low. The matching cape falls from bateau neck to elbow that ties in a large butterfly bow.

Absolutely essential is a large linen hat with one's chiffon frocks. Agnes makes a beauty of light, cocoa brown leghorn with brim and trims it with waxed ribbon in a deep rose shade and two deeper pink flat velvet roses. The wide brim is mushroom shape.

Take your suit in the form of one of the new clip watches introduced by a famous Parisian Jeweller. The clip is triangular and clips on the lapel of a jacket. It is made in platinum with modernistic lines of onyx.

In advance information comes the news that bronze will be very important with Autumn afternoon and informal evening things. For day wear, the bronze kid pump will have exactly matching stockings.

BANK SHARES MOVE HIGHER

Bank of Montreal Featured With Advance of 13 1-2 pts.

Toronto, July 7—Shares of Canadian banks were as strongly in demand this morning as during their sensational advance of yesterday. While Bank of Montreal again featured with a sharp advance in the bid price of 13½ points, no issues were offered on the way up and the real trading interest was in Canadian Bank of Commerce shares which rose between 2 and 3 points in an active market. Bank of Toronto showed a gain of 15 points to 190. Dominion Bank shares rose 3 points and Royal Bank 1 point with Nova Scotia and Imperial firm but unchanged.

The appreciation the past couple of days has amounted to over $15,000,000 based on shares of these institutions reported outstanding at the end of their latest fiscal year ends.

Along the general list there were small recoveries in Nickel Steel of Canada, C.P.R., and Walkers common and preferred. These losses nearly were lost when trading in liquidation. Brazilian and Massey-Harris issues gave up a small fraction while Bell Telephone Ford of Canada, Consumers gas and most of the oils were unchanged.

STOCK PRICES DRIFT IDLY

New York Traders Wait on Fence Writing Developments

New York, July 7—The stock market drifted idly today, as uncertainties over developments at Washington and Lausanne held traders on the fence.

To begin with, the list was inclined to follow its recent pattern on declining to the first hour and hardening thereafter. But the movement was extremely narrow, selling close to 3r. Early loss of a point or so in such issues as American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Eastman and Corn Products were required. The American and Foreign Power common and preferred issues, and International Nickel showed a moderately firm tone. Chain shares, and some of the specialties, were inclined to ease.

U. S. Steel recovered a loss of 1-8. Armour of Delaware preferred rallied nearly 3 points.

International bonding quarters remained moderately hopeful over Lausanne, despite the absence of constructive developments were reported from the latest parleys, regardless of apparent deadlock over the "Mr. Gallit" clause.

The official rate for call loans was brought to 2 per cent where it was built at Fort Erie and sailed in the 1813-14 campaign against the British alongside the Scorpion flagship of Admiral Perry.

An American vessel, at Put-in-Bay and the capture by the Scorpion of the British Queen Charlotte stated the United States forces, and they proceeded to attack the naval base at Penetanguishene. Then their success over the short, however, and the Tigress and the Scorpion went to the bottom of Georgian Bay in a gale and maintained as historic relics.

GIANT AIRSHIP AIDS YACHT SEARCH

New York, July 7 —The U. S. naval airship Akron had joined inaugural day in the search of the Curlew, long overdue in the ocean race from Montauk Point to Bermuda.

On government orders the airship took to the air last night and will cover most of the territory between Montauk and Bermuda. She will remain aloft three days if necessary, the course being directed by coast guard vessels already engaged in the search for the Curlew, sailing out of Thorpe Neck, N.Y., started the race to Bermuda from Montauk Point, Long Island, a week ago Saturday and although the Curlew had reached Bermuda last week, some of them as much as a week.

Diver Says Boats Can be Raised Without Difficulty

ICE DESTROYS

Iron Work is Incrusted With Barnacles and Very Soft

Midland, July 7—From the muddy bed where it has lain more than a century the long American war vessel, sunk in Penetanguishene Bay, can be raised without difficulty, Captain Robert Carson, Midland, reported late Wednesday.

Captain Carson in this survey of the point where the vessel lies and her sister ship the Scorpion, are lodged in the bottom of the bay, discovered several interesting spikes two feet long, scuppers and iron bars. Barnacles large as bees' eggs encrusted the iron, which had been softened by the lengthy soaking.

Chain is Bright

The chain believed to have been used for fastening down cannon, also was brought to the surface. Several scuppers on the boat are still in good condition.

The Tigress is split both fore and aft, about four feet from the deck, probably as the result of ice action. The keel and stem post, deck and bow timbers are sound, although the greater part of the deck rail has fallen away.

Sailed Into 1813 Campaign.

The ship was built in record time, it was built at Fort Erie and sailed into the 1813-14 campaign against the British alongside the Scorpion flagship of Admiral Perry.

An American vessel, at Put-in-Bay and the capture by the Scorpion of the British Queen Charlotte stated the United States forces, and they proceeded to attack the naval base at Penetanguishene. Then their success over the short, however, and the Tigress and the Scorpion went to the bottom of Georgian Bay in a gale and maintained as historic relics.

that agreements between Britain and France, and Britain and Italy, are that France and Italy will not be required to pay instalments pending ratification of such general agreement as may be reached here.

—A letter to Germany explaining the gentleman's agreement.

The British delegate only remaining stumbling block was a political question regarding the naturing the maintenance of the European status for some years, which would preclude raising the question of the Polish corridor.

Premier Herriot however has rejected the proposals for political agreement in Spring.

Annexe to the agreement provide that Germany will not make misinterpretations of the treaty for the settlement of the Ruhr Basin, the position of the Essen coal basin and inter-crditor debts in Europe.

FORMULA ADOPTED

LAUSANNE, July 7—(Canadian Press Cable)—Following day-long conversations between Premier Herriot and Chancellor Von Papen it was reported this afternoon that France and Germany had agreed on a formula settling the "war guilt" clause in the Versailles Peace treaty which will close the Reparations conference here by a decree to the effect that it "completely replaces all previous Reparations Agreements."

War Guilt

The treaty of Versailles in the article dealing with Reparations specifically places upon Germany the blame for the Great War and this has provoked more protest than any other clause than any other part of the Treaty.

The practical compromise on this formula was said to have been reached by an agreement that Germany would post a final payment on Reparations of 150 million gold dollars, this or $750,000,000 in lieu of further annuities.

"EMBERS of LOVE"

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

COPYRIGHT 1931-BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

Gwin was in a vile humor. The throaty contralto who sang "Du bist ein Traum" left in tears. He even found fault with the Russian soprano's French, though he had said repeatedly that her accent was perfect.

The book agents called, and he almost kicked them out. When a moment's peace had been restored again, Lily Lou looked up in some alarm. She was afraid it was the over-large bowl of punch.

It was no book agent. It was Nita Nahlman.

Older, but the same unforgettable Nahlman, who sang Carmen in Lily Lou's first visit to the opera in San Francisco, nearly eleven years ago. Even then she was fat, but her figure was enormous, but not unpleasantly so. She had a mass of black curls, or Lily Lou would have seen her petulant offense in the fact that she was delicately—but not too delicately—hemmed now with her bright blue eyes focused on Gwin, who really were, because of blue mascara and the shadow of lid, immense.

She was dressed in a sable coat. The largest orchids in the world were pinned on her shoulder. Her ears pendant diamonds, like clear luminous drops of dew in sunlight, reflecting beams of light.

Of course her gloves, revealing lovely, young-looking hands, the fingers banded with rubies, and the mesh of emerald bracelets clattered slightly on her wrists. She gave a little cry of surprise at the sudden sight of Gwin.

Lily Lou found out afterward that she had never cared very much about Gwin. Singers never bore very good friends. This was just the Nahlman personality—as other kissed you on both cheeks, or didn't speak at all.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

Lily Lou went off to a corner near the windows, to be out of the way, but Nita Nahlman was too much the actress to neglect even such an insignificant bit of audience as the accompanist. She laughed she flashed, she shook and she sparkled. Lily Lou couldn't resist the impression of the woman. She couldn't keep her eyes off her.

Gwin decided to be gracious. "Nita, you must let me present my accompanist. This will be the biggest day of her life. Come over here, Lily. You're going to meet the great Nita Nahlman."

Lily Lou came forward, a little shy, her cheeks flushed and Nahlman took her hand, and smiled down at her from her superior height and sighed, half laughing. "Oh, to be so young again! Dwight you're going to weep!"

"Oh to be great enough to transcend first youth, first beauty!" Gwin smiled back.

"Oh, yes, I am still beautiful enough on the stage. They still come when Nahlman sings"—with conceit—"I should say so. I couldn't even get standing room your last night of Tosca."

"What! You didn't hear me! But the whole of New York was there. How stupid of you...Why didn't you call me? Why not? A woman, eh? What! A woman, my dear!"

She began poking him playfully with a jewelled forefinger. "Tow men—all alike."

Lily Lou would have been forgotten. If Gwin had not had reason son of his own for changing the conversation.

He took her arm now, pushed her toward Nahlman. "Stop bedgering my innocent man, Nita. Now you're here sit down for five minutes. See what you think of my latest."

"Oh, she sings—that one?"

Nahlman looked at Lily Lou, with something like interest in her deep-shaded eyes. She glanced at heavy-lidded eyes, she glanced at the small clock on a seventeenth century chest. Yes, but in five minutes I must go. I sail Wednesday. I have three performances in Paris, then my classes for two months, and a concert series in England. My classes are so full it will be wonderful. Bigger than the summer—"

She sank onto a sofa, waved toward that tongue-tied Lily Lou. "Sing something my dear."

Gwin went to the piano. He drummed idly a moment. Lily Lou could feel her scalp tingling, each separate hair rising by itself.

A dream of a lifetime, to be heard one day by Nita Nahlman—but not now—not today, after a sleepless night—

She clasped her hands, looked appealingly at Nahlman, studying the bracelets on her wrist.

Gwin had begun the familiar music of Mignon—"Connais tu le pays."...He had said that he'd be her accompanist, that if she ever learned enough French and Italian to make an opera debut, that would be her choice—Mignon—

She opened her mouth. "I can't—I can't—"

That was what she thought she was going to say. But instead she found her voice going in the aria. Gwin was playing. He dared not stop. She knew she had sung better before, that Gwin was ashamed of her, that Nahlman was bored. She didn't want to do it brilliantly... just to get through it. To get through it somehow, and cry and cry.....

"Connais tu le pays en fleurs—" Gwin sang.

"C'est la, c'est la que je voudrai vivre—"

The tears came near the surface of her voice, but it rose, sweet and strong above them. In a wave of homesickness, of despair, of longing, she finished, and stood, her hands still clasped, afraid to look at Gwin, afraid to look at Madame Nahlman.

"I've just had her three months. She was practically untrained when she came to me. Gwin, I must have a shoulder. He began the wailing song from Butterfly—Don't say the things that suited her, he thought.

Without looking at Nahlman, Lily Lou sang it, too. Sang it better than she had the first aria.

He began the first bars of the Shadow Song.

Madame Nahlman stood up. "I haven't time now, Gwin. I must go."

Of course. She hadn't time. Lily Lou had not expected anything else. She just stood, waiting, because she didn't know what to do or say. Does one thank an artiste for listening? Does one applaud? Gwin. She didn't know....

Madame Nahlman was speaking again.

"Why can't I take her with me?" she asked.

"Lily! Trot her off to France, and leave me without an accompanist—"

"Tiff! Tous etcompanist. What do you know about that girl. We leave Wednesday. The Aquitania. You will come, my dear?"

Lily Lou balanced on her heels. She tried to take in what was happening.....Nita Nahlman talking about taking her to Europe..... taking her.....taking her.....

"Sure she'll come. I'll see that she gets her passport. Nita—"

Nahlman was gone with a wave of the jewelled bracelets.

Lily Lou walked around like a sleep-walker, starry-eyed, a little tremulous.

It couldn't have happened. The thing was absurd. She tried Gwin's brittle patience almost to the breaking point by asking over and over:

"You're sure she really meant it? She's really and truly going to take me?"

"Yes, she's going to take you, all right. Good heaven, must you be notified a year in advance? Can't you take a piece of luck and rejoice? Stop arguing about it."

Lily Lou stopped arguing about it. It couldn't have happened.... but it had! It really had!

She wired the family:

SAILING WEDNESDAY ON AQUITANIA WITH MADAME NITA NAHLMAN AND WILL STUDY WITH HER IN PARIS. WONDERFUL CHANCE FOR ME. LETTER FOLLOWS. MUCH LOVE. LILY LOU.

Mrs. Manchester was delighted. "Madame Nahlman! Really!"

"Manchester gets a second-hand kick out of everything we do," Maxine said.

Maxine did not show much surprise at the news, but nothing surprised Maxine very much. She made a great fuss about Lily Lou's good luck, and dragged out her clothes out of the closet to help her pack, then remembered an engagement, and went off in the midst of it. Nobody really cared very much what happened to you, here in New York.

Not even Gwin. He was delighted in a way, but in another way he didn't seem to care. The same with Madame Nahlman. Offer you the other bed in her de luxe stateroom on the ship, promise to tutor you in Paris, and then seem to forget all about you.

Lily Lou flew to get her passport, her visa, to buy the little extra things one always needs, to draw out the $150 still left in the bank.

She was going to Europe with Nita Nahlman. She, Lily Lou Lansing from Woodlake....She hurried with her packing, her last minute ironing. She wanted time to write a long letter to May.

A little smile trembled at the corner of her mouth as she wrote. A sly little smile of triumph..... May knew a girl who had a friend who worked on a newspaper. May would tell her friend, and the friend would tell her friend, and it would be in the paper, probably with that picture she had taken the year she was eighteen, she had changed a lot since then, but Kent would remember her, more like that so it was just as well....

She couldn't help wanting Ken to know. There wasn't any harm in that. Not even Peggy Bart could object to that....to his reading about her in a paper.....

She went to her bureau and took out the soft newspaper clippings she had hidden under her handkerchiefs.

The Sargent Steamship Line and the Sage Navigation company had merged.

Kentfield Carey Sargent Third, en route for South America.

Kentfield Carey Sargent, Third, general freight agent of the Sargent Navigation Company, on board the yacht Seaforth to race next summer in the Pacific coast annuals.

Miss Peggy Alexander Page, whose engagement to Kentfield Sargent, Third, ...

Lily Lou rolled up the clippings, stuck them in a corner of her trunk.

Her consolement, the miserable Woodlake conscience, began to torture her. How could she go to Europe, with Madame Nahlman not knowing that in April....

She tried to remember Dwight Gwin's exact words. "None of her business"—and then began inventing it to her. Trump up some excuse to see friends or somethin'; and slip off to the American hospital straight up in bed, her blue eyes wide, her long, reddish hair dressing her shoulders.

Lily Lou tried again.

This time there was no possible misunderstanding. Madame Nahlman drained her coffee cup, put it down on the tray and stared at Lily Lou for a long minute. Then she fell back on her pillow and screamed with choking, gurgling laughter.

She laughed until she cried, and Lily Lou had difficulty in not crying, too.

"Oh!" she choked, "if that isn't the—the most—"

When she quieted a little, Lily Lou rose to go. She was pale, and very calm.

"I thought you'd feel that way," she said, "It was nice of you to ask me to go, Madame Nahlman. I'm only sorry that it wasn't possible—"

Under the bright blue gaze of the bemused diva, Lily Lou was not hardly continue. She spread her hands in a hopeless gesture.

"You have changed your mind. you won't come with me?"

"Oh, no—I mean, yes, of course I'd go, but how could I let you take me, when—when—"

Madame Nahlman went off into another fit of laughter. She seeming to be considering some private, priceless joke of her own. "Life! So complicated... But never mind. you can have all the babies you want. Have twins!" Another gale of laughter. "We sail tonight, just the same, only you will be seasick, my poor little girl. But never mind. That is life."

"I was married!" Lily Lou cried desperately. "I married a boy who was not quite twenty-one, and his parents had it annulled. So I left, and came to New York—"

JULY 7 MR. AND MRS. SEEING AFRICA FROM SEATS IN THE ORCHESTRA

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 68

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

More was in the letter—words that made Meriem's heart beat faster and happy flush mount her cheeks. But when next evening she arrived at the trysting place she was astonished to find not Baynes but two other riders. She drew back startled as she saw one was Hanson. "Mr. Baynes had an accident. His horse fell on him, so he sent me to meet you and bring you to camp." In the darkness Meriem could not see the fellow's gloating triumphant expression.

Troubled by this unexpected turn of events, Meriem followed Hanson. All night rode. The girl did not know where the camp lay. Hanson had brought well-filled saddle bags. They halted for breakfast and again rode on. Meriem finally became suspicious. Gradually the attitude of this fellow was changing. Often she surprised him devouring her with his eyes. Steadily an idea worked in on somewhere, sometime before she had known this man.

At last they broke out of the Jungle and upon the opposite river bank Meriem saw a camp. "Here we are," said Hanson. He fired his revolver and native boys came to paddle them across. When she asked for Baynes, Hanson pointed toward the single tent standing in the centre of the enclosure. "He's in there," he said and held back the flap for Meriem to enter. As she did so she saw the tent was empty.

"Where is Mr. Baynes?" she demanded. "He ain't here," replied Hanson, grinning. "But I'm here and I'm a better man than he is. You don't need him no more. You got me." He laughed as he reached for her. Meriem struggled to free herself. As she fought there came a sudden recollection of a similar scene and with it full recognition of her assailant. He was Malbihn the Swede! But today there would be no Bwana to rescue her.

Letters from England

From Mr. G. M. James for His Former Students

No 12.

First of all I wish to thank the many persons who have written me so kindly concerning this series of letters. I take this opportunity to say that it is not possible for me to reply to them separately as they came me many from Belleville but from many other parts. At the same time I must point out that the Christmas holiday season is doing a hundred times more for you in this connection than I am and I trust you will express your thanks when an opportunity is afforded you. It is much better to give one's thanks in the form rather than to the dead.

My last letter left off rather abruptly in Edinburgh. This letter will conclude impressions in Scotland and give an account of the wonderful return journey to London south along the east for over four hundred miles.

We spent one Sunday in Edinburgh and attended the two most historic churches we had heard about, St. Giles and St. Cuthbert. At St. Giles (Presbyterian) there was a larger congregation than we had seen at either St. Paul's or at Westminster Abbey but more than half were visitors like ourselves. Visitors are kept together in one part of the church until five minutes before the service and then are permitted to take any seats they can find. Fortunately we found a seat within ten feet of the speaker and printed brass in the pavement before us were words which stated that on that spot the body of Earl King (a chief commander in the World Wars) was placed during his funeral service. The speaker was comparatively well rested during his funeral service. The speaker was comparatively well rested during his funeral service. The speaker was comparatively well rested

INDIAN SAYS RESERVE IS ONLY HOME

Has Been Exited And Jailed But Still Returns

OTTAWA EXPLAINS

Says Council Has No Power to Exile Man

London, Ont., July 7—Fred Antone, aged 23, at present in Middlesex County Jail, has been ordered by the Indian Council on his reserve never to return there again. It is by only home he has ever known, Until last February he lived there, after he informed on three of the braves who were struck he was advised by the Council to leave, it is claimed. Failing to do so, he was expelled from the Indian land. On his return he was arrested as a trespasser and sentenced to a month in jail. After serving the term he went back, and was again arrested for trespassing and sent down sixty days. This term will expire on Saturday. He plans, if possible, to put his case up to the authorities in Ottawa.

Ultra Vires!

Ottawa, July 7—The Indian Council at its reserve has not the right to expel Indians from the reserve, it was stated last night at the Indian Affairs Department in connection with the case of Fred Antone, who has been ordered by the Indian Council never to return to Muncey and land allotted for trespassing. The procedure governing cases of this kind is set forth in the Indian Act.

The Council usually recommends that some one who is not entitled to reside on the reserve be removed, and the recommendation is dealt with by the Superintendent who has illegitimate jurisdiction. The Indian Council is elected by ballot or otherwise by the people living on the reserve.

A report of the Muncey case has been received here. It is stated that an Indian who obtains the franchise as a Canadian citizen ceases to be an Indian within the meaning of the law and becomes a white man to all intents and purposes. It is not known however whether Antone has secured the franchise and has been expelled on that ground.

SUICIDES FOR LOVED BALLET

Clevelander Explains Reason for Jumping Over Falls

New York, July 7.—Nicol Semencoff's motive for suicide concerned not himself, but his beloved ballet.

The famous Russian dancer, a teacher Cleveland, leaped to his fatal night years, is believed to have plunged to his death over Niagara Falls Wednesday.

"I am ending my life by suicide because I cannot bear any longer the slander and persecution of the ballet," he wrote in Russian, a 10-page air-mail letter which his friend and one-time master, Michael Fokine, received in Hollywood yesterday.

Early today two persons saw a man wade above the falls. They reported to him, but the man waded on, was caught in the swift current and dashed over the crest.

"It must be," he wrote to Fokine, "that my jump into the Niagara Falls will sufficiently disturb you and others will back me in my self-inflicted modernists."

Semenoff was about 50 years old, unmarried. He became associated with Mr. Fokine in 1906, studied ballet dancing under him and later became an instructor and managing director of the Diaghilev Ballet, which was produced by Fokine.

FLIERS SEVERAL HOURS OVERDUE

Should Have Been in Moscow Early Thursday Morning

Moscow, July 7 (AP)—Air officials at the Moscow airport began a series of inquiries along the route taken by James Mattern and Bennett Griffin, round the world fliers from Berlin to Moscow when the fliers had not reached here at 9.30 a.m. (2.30 a.m. E.S.T.) today.

The flyers were then more than an hour overdue, on the basis of normal flying time between here and Berlin.

Reports received here said the weather was favorable all along the route and experts said they believed the flyers either were forced down or that they passed Moscow during the night, which latter alternative they considered not very probable.

At The Belle
GRETA GARBO A PLATINUM BLONDE IN "AS YOU DESIRE ME."

Greta Garbo, who may always be relied upon for something different, appears as a platinum-blonde cafe singer in her latest screen characterization as Zara in "As You Desire Me."

The new Garbo picture, at the Belle, opens today and Friday. Matinee daily.

It is a filmization of New York dramatic hit by the noted Italian playwright, Luigi Piarndello, with Adrienne continuity by Gene Markey, George Fitzmaurice, who recently scored with his production of "Mata Hari" again directed Garbo, and Erich Von Stroheim.

The star is supported by Melvyn Douglas, made his film debut in "Counsellor," Gloria Swanson in "Tonight Or Never"; the celebrated character actor; Erich Von Stroheim; Owen Moore, Hedda Hopper, Rafaela Ottiano, Warburton Gamble, Albert Conti, William Rickard and Roland Varno.

Plays Dangerous Game

In "As You Desire Me," Miss Garbo enacts the role of a temperamental Budapest cafe entertainer who is mistaken by an Italian nobleman for the wife whom he thought to have been killed by invaders during the World War. In order to escape the demands of a ruthless novelist who has a hypnotic influence over her, Garbo resolves to enact the bluff of the nobleman's wife, a game which proves to be as dangerous as it is diverting. The novelist stops at nothing in his attempt to bring the ex-cafe chanteuse back into his power, and she is therefore forced to watch her wits against those of the man she has come to adore. The result is said to be the most adventurous, intriguing and romantic drama in which the fascinating Swedish actress has yet been seen.

As is customary with Miss Garbo's pictures, studio officials spared no expense to equipping the production with lavish settings, of which one of the most ambitious is the magnificent outdoor scene filmed on the coast of the Pacific Ocean. The scene represents the "Feast of Midsummer," and celebrated the lovers, and shows a fleet of tiny craft pushing out into the water to meet the rising sun. The Budapest episodes and later irquences at a magnificent Italian villa are also said to be beautifully mounted.

Varied short offerings—A sure cure for the blues is offered in "Doctor's Orders," the funny sunshine comedy offered on the same program with the Belle News, and Anna Chang in a clever VaudeVAL

At The Capitol
"YOUNG AMERICA" AND SCHMELING-SHARKEY FIGHT

The drama of boys at the threshold of manhood, facing the several paths leading to honor, to crime, to respectability, and undecided which to take, forms the background that Director Frank Borzage chose for his romance of youth, "Young America," opening at the screen of the Capitol Theatre on Friday and Saturday.

Borzage has woven this setting into his story and the result is a film that is said to be one of the most arresting productions of 1932. Spencer Tracy, Sara Haden, Beryl Mercer and Ralph Bellamy have the principal "grown-up" roles with Tommy Conlon, Raymond Borzage and Dawn O'Day as the leading youngsters of the picture.

The story opens in the juvenile court of a large western city, with a sympathetic judge trying to solve the difficulties besetting the boys coming before him. One of these lads has the undeserved reputation of being "the worst boy in town," but his good qualities impress the wife of town's leading druggist, and when the boy later gets into trouble, a desperate attempt to help his chum's grandmother, she intercedes—much to her husband's amazement.

As a result the boy is taken into the druggist's home on a promise of good behavior. But circumstances conspire him to betray that trust and the druggist, enraged, gives the lad the choice between them. Accordingly the youngster makes the choice himself and departs, only to be sought in vain when the truth comes to light. The dramatic situation that brings about the exciting climax is said to give the picture its finale in keeping with a highly satisfactory manner.

Young "America" is said to improve himself a sensation as the misunderstood boy-hero, and Spencer Tracy has a brand-new characterization as the gruff and suspicious druggist. Doris Kenyon has the role of the boy's champion and Ralph Bellamy that of the juvenile judge, while Beryl Mercer portrays the grandmother. Sarah Padden, Robert Homans and other noted players are in the cast.

NEW BILL TO HELP BONUSES

Would Pay Railway Fee of Veterans to Their Homes

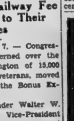
Washington, July 7. — Congressional leaders concerned over the presence in Washington of 15,000 hungry world war veterans, moved Wednesday to aid the Bonus Expeditionary Force.

National Commander Walter W. Waters, Veterans' Vice-President Curtis through a mutual friend and told him that the veterans' situation, with an empty treasury and foodless larders, was desperate.

Curtis called a secret conference of senators, and sent a delegation of them to the House to urge immediate action on the Howell bill, which already has passed the Senate.

This bill provides an appropriation to transport to their homes and feed on the way the world War veterans now in Washington. The money would be paid as a loan, chargeable against the men's bonus certificates.

It is likely the Howell bill will be passed Thursday, as it was favorably reported by the ways and means committee Wednesday. At the same time President Hoover sent to Congress an estimate, which the White House said was requested from the Capitol, for a $100,000 appropriation to carry out the Howell bill's provisions.



Waters told the United Press he would advise his men against accepting the loan.

"So far as I am concerned such action on my part is necessary," he said. "I'll read the bill fairly to the men if it is passed. But I will advise against it. I'll take the money.

"I am going to the capitol Thursday and tell those people that they have got to give us food—or else. It is a situation calling for action, and it is too big a situation for any agency but the Federal Government to handle."

FOUR DROWNED WHEN CAR BACKS INTO CREEK

Car Started in Reverse Carries 4 Children to Death in Swirling Creek

BACKS OFF FERRY

Father Struggles in Vain to Save His Four Children

Taylor's Flats, B.C., July 8—Four children drowned in the swirling waters of the Peace River early today, when the car in which they were passengers crashed over the ferry here and into the swollen stream.

The dead:
Lillian Hoffstrom, 13.
Florence Hoffstrom, 11.
Olga Hoffstrom, 9.
Agnes Hoffstrom, 4.

Otto Hoffstrom, of Taylor, B.C., was driving with his children to the Dawson Creek, and was starting the car to leave Taylor's flat ferry, when death struck.

Car in Reverse

Attempting to start the car, he did not, unfortunately, throw the car in reverse gear. He stepped on the accelerator and the hundred horsepower engine leaped forward into the water, sweeping the children into the stream.

As the car went over the side of the ferry, Mr. Hoffstrom tried desperately to save his children. He managed to grip Florence, his second daughter, and pull her out of the car, but the water tore her from his hands, and the other children remained imprisoned in the car.

The car was found, a short distance from where it sank, and the three bodies in it were taken to Taylor. The body of the second child, who had been found away by the stream, was found some distance below the scene of the tragedy.

MARTIAL LAW IN PERU AFTER COMMUNIST RIOT

Lima, Peru, July 8.—(AP Cable)—A revolutionary outbreak in the Department of La Libertad, with several persons, including three policemen, killed was reported in official despatches from Rajillo yesterday.

Martial law throughout Peru was proclaimed by President Luis M. Sanchez Cerro, whose government attributed the revolt to communists and members of the Apra party.

Members of the Apra attacked a civic guard station at Puerto Chicama, and the police fired on the mob, it was reported here. A mine and three bodies in it were taken to Taylor. The body of the second child, who had been found away by the stream, was found some distance below the scene of the tragedy.

THIEVES TAKE $9,000 SAVED AT WASHTUB

Philadelphia, July 8—Nine thousand dollars saved in years of toil at a washtub, together with the cash value of the modest home the owner, represented pence and odd-age security to Mrs. Elizabeth Jones, 76. Hanging up a "For Sale" sign, she anticipated well-earned rest.

Yesterday, inquisitive neighbors asked why two prospects ran so hurriedly down the street after inspecting the house. Mrs. Jones looked in a tin box hidden between a wall and a table to find it empty—and her life's savings.

RECTOR OF STIFFKEY IS GUILTY OF CHARGES

London, July 8 (AP) — The Rev. H. P. Davidson, grey-haired Rector of Stiffkey, was found guilty today on several of the charges of improper conduct with women, upon which he faced at the recent church trial here on an accusation of immorality.

F. K. North, chancellor of the diocese of Norwich, who presided at the trial, handed down the decision.

The clergyman, with the daughter "Paddy" and his son, Nugent, were present in the court when the verdict was rendered. His wife was not here.

The sentence will be pronounced later by the Bishop of Norwich, and it was indicated the Rector may appeal.

AUTOMOBILE PLANT OUTPUT UP 25 P.C.

Detroit, July 8—World production by the Ford Motor Company during June totaled 75,000 units. This was an increase of 25 per cent over May, but fell short of the exceptional output of 112,000 cars.

According to unofficial estimate, the operating schedule adopted at the plants for the industry last month, Ford plants here in this country and Canada are fixed at 190,000 cars.

Farmers Pay More for Farm Help But Still Demand Exceeds Supply

Several vacancies for farm help were reporting at the office of the Provincial Employment Agency Thursday. Coincident with the increased demand for help comes notice from the office, that an increase has also been given for ordinary farm help. The rate which was set at a minimum of ten dollars per month has now been increased to fifteen dollars a month, with a chance of increase later, when more general knowledge of the work is gained. Reports to the contrary, offers for this work are going begging and vacancies are hard to fill. Many farmers in this district have had a very hard time finding men, which will take the job even those, who have had no previous knowledge have refused to take up the work. The demand manifested itself during the past week, and it is expected that there will be an increase during the coming period of farm activity.

British Diplomacy Wins InReparations Pact

Washington Silent Upon Agreement On German Reparations and Debts Holds Problems Separate, Distinct

Germans Given Measure of Satisfaction on Guilt Clause

PARLEY NEAR END

Dinner, Master Stroke, Softens Tenacity of Herriots

Lausanne, July 8 (Canadian Press Cable)—Agreement has been reached at the Lausanne Conference wiping out German reparations annuities, which admittedly could not have been resumed by Germany at the expiry of the Hoover moratorium last month.

In place of the annuities, which would have run on for another 55 years at a total of roughly $35,000,000,000 Germany will issue bonds to the amount of about $750,000,000, when her pretty poison permits, and in any event not for three years.

MacDonald's Victory

The agreement marks a striking triumph for British Diplomacy and for Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, who throughout the Ineffectual and often apparently hopeless negotiations never lost heart over its tremendous task of bringing France and Germany together. He had earlier brought creditor countries with the exception of France into line.

German Payments

The German payment, her final liability, will be under the figure mentioned because the bonds will be issued at a rate of 5 per cent interest. If it is not considered advisable to issue them within fifteen years then the whole issue will be cancelled. The sinking fund is fixed at one per cent.

A point which long held up the conference as France baulked, was the German demand for wiping out of the "war guilt" clause of the Treaty of Versailles.

War Guilt Phrase

This was finally countered today with French and other powers agreeing to a phrase in the draft to closing the door on Germany perforce was satisfied with this arrangement, which indirectly eliminates the war guilt phrase by implication in the prospective Lausanne treaty that the Reparations Chapters of the Versailles Treaty is to history. These are headed by the war guilt clause.

Rockefeller Sure of Revival As He Reaches 93 Years

Tarrytown, N.J. July 8 (AP) — John D. Rockefeller, who is 93 years old today issued the prediction: "prosperity has always returned and will again."

On his birthday cake, a quiet family gathering, and probably a thirty three million automobile ride within routines of his 2,000 acres called "Kykuit," marked the occasion for the retired oil magnate.

"These are days when many are losing courage," the statement said. "In the 93 years of my life, depression has come and gone, but prosperity has always returned, and will again."

If it is especially fine, Mr. Rockefeller may ride behind horses in a coupe or a limousine. He never has discarded his fine teams, and the bridge paths permit easy passage through the wooded hills overlooking the Hudson River.

SWISH OF DISH TOWEL, GOOD AS LONG TRIP

Washington, July 8 (AP)—The swish of a dish towel may be as potent a vacation tonic as the murmur of distant seas says the United States Public Health Service.

In a publication called "how to benefit from a vacation spent at home," experts say that a stay-at-home vacation is often the healthiest.

Helping with the housework keeps the business man's mind off business, and rests his wife. Change of scene is undoubtedly beneficial. July and, too many vacationers return tired out.

The submarine with more than 60 men aboard, lay in 345 feet of water, seven miles north of Cape Levi.

It is a bad spot, with treacherous currents and an uneven bottom. The prevailing opinion was, however, that the vessel her would be an almost impossible task. TREE ROOTS CAUSE TROUBLE FOR DEPT.

Filling in along sidewalks on Dundas and Bleecker Avenues, and repairing quarry work and other routine jobs occupied the attention of the department of Public Works Thursday. Considerable difficulty is being experienced in many instances by tree roots growing through the joints of service sewer laterals from many houses in the city, necessitating a great deal of work digging up the tile and replacing them.

Other green vegetables such as cabbages, spinach and lettuce sold for the present season's prevailing prices. Cherries were also in evidence and sold for the berry box size while strawberries remained at 10c a box or three boxes for 25c. Currants were also offered on Thursday's market at three small boxes for 5c. The mid-week market was largely attended.

FISHING LICENCES HAVE STEADY SALE

Fishing licences are enjoying a good sale in the city for the past few weeks, mostly by United States visitors, who have found it necessary to procure non-resident "angler" permits for fishing in local waters and the northern lakes. Large numbers of tourists have made their appearance in the district and many of them decided to take indefinite stays so essential have they been in luring the finny tribe to their hooks.

STRAWBERRY LAWN SOCIAL IS HELD

A successful strawberry social was given by the Junior W. A. of St. John's Mission at the home of Miss B. Jones on Wednesday evening. The little girls deserve a great deal of credit for the manner in which they served and entertained their guests Rev. Graham acted as chairman of the program which included recitations, songs and musical numbers given graciously by Miss Bernice Arbuckle and Miss Betty Wickinson, Mr. Graham Mauney Windsor and Rev. Harold Reid gave a very humorous account of travelling by train from here to England. Mrs. R. Larue had the lucky number of the basket by Miss Jean Price for the block quilt made by the Junior girls this winter. The girls are to be congratulated on the success of their first venture which although a rainy one the proceeds were very encouraging.

NINE RABBITS ARE DESTROYED BY DOGS

Mrs. A. Mallory, 26 Hillcrest Ave. reported to the police on Wednesday night that nine of her neighbor's rabbits had been destroyed by dogs sometime between 11 p.m. Tuesday night and 8 a.m. Wednesday morning. The nine pet rabbits had merely shaken hands with death and were not mutilated to any great extent. Chance of them being found at the rear of the Mallory premises, a short distance from their pen. Mr. Thomas Thorne, local dog pound keeper, was detailed to investigate the charge and check the number of all dogs in the vicinity of the Mallory home. The rabbits were pets of the Mallory family and will be missed to some extent, evidently.

9 CHICKENS STOLEN DURING NIGHT

John Thompson, of 78 Charlotte Street, reported on Friday morning that he had nine of his finest chickens stolen during the previous night. Mr. Thompson's fine birds were safely locked up on Thursday night, but when he went out to feed them on Friday morning nine of his prize birds had mysteriously disappeared.

RESET FRACTURE OF SHOULDER

Mr. George Bailey, of Stirling brother, who had the misfortune to fracture his shoulder where he fell down the basement steps of his shop sometime ago, has been suffering great pain since the injury to the break seemingly failed to "knit". The fracture was reset on Tuesday and it is to be hoped now that the injury will heal rapidly.

MACHINE BURSTS AT BOX FACTORY

On Tuesday afternoon an accident occurred at the Canoe Box Factory, Stirling, and it is indeed a miracle that some of the employees were not injured. John Munro, son of E. Munro, one of the proprietors, was standing beside the heading jointer, which was in operation, when all at once there was a noise and the revolving part of the machine broke into pieces of all sizes and landed in different sections of the plant with the speed of a bullet. Fortunately the missiles missed the workmen and no injuries resulted. The cause is not definitely known.

KILLS TWO OWLS WITH ONE STONE

Whitehall N.Y. July 8— Harold O'Brien actually killed two birds with one stone. When two argued in trees he run off with a puppy dog. Harold hurled a stone at them. The missile struck one on the head, ricochetted off and struck the other on the breast. Both were silled.

DARTING BEHIND CARS KILLS 24

J. P. Bickell, Registrar of Motor Vehicles, Ontario Department of Highways, reports for the year 1931, a total of 256 accidents caused by persons stepping from behind parked vehicles or stationary objects.

From such cause, alone, 24 accidents had fatal results and 262 persons were injured.

The automobile, truck and bus are no longer novelties on the streets and highways, nor can either pedestrian or motorcar claim not to have been warned. The Ontario Department of Highways has, for several years, sought to reduce the number of accidents of this nature by educating both walkers and drivers, using every means available to disseminate information and warning. Also, many men and women of public spirit have given much of their time to the cause of safety on the streets and highways. Judging from last years accident record, neither wise has met success in the benefit the man or woman who fails to obey the first law of nature—self preservation.

BLAME OWL FOR KILLING CHICKS

After a series of chicken thefts which extended over a period of some weeks among hen runs on Bailiffboro Road, near Gustance north of this city, the alleged thief has finally been caught, sentenced to death on the spot, and executed. Mr. J. Sayles claims credit for setting the trap which is unique in the annals of bird catching, and consequently of a unique nature. It is said with small bits of raw meat and set on a tall pole. It was a large owl with wing spread which would do credit to a small eagle, the largest specimen locally, and said to be one of two owls which have been frequenting that locality. While no direct evidence has been adduced to prove that the two nearly coincidented with the killing of chickens popular opinion was against him and he died as an example to other winged creatures who may be so hard of his dark birth. Mr. Sales accepted an appointment in 1914 under the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church to labour in the mission fields of the west, and for over four years he rode the prairies. For three years he was minister of the Presbyterian Church at Port Stanley, in Western Ontario, and later at the Dominion was in the Porcupine gold mining districts at Schumacher, and Mrs. Sales are looking forward to much useful and happy service in West Huntingdon.

McCreary and so serious was his injury and injuries taken on to ascertain its extent. No one was to blame for the accident and it is believed the little fellow in some unaccountable way fell from the slide.

New Minister's Extensive Experience Here and in England

West Huntingdon—One of the most interesting services the community has had for some time was held on Tuesday evening, when the Presbytery of Belleville of the United Church of Canada, indulged into the pastoral charge of West Huntingdon the Rev. Cornelius Augustus Sales, B.D. recently appointed by the Bay of Quinte Conference.

Types of Every

Rev. E. W. Rowland, of Stirling, presided and having conducted worship called upon Rev. P. G. Joblin, of Stirling, to address the congregation and minister. The Rev. Mr. Joblin proceeded to do with great acceptance. Being well qualified in the pastoral relationship, in a most helpful way. Speaking directly to the congregation Mr. Joblin said there were several kinds of pews which he would like them to think about, each having its own meaning. He said there were the Sleeping Pew; The Critical Pew; The Complaining Pew; The Singing Pew; The Empty Pew; The Praying Pew and also the Family Pew. Some were good and some desirable, others not so.

Message

Addressing the minister appointed, the speaker emphasized among other things the importance of his having a vital message when going into his pulpit. He was to go not because he had to say something, but because of and something to say, and there was a vast difference between the two.

Rev. E. W. Rowland, following the address, proceeded to induct the new minister into the pastoral charge, Mr. Sales standing and giving assent to questions asked in accordance with the regulations of the church. The congregation was also called upon to signify its willingness to give to Mr. Sales assistance in the work of the Kingdom of God.

Mr. Sales was given the right hand of fellowship by the presiding minister and formally inducted into the charge.

Trained In England

Rev. C. Armstrong Sales comes to this district from Douglas in the Presbytery of Renfrew, where he has served for four years. Trained in England for the Congregational ministry and serving for some years in the land of his birth, Mr. Sales accepted an appointment in 1914 under the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church to labour in the mission fields of the west, and for over four years he rode the prairies. SILVER WEDDING

The spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McKitrick, Selby, was on Saturday night, June 25th, 1932, the scene of a happy event, when neighbours and friends including those from Napanee, Enterprise, Bellevile and Smiths Falls, to the number of one hundred and thirty, met to surprise Mr. and Mrs. McKitrick on the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding day. Congratulatory messages were sent from friends unable to be present from Toronto, Whitby, Canora and Newmanville.

The house throughout was prettily decorated with roses, and white peonies sent in by friends. After all had arrived Rev. Foster, their pastor, called the friends to order and all joined in singing "There's a Long, Long Trail" and "Pack up your Troubles". After which the groom proposed a toast to the bride and groom. Mr. McKnight, completely taken by surprise, responded in a few well chosen words on behalf of Mrs. McKnight and himself, following this Rev. Foley, Messrs. J. Tate, J. C. Hudgin, V. Boulter and F. Bell drank to the health of the happy couple.

Speeches followed by Mrs. Tate, Selby; Mrs. Lake, Morven and Mrs. Mott, elocutionist of Belleville, put several humorous selections which were heartily applauded. Messrs. J. Hudgin, W. J. Winter, F. Mott and others offered congratulations.

Selby orchestra delighted the gathering by giving several selections during the evening. Mrs. W. E. Jackson gave two solos accompanied by Mrs. Jackson and Devlin which all enjoyed.

Before serving refreshments Mrs. V. Boothe read an address and Mrs. J. Tate and Mr. J. Hudgin made the presentation of a beautiful set of china, cut glass salad bowl, one dozen silver knives, forks and coffee spoons, butter knife and pickle fork.

After an enjoyable evening spent by all, the many friends left for their homes wishing for Mr. and Mrs. McKnight many more years of married life and prosperity.

CANADA PAPER CO. BUYS PAPER MILLS

The Western Quebec Paper Mills at St. Andrews East, Quebec, which for many years had been for several years, has been purchased by the Canada Paper Company, we mention it is, we understand, to commence the manufacture of such goods as absorbent waddings, facial tissues, etc., none of which grades are being manufactured in Canada.

We believe that the new owners have not yet decided whether to remain where they are, or move to St. Andrews East or to transfer the equipment to one of their other mills. The decision is being carefully considered by the Company's executive at the present time, and it is expected that a decision will be reached very shortly.

J. F. HINCHEY RETURNS HOME

Attends Sun Life Assurance Outing at Murray Bay

Mr. J. F. Hinchey is back again in Belleville and as vigorous as ever after a recent trip extending over two weeks which he made with Mrs. Hinchey to Sun Life headquarters and the Sun Life Outing at the Company at Murray Bay where he met in conference the leading local representatives of this great Canadian institution.

Mr. Hinchey is a familiar figure at all these Sun Life gatherings, he having not missed such a convention since he joined the company fifteen years ago. During all this period Mr. Hinchey has been a Senior Member of the Macaulay Club—the Company's insignia of merit—and has qualified for this distinction by piling every year a minimum volume of paid-for new business of a quarter million dollars, and in addition his volume of business has been very much larger than this splendid total. These figures are in themselves a remarkable testimony to the public confidence enjoyed by Mr. Hinchey and the Company he represents. Among the clients faithfully in a territory thinly populated in comparison with areas of great density he has built up a volume of business well in excess of what constitute a small life assurance company.

These are eloquent facts which indicate the continuance of his well deserved success. He is more than determined than ever to maintain his unique reputation of personal service and he is very optimistic regarding the company's outlook for the future.

CHARGE OF ASSAULT IS DISMISSED AGAINST MAN

Michael Yorsenko, of Point Anne, appeared in the police court this morning before Magistrate Mikel on Thursday afternoon, charged with assaulting Mrs. and Mrs. Herbert Emerson of the second concession of Ameliasburg. Mrs. Emmerson both testified, that they had attacked them causing grevous bodily harm. They also swore that he was under the influence of liquor.

Y. Bennett of Point Anne, who accompanied Mike to Belleville testified that Mr. Emmerson had been hanging around their car and had first pushed Mike. Bennett told Mike that he had heard Mr. Emmerson boss for two girls to take them to a dance, that Jean Sergeant one of the girls to go to the dance and an eye witness, corroborated Bennett's story.

When called to the stand Mike told the court, that Emmerson had approached the car and when he (Mike) asked Emmerson what he wanted, Emmerson had struck him. He swore, that he had not hit Mrs. Emmerson at all. His Worship was of the opinion, that Emmerson had struck Mike in some extent but warned Mike, that he should have let the matter go man. After warning both parties His Worship dismissed the charge against the accused.

A communication from H. H. Sutton, D.O.H. representing district 4, with report on investigation re-outbreak of scarlet fever in Shannonville. Report in part read as follows:

Following my survey of the scarlet fever situation in Shannonville and the meeting of your local board of health on Saturday the 25th and confirming conclusions there arrived at, I beg to state that I found the isolation of patients and quarantine of contacts to have been well and judiciously carried out by the local M.O.H. and that the steps so taken together with the inoculation of the school children would appear to have had a very great measure of success in checking the spread of the disease. So that if all citizens will do their part to thoroughly back up these measures the outbreak bids fair to be promptly overcome.

As to fumigation of the school or private houses I do not think your board would be justified in the expenditure of public funds for this purpose, since thorough cleaning and airing of such premises is all that is needed. If any householder wish to fumigate there is no objection to their doing so at their own expense.

Moved by W. H. White, seconded by Mr. Kennedy that the report be accepted. Carried.

Council went into committee on way and means. G. McLaren in the chair. Following bills were passed in committee and placed on list for payment:

Clerk's gr. Salary $140.00; Treas. 1-4 Salary $87.50; Rural Supts. of June Sal. $75.00; M.O.H. 1-2 yr. Sal. $200.00; Sheep valuers $15.00; sheep damages, Thos. Walsh $3.00; Wm. Rose $5.00; P. Cailey $6.00; J. T. Coulter $20.00; J. Doyle $16.00; Hospital bills $21.35; Ont. Intell $5.56; Postage $2.50 Board of Health meeting $15.80; Councillor's Salaries $15.00. Committee on ways and means rose to report, G. McLaren in the chair.

Kellogg's Corn Flakes have this sealed protection

THE minute the flakes leave the toasting ovens, they are completely sealed in a WAXTITE bag which is placed inside the red-and-green package. It brings Kellogg's Corn Flakes oven-fresh to your table.

There is a difference in the Kellogg method of packaging. Notice that Kellogg's WAXTITE Bag is completely sealed at both top and bottom. It's a patented Kellogg feature. That's why Kellogg's can guarantee perfect freshness!

Compare Kellogg's and you'll realize they are better corn flakes. The very appearance, the inviting aroma, the flavor and delightful freshness all tell a story. Insist on the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Where substitutes are offered it is seldom in the spirit of service.

Guaranteed by W. K. Kellogg. "If you don't think Kellogg's the best and freshest corn flakes you ever ate, return the package and we will refund your money." Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

REDEMPTION OF ERRING YOUNG

"There are those near criminal from evil homes, where ideals are not and where habits are unspeakable. There are those from better homes where parental efforts are real and earnest for the good of the children, but where outside influences, pleasures, the growing craze for excitement and revelry—have been too strong to cope with."

These words from Superintendent Lucy W. Brooking's annual reoprt on Alexdra Industrial School for Girls as published in the forty-sixth annual report of the Industrial Schools Association of Toronto, sum up the social problem as relating to delinquent boys and girls. To offset the wrong start, discipline, everything that is noble and good and useful is taught so that the inmates of the Alexandra and the Victoria School for Boys may become useful citizens despite the initial start which brought them to the places of correction.

Those who believe in the efficacy of the good old rule of young and old find their ideals substantiated by those who are in charge of the work of correction and redemption of the erring young. Here in many cases can seen the results of underNourishment and congenital unfitness to cope with life. Good food, sleep, and wholesome work are given as the best tonics and the faces brighten and the figures become sturdy.

From the Alexandra School there have passed out into useful lives 6fe citizens, sixteen hundred and seventy children. "When we have them here," says the report, "we teach, and trained, we place them as often as we can in new surroundings where they will have a chance to make a living under circumstances which will encourage the development already begun and which if kept up during the difficult teen years will result in habits of thinking and right living, fixed enough to stand the strain of life," says Miss Brooking.

Deputy Superintendent Pettinger of the Victoria School cites sixteen per cent failures and 84 per cent of the boys as doing well. Physical exercises and physical training are invaluable. Recreation and religion are not neglected.

FRENCH SUBMARINE DISASTER

Another naval disaster has occurred, this time off Cherbourg with the sinking of the French submarine Promethee carrying down seven men. Trapped in their places these men had no chance when the explosion came.

Such men like the workers in a mine or in a manufacturing plant are doing their duty. Such is the burden which mankind must bear in the face of others.

Submarine disasters are looked upon with particular horror owing to the trapping of men in places from which they cannot escape with their lives and in which they must wait the slow approach of death by smothering from the poison of their own breath.

The submarine made for one purpose only is not looked upon favorably by many men as a means of warfare and Britain would gladly eliminate the type from her fleets. The place of the submarine in future naval defence is uncertain. It may seem as if it would would be to the danger ship be obliterated in as far as war is concerned.

Whether it has any scientific value otherwise is to be seen.

Meanwhile France mourns her gallant crew.

MONUMENTAL EDITION

Simcoe Reformer has turned out this week a very fine edition, a special Kinsmen Convention number, the largest edition ever turned out by the press of this paper, containing 38 pages.

Welcoming the Kinsmen to the annual convention of the association to be held July 14-15-16, the Reformer has goods to infinite pains and large expense to collect photographs, and data relating to Norfolk County. The edition is in every sense of the word monumental. As the editor says, "The entire edition symbolizes the meeting of Kinsmenship with the banner county of Ontario. It also speaks our pride in the coming of the annual convention to Simcoe and the appreciation by all citizens of the remarkably fine work of the Simcoe Kinsmen Club."

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE DEW

By John Peale Bishop

Maybe she dreamed the colonnade:
But surely, surely, she has seen
Magnolias drenched in moonlit shade.
Maria sees the dew as green.

Burdened Calinda totes the sun
Bundle-headed to her shack;
Her arms are black in unison,
Her shoulders bare. Here dew is black.

But Abner hoeing hillside corn
Swipes his lean hair to clear his sight,
The sun is killed. He could have sworn
Dew on the long corn-leaves was white.

This morning, however, a small
Lascivious rabbit, looking through
A cobweb, frightened and let fall
Millions of rainbows from the dew.

CHICAGO'S SHAME IS REALIZED by her solid citizens who regret the fearful muddle in which the city finds itself through careless, inefficient and dishonest administration. A business man of Chicago visiting in Belleville, told the Rotary Club that Chicago was bankrupt in everything except self respect and courage, that its solid citizens were determined to clear up the mess and start restoring Chicago a city to be proud of again. The latest humiliation to desert Chicago citizens was the abject surrender to the gangster element on the part of the public prosecutor asked that a bank burglar, fully identified, be dismissed, because of danger to the life of those concerned if he were convicted. School teachers had not been paid their salaries and there was danger of the schools being closed. Civic officials were on strike, in fact the whole civic administration was in a muddle. Occasional flashes of humor illuminated the sordid spectacle, as for instance, the reason given instancing the recent run on the National banks in the Loop district after some forty small banks in the suburbs had folded up. A mob of over ten thousand depositors milled around the Loop banks withdrawing their deposits and transferring them to the Federal Savings, similar to our Post Office Savings Department. The money came in the front door of the Federal building, paid in by frightened depositors, and passed quickly out the back door into armored cars, to be transported speedily back to the Loop banks from which it had been withdrawn a few days or weeks before. The exhibition of unlimited cash reserves in the Loop Banks soon convinced the panic stricken depositors that their money was safe, and the run was off.

"HOW TO KEEP FROM GOING CRAZY" is the title of a current magazine article. What do you know about that? It has got to the stage where New York hotel clerks and incoming guests seeking rooms on the thirtieth floor or thereabouts whether the room is wanted for sleeping in or jumping out of. At least Broadway columnists affirm this to be true, and all I know is what I see by the papers, a la Will Rogers, "How to Keep From Going Crazy," indeed, when most of us are more or less off balance. The few up-and-coming folks who kept their sanity after the great Bull Market Crash of October 1929 were abut up somewhere or so sick then that they did not know what was going on, besides the many friends born since the slaughter of the innocents.

THE PEDDLER PEST

This village is tormented with an epidemic of peddlers. One day last week four of them were operating in the town. One sold broom holders, a wonderful contrivance that makes well-regulated house should be without; another sold a cleaning solution guaranteed to cleanse children, silverware and soiled consciences; the third sold magazines to pay for a college education, and the fourth was a vendor of kitchen utensil holders are becoming weary of the peddler pest.—Port Elgin Times.

WHAT IS WANTED FROM CANADA

What we want from Ottawa is a reduction of tariff barriers within the Empire sufficient to allow increasing raising of foreign tariffs which might be provoked by our gratitude, in return, wider imperial preferences to the Dominions and Colonies. To look for a revival of trade in the mere raising of tariffs, by ourselves and by the Dominions against foreign competitors, is, on the face of it, ridiculous.—The London Spectator.

LONDON SHOWS UP WELL

Mr. Thomas Bradshaw's report on the financial transactions of Windsor contains some interesting comparisons. Taxes which should have been paid to the Windsor Utilities totalled $4,017,582, on which $1,670,-894 remained unpaid, or 41.6 per cent. The proportion of taxes collected in that year in seven cities were:

Windsor	58.5%
Kitchener	82.4%
Peterborough	91.2%
Ottawa	91.9%
Hamilton	94.1%
Brantford	95.3%
Toronto	97.3%

It is generally recognized that Windsor is suffering the inevitable reaction from its abnormally inflated rapid growth. It has, however, established itself as a leading industrial centre, and its natural advantages will in time bring it back to its former proud position. But it is time like these, London is favored because it has not been subject to any one basket, and has a wide diversification of industry.—London Advertiser.

JUST ANOTHER MYTH

The "summer slump" is the hallucination of an unbusinesslike mind. The early slump in the good old summer time, if such there be, is the annual answer that business allows its summer advertising to shrink.

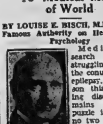
Come to think of it, there are abundant business reasons for all their greatest volume of sales during the warm summer months; and there are no business reasons why they are not reflected in increases for business done.

The myth of the summer slump dates back to the days when the bank business was a hit-or-miss proposition, fitful periods of optimism and fearful fear so held it in leash that progress was slow and difficult. One of the great banking houses of London dared smash was the belief that business was necessarily stagnant from hot weather and nothing could reconcile them. It was always a losing pioneer broke the evil spell and all but a few of the banks have been enjoying summer prosperity ever since. It was one of the earliest miracles of advertising.

No longer does progressive, wide-awake business fear or believe in anything with the arrival of the first hot spell. Instead, it welcomes the summer goods, of which there is no end, and offers them on equal chance with fall, winter and spring stocks by advertising them as beautiful.—St. Catharines Standard.

NATURE DOES ITS OWN

The delicate balance which is maintained by nature in most of its manifestations is shown in connection with the present grasshopper plague in the prairies, said to be the worst visitation of its kind in the West in fifty years.



While the grasshoppers are destroying much crop and green vegetation of all kinds, there have appeared several varieties of insects, which are preying on the grasshoppers and aiding the human agencies engaged in their control and extermination. These insects attack the grasshoppers at vulnerable places in their armour and finally kill them. The farmers are working with great perspicacious success. An interesting feature of the situation arises in fighting the plague. It adds to the overhead in agriculture as it does when the latter can ill afford any such burden. However, there is some consolation in the circumstance that the farmers stand a good chance to win and thus save the greater part of their crop. They have learned the modern method of giving battle to the marauders which lessons will be of great value to them in any future invasion.—Galt Reporter.

DOCTORS SEEK SOLUTION OF GREAT RIDDLE

Epilepsy a Conundrum To Medical Men of World

BY LOUISE E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Medical research is still struggling with the conundrum of Epilepsy. The reason this terrifying disorder remains such a puzzle is because no two cases apparently are ever alike as to causes, although the symptoms may be practically identical.

LOUIS E. BISCH

In what might be called an orthodox seizure there is a warning of some kind, a peculiar body association, in which fear to greater or lesser degree is predominant. Then, the victim falls in the patient can get to a place of safety, unconsciousness comes and the subject falls to the ground.

During the unconscious phase the pupils are dilated, breathing is hard and noisy there may be froth at the mouth, rigidity of some of the larynx muscles, and the tongue may be bitten as the jaws clench. Urination comes the convulsion.

In many cases the patient sits first, and following this they convulse or fall. Then there is also what is the tonic spasm—is not noted, but only the second or clonic spasm. The latter may be very severe and may last only a few seconds or a few minutes.

Sooner or later the convulsion subsides and the patient either regains consciousness, then falls asleep because of the exertion he has undergone.

This typical attack just described is the most common also what is termed petit mal or "little sickness" seizures. These amount to nothing practically, although in some cases thinkin is blurred for a considerable time.

Petit mal and grand mal attacks may occur daily, or only at intervals of days, weeks or months.

But why? That is the question! Why do these attacks vary so much, even in the same individual? And why does one person respond to some special form of treatment, while others, even with less severe symptoms, fail to improve with such treatment, or with any other?

In order to bring out all causative possibilities, specialists nowadays treat all epileptic patients from'several angles, and not by the one method.

The general physical system, for instance, is put in very best shape possible. Special attention is paid diet in order elimination, and the diet is so regulated as to be more or less free of salt, while meats and proteins in general are cut to a minimum. Besides, the glandular system is given considerable attention, and various glands of "internal secretion" are administered. Lastly, and perhaps most important of all, some form of mental therapy is given, some of the theories that unconscious mind disturbances may be at fault.

Indeed, there is a strain of epilepsy called hysterio-epilepsy, which may simulate the regular types, but which undoubtedly is merely a neurotic or functional disorder, and not the symptoms, instead of taking the usual measures there of sedatives, cold feelings, obsessions and the like, actually produce regular grand mal attacks.

The point to emphasize, however, is that no epileptic should consider discouraged. Treatment should always be carrying on and indefinitely. Even if the disorder does not abate, proper treatment will at least help to keep the faculties from deteriorating.

And there is always the hope that some great revealing discovery about epilepsy may be made. Many scientists are working hard on the problem.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

JULY 8, 1912

Postmaster Alfred Gillen will spend this Sunday at the Sand Banks.

Never in years has bass fishing been as good as it is at the present time. Many anglers are getting their limit. Yesterday two Front St. merchants went down the bay in a motor boat and within half an hour landed as fine a string as one would wish to see.

Several young men felt the heat so much during the past few nights that they took pillows to Victoria Park and passed the night there.

Grading on the C.P.R. east of Bayside will be completed this week.

Mr. J. J. B. Flint has returned home from New York where he has been on a business trip.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Johnson having toured Switzerland are now in Ireland.

Miss Sadie Moagy, of Queensboro, died suddenly, 1,000 employees of the Ontario Power Service Corporation yesterday passed their possessions and prepared to move homeward, approximately 500 are expected to leave tonight, with another large group moving tomorrow too, nearly 100 families, established at the scene of the power operations for some time, will leave shortly.

The men were employed on the Abitibi Power development which for some time has been in difficulties and which the Ontario government expects to purchase in the near future.

Take News Quietly.

While the men have received the dismissal news somewhat calmly, they were resentful today in view of recent announcements to the effect a settlement would be reached over the work carried to completion.

Of the men leaving, approximately half are skilled and essential to the completion of the development, should the work be resumed. When the closing order has taken full effect, by the end of the week only a few will remain to guard the property.

Progress to date ensures that the project could have been completed by October 1, the scheduled date, and power delivered in accordance with the contract, but more than half the machinery had been installed and the finishing touches to the huge plant proper remains to be done.

Fears are expressed here that the shutting down of the plant may result in the loss of a large contract for power, which the corporation is committed to deliver power to the Sudbury district over a transmission line already constructed from Hunta to Sudbury, on October 1. A lapse in plant construction operations will result in a default on this contract.

A project is on foot in the city which will be undoubtedly successful if properly worked by the citizens generally. For many years there has been more or less talk about a place where citizens could congregate during the warm hours of the day and spend a pleasant, healthful hour or two. The scheme being mooted bids fair to supply such a long felt want. It is proposed to organize a joint stock company to obtain control of the old Bay Park at the mouth of the river, connect it with the main land by a bridge and fit it up as a public park, preserving trees and making such other improvements as might be needed. The scheme proposed includes the erection of a commodious club house on the lake front, which will be fitted up with all the modern conveniences of the metropolitan club houses, with large balconies facing south and west, on which citizens could gather at their leisure to spend an hour or two in social enjoyment. Prominent men have the matter in hand and more will be heard of it shortly.

"IF IT'S CITIES SERVICE . . . IT HAS TO BE GOOD"

Where quick starting shows up in "gasolene's life-line"

You know good gasolene by the way it starts—the way it pulls you up hills—its freedom from knocks. Here's the way a chemist shows its perfection—its gasoline—the curve is curved line drawn from point to point on a piece of paper ruled into squares.

The horizontal lines indicate degrees of temperature. The vertical lines show what percentage of the gasolene evaporates at various temperatures when the gasolene is heated to those points.

For instance—this chart shows that 10% of this sample has boiled away at a temperature which will give good starting qualities under the prevailing climatic conditions in the territory where this particular gasolene will be sold. If less had boiled away, it would have indicated a "heavy" gas, slow to catch the spark. If more had boiled away, it would have shown too light a gas, with the possibility of vapor lock and not enough "body."

Expert chemists, with authority to reject any batch of fuel, test every day's run of gasolene from Cities Service refineries, and this distillation test is only one of 22 which they make regularly. You can see why we own: "If it's Cities Service —it has to be good."

Government Forestalls Reported Plans of Bondholders

STORY TOLD

Cabinet Guards Interest of Province by Refusing Funds

TORONTO, July 8. — (By the Canadian Press)—An attempt to induce the Ontario Government into sanctioning payments of Bond interest of $620,000 which it said the Government had been assured would be defaulted, played a big part in Monday's cabinet meeting over inability of the Ontario Power Commission to secure necessary funds to complete its power project on the Abitibi River, it was learned here. Empire says in its news columns today.

Conferring with officials of Power Service, subsidiary of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company and the Ontario Government preceded cessation yesterday of work on the power project. That it will soon stopgaps three over 800 men out of employment.

The Mail goes on to say that for some time before the announcement, June 20, that the government "would consider means to take over the development on an equitable basis. Discussions had been under way between the Ontario Power Service Corporation and the government, as to the likely details of the bond interest. The Government, it is reliably said, reached the conclusion, that Ontario might well take over the property. A certain tentative basis of terms was deemed by the government fair, equitable and even advantageous under the circumstances.

In Good Mood

"The company's representatives were in mood to concur", the newspaper continues, "and the government felt that assurance ought to be given to the north country availing the cheap power, to the workmen, and to the investors, that the project would not be abandoned. Prior to making the announcement which was to imply such assurance, the government cautiously, asked that it be notified in due form, in writing, that the undertakings involve, that the interest would be defaulted, on July 1.

"This notification was duly furnished and then, just as the government was about ready to make the announcement, that ultimately was made June 26, a proposal was put forward that the government contribute cover in the payment of the interest, amounting to $620,000 out of a sum of $2,000,000 held in a trust fund to become available only upon money enough being available to complete the plant.

The estimated cost of the project was $33,000,000 that $20,000,000 of it 5-1-2 per cent. bonds were issued and sold at 90, producing $18,000,000 of this $2,000,000 was set aside in the aforementioned trust account to be released only upon the condition stated above. The project here lacked $5,000,000 necessary to complete it, plus this $2,000,000.

Turned Down Proposal

The Mail and Empire says it was suggested to the Government that its announcement concerning taking over the project and making available enough money to finish the job, the interest on the bonds of $620,000 could be paid out of the $2,000,000 which would be thus automatically released.

The government, according to the newspaper, turned down the proposal.

Prolonged negotiations took place yesterday between Premier George S. Henry, Strachan Johnston, K.C., H. G. Cochrane and representatives of the Cadyon Company and the bondholders. The Mail and Empire says it was credibly informed "good progress" was made.

Hoover Defied When Relief Bill Appears on Table

Washington, July 8—Aided by 35 Republicans, the Democratic U. S. House of Representatives Thursday approved the conference report on the Garner-Wagner relief measure in the face of definite veto threats by President Hoover.

By a 303 to 116 vote, the report was adopted and sent to the Senate where quick approval was expected. Then it will go to the White House to climax a heated controversy between the President and John N. Garner, Speaker of the House.

The House action was a triumph for Speaker Garner over President Hoover. Undoubtedly the relief measure will be an issue in the coming presidential campaign, when the Democratic vice-presidential nominee takes the stump against Hoover-Curtis ticket.

Senate leaders planned to call the conference report up to-morrow afternoon, with the expectation that the relief bill will be sent to the White House by nightfall.

Senator Robinson, the minority leader, called a conference of Senate Democrats for this morning to discuss the bill and decide upon a course of action.

"MAKE ME A STAR" AND KEN MAYNARD NEXT AT BELLE

Joan Blondell

One of the most famous novels about youth and Hollywood by Harry Leon Wilson's story of the country lad who crashed the studio gates and made good will be seen as a talkie, "Make Me a Star," on the double bar-gain show at the Belle, Saturday and Monday, matinee daily, with Joan Blondell, Stuart Erwin, Zasu Pitts and Ben Turpin heading the cast.

Critics have said it is the dom-inating comedy with a heart tug in this story that gave it its interna-tional popularity.

Paramount has faithfully trans-planted the essence of the book into one of the most human, most en-tertaining pictures Stuart Erwin has ever done, and the producers have wisely cast him as the leading man. The ambitious blunderer of youth about whom the story revolves.

The action opens in a small town in Illinois where Erwin is the clerk in the general store. Ambitious and held in contempt by almost everyone in the community because of his highfalutin' ideas.

Helen Jerome Eddy, his plain, unbeautiful friend, pines for him in his rabid idolatry of Buck Ben-son, the famous movie cowboy hero, and urges him to go to Hollywood. In the film capital he tramps from studio to studio, never finding the Elysium he had always believed was there.

At last, through the kindness of Joan Blondell, a hard-boiled "double" for a famous star, Erwin gets his first job before a camera.

He is virtually kicked into fame, for the performance he gives as ser-vice bus drama is so terrible that the directors see its great value as hil-arious comedy, and so he succeeds, a serio-comic, who doesn't know why he has made good.

His struggles, his dashed hopes, this burning ambition is made a real one by himself are all shared by the audience that will see "Make Me a Star."

In the end there is happiness, and the artist and thrill, a surprise and a pleasure that make this story al-together interesting and entertain-ing.

Ken Maynard Western

Suspense, action, thrills, dare-devil riding stunts, a romantic love story and some extraordinary wes-tern backgrounds are the outstand-ing features of "Alias the Bad Man" starring Ken Maynard, Virginia Brower, Frank Mayo and "Tarzan," the trained mount that has been identified with the star for the past six years.

Greta Garbo Tonight

Greta Garbo and Melvyn Douglas close a highly successful engage-ment at the Belle tonight in Luigi Pirandello's brilliant stage success, "As You Desire Me."

At The Capitol

"YOUNG AMERICA" AND SCHMELING-SHARKEY FIGHT

"Young America", opening today at the Capitol Theatre, has Tommy Conlon in the leading role. With film experience dating back over a period of years, Tommy gives his first principal performance and, according to previews, is little short of a sensation.

Spencer Tracy, Doris Kenyon, Beryl Mercer, Ralph Bellamy and Sarah Padden have the "grown-up" leads in the picture, which deals with the drama of boyhood and with the work of the juvenile courts in getting our youngsters off on the right start. The story revolves around the character portrayed by Tommy, that of a self-reliant orphan whose curiosity and high spirits bring him the under-served reputation of being the "worst boy in town."

With the lad's appearance in court he attracts the attention of a Mrs. Dorsey who tries to get him a job in her husband's drug store. The husband, suspicious and grou-chy, wants nothing to do with the youngster, and subsequently Tom-my, driven from his aunt's cheer-less home, takes refuge with his chum and the latter's sympathetic grandmother.

The grandmother has a heart at-tack late one night and the two boys, unable to find a drug store open, break into Dorsy's establish-ment and get a bottle of her medi-cine, but are caught as they leave. Held for trial, Tommy refuses to explain his act, and his chum fruitlessly tries to shield him. Only then the grandmother arrives on the situation cleared up.

Reaches Dramatic Climax

At this juncture, Tommy's aunt decides to lay further responsibil-ity for him. Over her blistering indignant protests, Mrs. Dorsy agrees to sponsor the boy, and he is installed in the Dorsy home. There the drama reaches a climax when, under promises of staying home, the boy is faced with temp-ting his promise or breaking faith with his chum. His decision, and the dramatic climax that ensues, are said to form a powerful and satisfying ending to the picture.

The fourteen year old Tommy shares leading honors with Tracy as the drugstar and Miss Kenyon as his wife, while Bellamy as the judge, Miss Mercer as the grand-mother, Miss Padden as the aunt, and Raymond Borrage as Tommy's chum, have the principal support-ing roles.

One Dot Near Face of King Enhances Value

Stratford, July 8.—A slight error in the printing of the current issue of the Canada Canada three-cent stamps has set the postage stamp hunters of this district agog and has resulted considerably the stamp's value to collectors.

A hurried glance at the stamp discloses nothing unusual in its ap-pearance. In color it is red, the same as the regular issue, which came into use when the three-cent rate was applied about a year ago. Formerly the two-cent stamp was also red, but these were recalled and new brown two-cent stamps were issued.

The government apparently had a supply of the red two-cent stamps on hand and sought to make use of them. To do this the figure "2" on either corner was stroked out and the figure "3" printed on the stamp just below the King's face.

But this is where the error occurred. It has caused the stamp collectors to don their armor and go stamp-hunting. On one stamp on each sheet of 100, a tiny black dot appears immediately after the figure "3" and it is said that the stamp bearing this little dot, will in the years to come, be almost price-less in value to those who treasure stamps.

Even now some collectors are said to be paying 10 cents for one of these stamps.

HOUSEWARMING

Dear Mrs. Beekman:—

1.—Is it proper to give a house-warming for one's self, or does some friend give it for another friend? I have been told that you are supposed to ask someone to give you a house-warming, and others say that you give your own.

2.—If it is proper to have a house-warming one's self, do you think it just the right thing to do?

3.—For invitations, how would you write short notes, and how would you word them?

4.—How long after you move is it appropriate to have a housewarming.

5.—Also please tell me if "have gotten" is proper, or "have got?"

G.

1.—We ourselves should give our own "welcome-to-the-new-home" party. It would be thoroughly out of order for us to ask a friend to give this party for us.... there wouldn't be any reason for making this request and.. I should think that a friend, no matter how close the friendship, would be highly surprised at such a request.

2.—A housewarming, in my opinion is one of the most charming of parties to plan and to give. The idea of opening your new home to your friends, of greeting them in your new home, of showing them that you are given an hospitality ....it's all a perfect foundation for a perfect party. Hospitality is one of the glorious ideas in the world, and this first gracious gesture of hospitality in the new home is most significant and most important, and it is for the hostess and host to make this gesture.

3.—The most "stylish" form in which we can send this invitation is to write it on our visiting card. Mr. and Mrs. Card. This may be the usual Mr. and Mrs. card, the one larger than the individual card. Or best of all.... and how very convenient this is.... the folded card, with the name and address engraved on the first page, and the two pages inside for the writing of the message. These cards are called "informal message cards", and are now very popular, especially for just this kind of invitation. If you have a Mr. and Mrs. plate, you may have your new address engraved on it, or, if it already has an address on it, you may have this etched off and the new address engraved in this same place the lower right corner of the card.

If you use the customary Mr. and Mrs. card, you will write the housewarming invitation as you would a ten invitation.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wells Moulton
Housewarming
Sunday, June first

Two Home Place

Four to seven

If you use the informal message cards, you may write the invitation in this way, and may write a note on the inside pages:

Dear Jane,—

Tom and I want very much to have you and Joe come to our new home on Sunday, the first of June, to a Housewarming that we are planning for the seven o'clock.

Will you come?

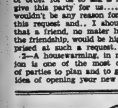
Cordially yours.

If, on the other hand, you wish to write a note of invitation, this is most gracious and thoroughly correct. It would read something like this:

Dear Jane,

Tom and I are planning to have a housewarming on Sunday, the first of June, from four to seven o'clock.... to welcome our friends to our new home. It will make us so happy if you and Joe will come to help in the "christening" of the new house. You and Joe will come.... can't you. Do say "yes"!

Love from us both.



Cordially.

4.—Plan to have your housewarming just as soon as every thing is in readiness. There isn't any reason to wait, and if you wait too long the point will be lost, for then most of your friends will probably have come to see you.

5.—"Gotten," like "proven", isn't in good repute. So it is best to say "have" go the work.... which it usually can do, without even the addition of "got". In practically every case.... I should say in every case.... you will find that you do not need the "got" after "have". "I have your ticket".... "I have got your ticket".

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Shoes Should Prov ide Standing Room

"Fool think, wouldn't you," said the fellow who has been flirting with dainty feet. Those little mice, you know, shoes to feminine feet for twenty years, "that big feet would belong to the old girls. They don't. The ancient regime believed in small feet, that crept in and out. Women rearing shows that interfered with muscle health, and caused bone deformities. They weren't athletic, their feet weren't exercised, they weren't any good anyhow.

"The average size of shoes worn by a girl of twenty years old is 6B. Time was when 4B was a social disgrace. So, the bigger the foot, the younger the woman. Personally, I consider extremely small feet anything but beautiful. On a large plump woman or a tall one they are ridiculous, out of proportion, and proportion is everything in beauty of anatomy. An overworked right hand attached to a large fat arm one is subject to severe criticism. Nothing pretty about it."

There you are. The world is a sad better place for feet than it was fifty years ago. All that remains is to get the feet on the ground, not up at the back on stilts. Only a question of time.

Chiropodist claim that the proper heel for housework, office work, sports and walking measures one and one fourth inches. Put one of your legs measure and see how high up you go beyond normal stature. Needless to say the heel must have a firm hold on the ground, be not too small at the base.

If a woman will wear a moderate heel during the day, the orthopedic professors tell us, the chance around in the evening on spiked heels, if she desires. They make that concession. Smarties! They recall the experiences of women who have gone in for that plan. With comfortable little dogs all day the gals found they couldn't make twisging aching pedals in the evening. The feet needed the shoes to hold just itself to a difference of one inch in heels, but it doesn't. After wearing a sensible shoe it kicks off a bit figs when crowded down into the feet of one inch heels at the back. The result? Spikes are spurting. Blisters, those sad-and-lost gents'.

Lazy women grow high arches and active women develop low arches. The ideal arch is the medium one. Give yours a look-over.

Another fresh-leather idea has to do with ankles. While large bulky ones are no beauty bargains, the extremely skinny ones don't qualify. The correct, beautiful ankle has a lovely inward curve one inch above the ankle bone. Then it starts gradually to extend itself, the line flowing gracefully into the calf of the leg. It isn't the smallness of the ankle, any more than diminutive dimensions of the foot, that makes for perfection, but the colocorrect proportion of line.

Get in form, girls. Buy shoes that heels only moderately high. Walk plenty, because that's what feet need. Leg lines then will pretty well look after themselves. Because ugly legs are often than not results of uncomfortable, ill-chosen shoes.

ACTIVITY AT LOWER TEMPO

General Price Action Showed no Sign of Inherent Weakness

TORONTO, Ont., July 8.—Activity was at somewhat reduced tempo on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Market in the forenoon today, but general price action showed no sign of inherent weakness.

Dome reacted $10 to $11 but Tech Hughes was up a couple at $4.30 and Wright Hargreaves, Lake Shore and McIntyre held closely with last night's finals. Howey and San Antonio firmed a cent each while Sherritt met one to 7¢. Declines of small fractions appeared in a few of the less popular.

Noranda and International Nickel were both up 1¼ to $15.00 and $4.70 respectively and Hiderado regained a couple to $1.32. Acme Gas was active and higher on dividend rumors. The movement in Giga lost momentum, shaded to a fraction from yesterday's high.

BONDS BETTER STOCKS IDLE

New York's Narrow Range Continue in Friday Trading

NEW YORK, July 8.—The Stock Market refused to be jolted out of its narrow trading range of the past three weeks today by the French-German agreement on reparations, although further stimulus was imparted to bonds.

Stock Traders, imbued with deep faith in corporate earnings, evidently felt that a settlement of the reparations question, vitally important as it may be over a period of years, could do little toward changing the immediate situation. The bond market was a soft spot. Stock market was again its disinclination to break through its previous level.

Fresh Releases

The list pushed up 1 to 2 points in the early dealings, but quickly relaxed under fresh selling pressure. Save for a few soft spots, however, the list failed to go under yesterday's lows, and stiffened again by early afternoon. American Telephone was a soft spot, declining more than 2 points to a new low under 72, before recovering. Fruit Industries, Safeway Stores, and Coca Cola, dropped 2 to 3 and International Harvester sagged a point to a new low. Several of the leaders, however, American Can., U.S. Steel, Consolidated Gas and Standard of N.J., showed small fractional gains by early afternoon.

GREEDY THIEF TAKES ALL CROP AT ONCE

Potted plants, spare tires and other articles which have been left outdoors overnight without being nailed down have disappeared before from this district, but the habit-light of brazen thievery has just been reported.

Early Friday morning Mr. Lewis P. Lake, 251 Sidney Street awoke and looked out of his bedroom window to find that his whole garden had been stolen. In place of the neat and orderly rows of garden produce he had carefully planted some time ago and had tended to recent maturity lay before him but bare stretches of ground where lettuce and other greens which had been over the night planted their radis in the dark. Mr. Lake who has been out of work for some time feels the loss of his labor very keenly. The matter is being investigated.

"Alice: Come Home. All Is FORGIVEN"

Few advertisements in your newspaper start that way. Yet, when they do them are just as personal, and almost as promising.

Manufacturers and merchants must know your needs and wants, or go out of business. They must know, for instance, that about the first of next month you'll be very much interested in a new hat, new dress, new shoes, or a new lamp, or new towels or many other articles, useful or ornamental besides the week-end prices on food products. They must foresee your wishes—and have what you'll want when you want it.

And they do—constantly striving to suit, at the lowest possible prices. Then telling you in advertising of the gifts they have brought from the far corners of the earth, to please Your Royal Highness.

Read the advertisements in this paper. They are addressed to you—personally. They bring you news of better things to have and easier ways to live. Intimate news, of immediate interest.

One Captured, Two Escape As Police Hunt Bush for Killers of Corporal Ralls

Fugitives Make Escape by Theft of Horses From Farmers

Kelvington, Sask., July 8.—(CP)—Mike Danchuk, 17, a Ruthenian, one of three men believed responsible for the murder of Corporal L. V. Ralls of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at Pearl Lake, Tuesday morning, is in the hands of the police here. His two companions are surrounded near Danchuk post office, about 20 miles northeast of here and their capture is momentarily expected.

The capture of Danchuk was effected amid a fusillade of shots from two of the fugitives, who got away on a prairie pony during the pursuit when police and armed citizens of the district swarmed over muddy roads. The searchers were often without view of the fugitives owing to their objective.

Constable Joseph Parsons, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Kelvington detachment, and Constable William Hayes, Provincial Police of Wadena, were the two men who captured Danchuk.

A little ahead of the party with which they were working, they saw a horseman ride by and a man named Johnson half a mile west of Kinduck post office.

Caught With Horses

Walking across the bluffs they came upon Danchuk, who was watching the three horses and a pony which had been stolen from Leo Herbert's farm about 12 miles north east of Kelvington, early Friday morning.

Constable Parsons ordered Danchuk to throw up his hands. Danchuk obeyed.

But as he did so, two other men rushed out of Johnson's house They were ordered to put their hands up.

They replied by pulling revolvers and firing in the direction of the police officers, who returned the fire.

The two fugitives jumped into the bush and separated, one going east and the other south. Sergeant Ralph Anderson with a number of men then closed up, and Danchuk was handcuffed.

Detective-Sergeant Mortimer and a party of men chased the man who went east, and another posse went south into the bush, where the other man was reported to be. He had carefully planned his horseback.

Sergeant Anderson picked up a .303 repeater rifle and brought Danchuk to Kelvington, where police officers obtained a statement from him.

Earlier in the day the three fugitives were sighted 35 miles north of Kelvington by an aeroplane which reported that district since the man-hunt began.

Prior to the time they were sighted from the air, the trio left a clear trail for the pursuing parties by a series of bold horse thefts Three times during the night and early Thursday they supplied into dark farmyards, abandoned their jaded horses and commandeered fresh ones from the stables before the owners could interfere. Then they rode off again in their new cross-country flight.

Thursday afternoon, notified that horses had been stolen from farmers in the Kelvington district, police were given direction of the reserve, confident they were on the heels of the stolen horses.

The police believed the trio were hiding in the thick bush and after two days and nights of searching failed to locate them. Thursday they were informed of the horse thefts.

Three grey horses and one black mount were taken. The first was from a farm northeast of Kelvington. From a farm five miles further northeast two team mares were seized, presumably by the fugitives. The black horse was in the Kelvington district farmers told the police they had seen three men dashing toward the Porcupine Reserve.

Good Description

The police have good descriptions of the remaining two men from farmers and from Mrs. Herman Pearson, the wife of a farmer, that they came to her house near Nut Mountain last summer. At the time she did not know they were wanted for murder.

When the three horsemen were first sighted from a police airplane this afternoon the ground was soft and soggy and the plane could not land on the prairie. The pilot was obliged to travel some distance before finding a suitable landing place. Word was immediately sent out to surrounding towns and a cordon was thrown about the entire area, and the capture at the farmhouse followed.

The problems of saloonry are to a very great extent problems of mathematics, physics or chemistry.

PIONEER TACOMA WOMAN PASSES

Tacoma, Wash., July 8.—A resident of Tacoma for 44 years, Mrs. Anna M. Bidwell, wife of Samuel R. Bidwell, one of the pioneer real estate dealers in this city, died Friday at her home, 1024 North Ainsworth street, following a lingering illness. She had been active in civic, social and charity work during her long residence here.

Mrs. Bidwell was a native of Belleville, Ont., Can., and was Miss Anna Corbett before her marriage in 1886, two years before coming to Tacoma with a party composed of a pioneer Canadian family. Three of her brothers served with the British forces in the Crimean war and afterwards in India and the fourth was a gentleman employe in the Havana for many years.

Mrs. Bidwell was a member of Trinity Episcopal church, now Christ church, and was prominent in guild work. She was head of the Children's Industrial home. She is survived by her husband, a brother Mrs. Mrs. Leonard Crump of Olympia, Wash., Mrs. Edward Mott, Miss Mabel C. Pierre of Victoria B. C., Mrs. Isabella Cox of Kingston, Hamilton, Ontario, Miss Ethel Corbett of Bombay, India. Funeral services for Mrs. Bidwell Monday, at 2 p.m. from Trinity Ring funeral church, Bishop Lemuel H. Wells, cremation.

HAY CROP IS VERY SPOTTY

Large Demand for Course Grain for Late Seeding

Scarcity of hay in this section and favorable conditions for replanting have created a great demand for seeds of all kinds that local feed and grain dealers have experienced for years. So great is the demand that dealers are having a busy time trying to keep up the customers who have come from farms all over the county to get needed seeds which they cannot procure elsewhere as they have active in demand, and as a consequence. Millet seed, buckwheat and oats are particularly in demand.

"Hay crops have been so poor this season that many have plowed it all under and are now busy sowing their fields to millet, buckwheat or corn," declared one dealer when asked how he was supplied for seeds which he was trying to fill. "I have had customers all day long and I've been working on the road, or doing other work," he declared. "My hay is as good and as stout as it ever was."

Spotty Condition.

In the township of Ameliasburg, on the farm of Henry Lamb, the hay crop is exceptionally fine. Adjoining farm, even though the crop had the same careful planting the one owned by Mr. William Wesse shows a very poor crop, and practically all like the one next door. The same condition is encountered throughout the county and in Prince Edward county, as well as other sections. Farmers there are plowing up their hay crop and replanting again with millet, buckwheat or corn.

Though no definite reason can be given by any of the local farmers for the shortage, an optimistic feeling prevailing among them that wheat this year will be going in one dollar per bushel, or more. This, they declare, is material for encouraging the whole country regain predepression prosperity.

POLICE COURT

No great activity was recorded in the local police circles on Friday morning, early police morning. Constables Taylor and Evans while making their usual rounds found a deserted car near the corner of St. Paul and Front Sts. The officers took charge of the car which bore the licence plates of LX-455 in the police station. Later on will be held until its rightful owner is found.

The police department is in receipt of a circular letter from Smith's Falls to the effect that a youth by the name of William Wynne age 15 years of medium height and weight disappeared from his home in that town early this week. Young Wynne wore a red and blue colored sweater and was carrying a faded fawn colored rain coat, when he was last seen. All the police departments in the various towns and cities in Eastern Ontario are endeavouring to locate the boy.

Yankees Are Not the Cinch They Were Two Weeks Ago

Have Gone Into Slump With Two Important Cogs Missing

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer).

The events of the next fortnight should tell pretty definitely how the land lies in the American league, whether the Yankees are to continue their headlong flight toward the championship or will be challenged by one or more of their most robust rivals.

That is the say, unless Detroit or Philadelphia succeeds in cutting down the Yankee lead materially in the next couple of weeks, you probably will see Babe Ruth in another world series next fall. The best opportunity there has been to slow the leaders is right now.

With Bill Dickey their slugging catcher, on the suspended list and Lefty Gomez pitching ragged ball for the first time this year, the Yanks find themselves shorn of two vital cogs, they appear on the edge of that slump which every team, no matter how great must expect sometime during the season they dropped their third straight to Detroit yesterday in 10 innings, only the second time since the race began they have lost more than two in a row.

Tigers are Aroused.

The second place Tigers, apparently realizing the time is ripe, put on a rousing finish to capture their opener with the leaders 8 to 8. They jumped on Gomez, who appeared in a relief role, for three runs in the ninth to knot the score and then routed the Castilian in the 10th with three more. Jonathan Stone, Tiger outfielder, knocked in two runs in each of the big innings. Gomez losing his third game against 11 victories walked four batters in the fatal 10th. Vic Sorrell pitched the Tigers within six and one ball of the top.

The Washington Senators, who put up a fair fight for the top early in the season, finally fell into the second division when they were beaten twice by Cleveland 3 to 2, and 4 to 2. Jack Russell and Mel Harder went the route for the Indians.

The third place Athletics could get no better than an even break with Chicago, losing the first 13 to 6 when they were held to six hits by the comi rooke Paglia, and winning the nightcap 9 to 2, behind Rube Walberg.

The St. Louis Browns broke a five game losing streak by slugging three Boston pitchers for 17 hits and an 8 to 2 decision.

National League

Pittsburgh's winning streak was snapped at 12 straight and its lead on the National League reduced to two and one half games by the New York Giants, who profited by a pair of runs to win 4 to 3 in Maine, threw away his own effort in the eighth, when he heaved wildly past first on an attempted forceout. Waite Hoyt, pitching relief for the Pirates, helped him the last three innings.

Chicago and Boston remained to a virtual tie for second place. The Cubs scored early over Phil Phillies, 7 to 0 as Pat Malone pitched only five hits, and the Braves put a couple of homers over the fence to knot the score at 5 to 5. "Red" Hargrave hit one with a runner on in the second innings and the Great Air Shirley belted another in the eighth with two aboard.

Brooklyn and Cincinnati were rained out.

OSHAWA FALCONS TO MEET NAT. MAIDS

Saturday, softball fans who follow the girls' game have a treat in store when the clever Oshawa Falcons come to Belleville and District league leading National Maids in two games.

The Falcons are anxious to win from the Motor City team, and as they are bringing a smart outfit their should be plenty of action.

A large crowd is looked for to get to prescribe on Friday night and will leave early Saturday morning for the Loft Lock City.

The junior teams will held sway in Belleville on Saturday. Starting Friday evening the Wellington Juniors meet the Crystalaes at the Alemite grounds and then return to the same grounds to play a postponed game on Saturday afternoon —Up at the Park grounds the B.A. A.A. kids tie into the Moose Jaw Juniors Saturday afternoon when they play a double header. Two games for the sum admission is rather a novelty in local baseball circles.

By virtue of their win over the Canada Cement nine the Picton intermediates pulled up even with the other two teams in the Bay of Quinte league on Wednesday afternoon. The score of 7 to 1 about indicates the play as the Prince Edward kids had their batting toys on all day and collected 11 well timed hits. The Victorias, Point Anne and Picton have all now two games and lost two games to date. The later two teams play-off a five innings tie of all last week however. The game will be replayed at the conclusion of the schedule if it has any bearing on the league standing then. The Victorias have reached the league mark in their schedule and will start the second half of the league scheduled all even. The Victorias started off the season with a bang by winning their first two games. They have faltered considerably of late and seem to be headed for the cellar position. They sadly lack a good pitcher and one or two hard hitting outfielders. The Picton club on the other hand are forging ahead slowly and will bear watching while the Point Anne aggregation seem to be of the in and out nature as they play excellent ball one day and then make an appearance they play like a bunch of school boys. Down in the Lennox Addington County intermediate loop the Gilbert Athletics are burning the league up to some considerable extent. The Napanee crew seem to be headed towards another league title as they are playing inspired ball throughout. In Doug Fraser they have one of the smartest right hand pitchers in the district. Freddie Bentley also can step in and take his turn on the hill top.

Kain and wed grounds caused Thursday night's National Maid and Clace game to be postponed until next week. On Friday night the Belleville Frui team will try to regain some lost ground by beating the Bath Maple Leafs. Yesterday's Intermediate and Intermediate A scheduled one in the afternoon and one in the evening between these two high class girls' teams. The Falcons will be led by the Elliott sisters who are the sensation of Oshawa for a number of years.

Toll Gate had returned to form —Although many local race horse owners were somewhat dubious as to Toll Gate's chances this year the veteran pacer came through in the feature event of the Belleville Ford Comn. on Wednesday afternoon. The "Old Boy" won the three heats in 2.06 1-2, 2.06 and 2.07 1-4. Toll Gate owned home is victorious in a walk, so to speak, as he did not have any competition worthy of note.

Today's question:

F. S. asks whether it is fool or fair when batter hits ball and first baseman misses catch and bounces back to dugout. Asks if with a man on first base, next batter hits home run, but fails to touch first base, can the man on first score or does he have to step at any base. Can the man on first score if batter failed to touch second base?

It is a foul ball. Run does not count if batter missed first base with two outs; if less than two outs, run counts. If batter missed second base, run counts.

Knocks and Boosts

Plenty of baseball is on the besieged ball fans' menu this week. The Nationals, fresh from their win over the Toronto Ponies on Wednesday, journey to Peterboro to play in a game which they were scheduled to play on Dominion Day. Carl Casey will no doubt wield the pitching assignment and if the ex-Saliphide hurler is even near his form of last year he will be seen at James Stevenson Park on Saturday afternoon. The Petes will have to rely on Ernie Holmes to bust the game in Rose Kitchen pitched a hard game against the Kingston Ponies on Wednesday and will probably be set to prescribe on Friday night and will leave early Saturday morning for the Loft Lock City.

SALTZGAVER FINDS HURLERS IN LOOP EASY

Since Coming to Minors He Has Swatted Ball for .368

HELPS BEARS

Bisons Pound Cascarella For Fourteen Hits to Win 7—3

(By The Associated Press)

Otto (Jack) Saltzgaver lost his first job in the big league because he couldn't hit but the former St. Paul second baseman is finding Interntional League hurlers easy to solve.

Since he was sent to Newark by the New York Yankees, Saltzgaver has compiled the healthy batting average of .368 in 38 games and has driven 31 runs across the plate. In his string of 38 hits already dealed, two triples and six home runs indicating that he is taking a real cut at the ball.

He clouted three doubles, drove in three runs and scored two yesterday as the Bears tripped-up Montreal's Royals, 7-3, to maintain their grasp on first place. Jim Weaver was forced to retire in the seventh after being hit by Walter's line drive. Don Brennan finished up and allowed only one hit in the last two and two third innings. Weaver was in trouble in the sixth, when the Royals scored all their runs, two of them on Weaver's home run.

Buffalo pounded Joe Cascarella for 14 hits and won a 7-3 victory over the Jersey City Skeeters. The game was slow, however, until the eighth when the Bisons bunched hits for three runs. Heinly Mueller of the Bisons collected a home run and a single.

Behind Beryl Richmond's spectacular pitching, Baltimore topped Rochester 4-2. Richmond was walloped for 11 hits but struck out 12 men and was effective in the pinches. Bill Hart allowed Baltimore only eight hits but these were bunched for two runs each in the second and sixth innings.

Reading and Toronto were rained out.

Ridley Camp, England, July 8 (C. P. Cable)—The Canadian Ridley Cup team scored a very impressive competition at the National Rifle Association's meeting today when Major F. Richardson of Victoria, scoring the highest possible, 50, in the Donegall Challenge Cup Service Rifle event.

Major Richardson however, did not take the cup, for several other crack military marksmen also scored fifty points and had to count for the individual honors.

The match was at 200 yards and with "all conditions' good, the sun shining brightly at times, the scores were very high.

Other Canadian scores in the Donegall Cup event as follows: Lt. Desmond Burke, of Ottawa, and Lt. F. P. Mitchell of Hamilton, 49; Captain O. Kerr, Toronto; Lieut. O. A. Mclecey of Winnipeg, and Lt. C. W. Swears, Hamilton, 48; Capt. J. W. Houlden, Sherbrooke, Que., 47.

This time the old-timer, who is now 43 years of age and has been living in semi-retirement in Philadelphia for several seasons, is called to succeed the luckless Tom Daly. And he won't bring either, when he said this, although there was a naughty little twinkle in his eye, "Blacky" plans keeping Tom Daly as his first assistant, which probably means that Fred Burchell will be let out. "Yes—the Children are Sound Asleep"

Isobel was determined that the children should be outdoors this summer, but Tom could get away from the office only at week-ends and she dreaded the long days alone in the country.

"That's easy," Tom said, "we'll use the telephone. A call to the city costs only a few cents."

And so Isobel's difficulty is solved. Tom telephones her nearly every evening and she finds Long Distance a convenient, inexpensive way of arranging visits and keeping in touch with friends in town.

Low evening rates on "Any-one" (station-to-station) calls begin at 7.00 p.m. and still lower night rates at 8.30 p.m. —local time. Just give Long Distance the number you want. It speeds up the service.

"Ah, yes. To the big city—" No, not on that account. He hesitated.

"His father is backing you? He has money?" The prima donna's eyes had narrowed.

This was no time to hedge. Lily Lu sensed that. "She has money, ma'am," she said, "and he gave me my train ticket and five hundred dollars. I have $150 of it left. But I hope to send it all back to him as soon as I get a job—I'll do more. I don't know whether you'd say that was backing me or not....is it?"

No. But the child. They will provide for it? You have a settlement? Or will they take it?"

"No! Oh, no. They don't know about it. I didn't tell them. I have enough money, and I'm going right on to some little place for a while in France. It is for the baby, for me—and then to the American hospital at Neuilly, and you won't be bothered—really!"

"But you can't do that. You must write—" The Scandalist's A marriage can't be annulled then—"

Madame Nahlman thrust one fat little leg out of bed. Lily Lou had a vision of her wiring the Sargents, of old Mr. Sargent guiding the news, and Mrs. Sargent clinging together, cowering away from it.

"No, I can't tell them now. It's too late. He's engaged to be married again. Maybe he's married—for all I know—"

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

Lily Lou's chin quivered. She was suddenly homesick. She wanted to get away from this strange room, and the strange people, and all the strange sights and sounds of the city. She wanted to bury her head in her mother's lap, and hide there with her face against her mother's voluminous skirts, with the tangle of honeysuckle and jasmine vine shutting out the front porch and the old rocking chair, from the quiet street.

She could sense the thought of defeat of coming back in disgrace, a failure. She didn't mind saying, that being here all alone with these people she had forced, was out of thought and speech. She wanted to be home again, where some one cared and things were safe and unchanging.

She blinked a stray tear out of her eyes, faced the strange, kindly prima donna, and mumbled: "I guess she—I can't tell them."

Madame Nahlman reached out, fat arms to her. "No, darling child, you can't' tell them. And what do we care for them? Nothing! Those devils, men! Never mind. No man is worth crying over. But you must never trust one again. There, reach me my handkerchief. You have been ill and all heart—I was myself out on other people's troubles, but I cannot help it, it is my nature—my temperament. See, I am crying more than you! Now we shall stop. I'll have more hot coffee, and then I shall be better. You too! No? Oh, yes, just a taste, from my cup ....good?"

Lily Lou drank from the cup, set it down again with a steady hand. "That is right! Madame Nahlman said briskly. "Courage. You have it, too. You will make a career. My first thought was right. My first thoughts are always right. It is only my second thoughts....." One of your duties will be to keep me from thinking those second thoughts.... you hear that?"

Lily Lou nodded. She did not trust herself to speak. She wanted to leave, to get away from here. Madahman glanced at the jeweled clock by her bedside, "Mercy! It is not possible! How you must go. I have a friend coming. He must find me beautiful—"

She slipped out of bed, a billowing mountain of silk and lace, beamed tearfully upon her audience. "Tonight! We meet on the boat tonight. Leave me, and go!"

Lily Lou kissed her. She went and stood in the hall outside the door, for a long time. She thought, "I won't go. I can't. I'll go crazy or something!"

On the way home she turned it over in her mind, arriving at no conclusion.

Mrs. Manchester had a bon voyage basket, big as a young clothes-basket, and the two new novels, the box of candy, through their transparent, shiny wrappers, nestled in the red roses and waxy lillies of the valley tied on the handle.

"How now! You're not homesick already, my dear? You flatter her not, not wishing to leave me!" Mrs. Manchester gushed, patting her, playfully.

"Well, I am a little homesick, I—I sort of hate to go."

"Of course you do. But think what a glorious time you will have with the famous Mrs. Nahlman. Parties receptions. All the famous people in Europe. Really, you don't know how fortunate you are!"

"Yes, I'm awfully fortunate." Lily Lou said. She thought Madame Nahlman, also, to be pretty and gaudy. She would be very wonderful ....oh, if she could only go home instead....."Was there any mail?" she asked nervously.

"Ah, you think so. SA-DIE! What did you do with Miss Lily Lou's mail?"

They found it. Two letters, and a postcard. The postcard was a picture of the city hall in Toronto. It was from Randa's father and said: "Best of luck in the big city. Kind regards from yours truly, R. W. Kittridge."

The air mail letter was from May Lou, the other came from Lily Lou's mother. She opened her mother's letter first. It had a leaf of rose geranium pressed in the sheet of blue dotted swiss. "Your father is painting the kitchen and dining room. It will take three coats, to cover the old paint, but it is not one of those cool oil ranges before summer, though the wood range has such a good oven! I don't know that I can give it up. The swiss is for the curtains—"

Lily Lou read it through slowly. Then she read May Lou's letter giving her a lot of news about home.

When she had finished reading it, Lily Lou stuck it in her purse with her mother's letter and her father's check into her pocket, and that had been hers and looked at it, and she picked up the phone to tell whether everything had been done. Frances Jones had answered already. Her clothes were piled on Lily Lou's bed.

Lily Lou let the thought automatically pressing her throbbing temples. She was not entirely conscious that it was aching "I'll go. I can't do anything else. And I hope the ship sinks."

The ship did not sink. It cut its way across the Atlantic in the teeth of a sale that sent white faces hurrying to the smokestack and shook the ship to its very timbers.

Madame Nahlman stayed in the stateroom for two days, having all her meal sent up. She had Lily Lou's meals sent up too but Lily Lou could not eat. As Nahlman predicted, she was sick.

At first she worried that all this would annoy the prima donna, and she starting the same cabin.

But no it amused her. "I don't want to seem cruel," she said sometimes, eyeing poor, greenish Lily Lou with fill concealed gusto, "but it's so funny. I haven't laughed like this for 10 years, not since—but this is not the time. Some day, perhaps I shall tell you, when the babe is safely in the arms of Boonse. We shall have a nice French time, with steamers, and petticoats. I shall get you the most crocheted petticoated bonne in all France. Wait! Then we shall laugh, you and I together, and laugh, and laugh—"

Nita Nahlman did not wait. She laughed now. Loud and long. And at sight of her, with her longish mustard hair flying and her bright blue eyes burning in her sallow, leathery face, there were times when Lily Lou was almost afraid of her. There was something hardly sane.

But she was so kind. Even when her familiarities, her easy discussions of things that Lily Lou had been brought up to think one didn't discuss, her direct, embarrassing questions were hardly to bear, you were conscious of her kindness, her genuine good will back of it.....

Lily Lou could not go on?

Not that Madame Nahlman spent much time in the cabin, after the second day out. It amused her to rig herself up in her most garnish costumes, and sit for hours playing brides at ten cents a point.

The sight of her turbaned head, wrapped in silver or green brocade, and her huge bulk swathed in trailing chiffon became almost as familiar as Maxine Rochon's shock of brown hair and spoiled baby-blue bathrobe.

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT

The truth was that Lily Lou, who had been unused to dissipation, had had so much of it in the last six months that she was beginning to accept it as a perfectly natural part of life.

There was the landing at Liverpool, a sort of spotless town, all laid out in orderly buildings, all as much alike as possible, and lunch in a big and rather cheerless hotel with Madame Nahlman inclined to pace the floor and buttonhole clerks and managers because there was no mail for her, and someone who was supposed to have met her had failed to arrive.

Grumbling she decided to go back to the station. There was a short ride through green English country, in one of those, queer European trains with seats for six in a compartment, and a corridor along one side.

Then London. A London of immense, stone station, decorative British policemen majestically ordering a very British traffic, a cold, damp rain, and then two nights in a rather chilly hotel. During that time she saw Madame Nahlman, whose room was on another floor, just once.

At that time she kissed Lily Lou fondly called her her own darling little companion, and told her that she couldn't have borne two days in this frightful, depressing place without her. Then she disappeared, not, to appear again until it was time to take the train for Southampton, and then a night boat to Le Havre where a certain Mademoiselle Suzanne Colin, maid and companion was to be picked up.

Then she appeared only long enough to tell Lily Lou to go on board alone, she had decided to take Pollestone-Boulogne crossing; after all, and would meet her in Paris at the Ritz, day after tomorrow, "and here's 10 francs, dear, this should do you, and don't forget to look for Suzanne when the boat docks at Le Havre. She's tall, fair, rather Englishy type. You can't miss her—she speaks English."

A little bewildered, a little frightened, but not unhappy, Lily Lou started, somewhat hampered by all of Nahlman's luggage, as well as her own.

At the boat there was some misunderstanding about her reservation. Madame Nahlman had cancelled....no, there was nothing for Miss Lansing. Sorry, but the stateroom were all engaged. However, could have a berth in the women's cabin.

After a look at the women's cabin, a stuffy, dismal looking place, overcrowded already, she climbed up on deck, and slid there wrapped in blankets until the boat started. Then, weakly again, she groped her way back to the cabin she had despised before, and slept down on top of one of the vacant berths.

In the morning the ship was anchored at the pier on the French side, and the channel looked calm as a millpond. The air was fresh and clean, the sky was blue. The night was just a bad dream.

Bustle of leaving. Customs. Officials. Then Suzanne Colin. Lily Lou missed the Paris train, waiting and looking for her. An English-speaking gentleman, who turned out to be awaiting a party of tourists whom he was going to guide through Paris and on to Italy, persuaded her, countrywoman to Lily Lou's request for coffee.

Acceptance at small. Lily Lou drank the chocolate and let her new friend take charge of the luggage. On the train they had a compartment all to themselves and Suzanne took off her hat and her thin coat, and slipped out of her frowsy high-heeled shoes, practically twisting her loss—an action which Lily Lou was to associate forever with France. French travelers, it seemed, removed their shoes at once naturally and quickly as they did their hats.

"I am Swiss. And you?" "American....I came from the States with Madame Nahlman, to study."

"Ah, yes. From New York. I have a sister there. She is married....." Suzanne was off on a long, detailed history of her sister, her sisters' health, and her husband.

Lily Lou let her talk. She thought about London, and the few things she had managed to see. St. Paul's, Westminster, Bond St. Parliament Buildings. And that was about all.

And now she was in France, on a French train, on her way to Paris.

Suzanne had stopped talking about her sister. Lily Lou was glad that since Madame would not arrive until Friday, she thought they'd go on to visit another sister at Passy, and she'd be at the Ritz in time to unpack for Madame.

"And should I go on to the Ritz? Or would it be better if I went somewhere less expensive?"

Suzanne being, ever her companion speculatively. The black coat that did not fit very well, the rumpled hands, he inexpensive hat.

"There are cheaper places. You might go to the Grand Hotel Orly, that's cheap," she said, "I knew an English woman who stayed there once."

They shook hands.

She was just the acquaintance of a few hours, but Lily Lou felt very much alone when she went off with a light-hearted wave of a yellow gloved hand.

"Grand Hotel Orly," she told the whiskered and tattered taxi-driver whose ramshackle vehicle her luggage was being placed.

He stared at her for several moments, then motioned for her to get in.

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 69

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

Many miles to the west, as Meriem struggled in the arms of the Swede, Morison Baynes paced back and forth before his tent. He kept urging his boy to heap more brushwood upon the fire, he had suited his purpose to send Hanson instead of going himself to meet Meriem, but as the hours passed and they did not come, his conscience troubled him. After a sleepless night Baynes realized he had been tricked!

Moreover he knew that he was deserted; left purposely with little food and one black youth in the savage jungle. As he pictured the probable fate of Meriem at the hands of the Swede, his rage grew greater. Then as the thought sunk deeper that it was all his own fault he was filled with shame and loathing at himself. Could he still make amends? At least he could try. Several hours later he picked up the track of horses.

As Meriem fought with Malbihn, her hands pinioned to her sides by his brawny grip, hope died within her. She knew how useless it was to cry for help. As she was slowly being overcome, one hand came in contact with the butt of the Swede's revolver where it rested in the holster at his hip. Quickly she drew it forth. Instinctively Malbihn's hands flew out to stop her, but Meriem leveled it at his heart and pulled the trigger.

The hammer fell futilely upon an empty shell! Malbihn was again clutching her. For a moment she eluded him, but at the very entrance to the tent he caught her. Wheeling upon him with the fury of a wounded lioness, Meriem grasped the long revolver by the barrel, swung it high above her head and crashed it down full in Malbihn's face. With an oath of pain and rage the man staggered backward, released his hold ad sank unconscious to the ground.

Bay of Quinte Possesses Physical Advantages of No Other Water in Canada

Anglers Meet to Discuss Conditions With Fish Culturist

TWO SOLUTIONS

Commercial Fishermen Suggest Remedy to Help Industry

Serious discussion by commercial fishermen at Bay of Quinte district who were well represented at the meeting held by Mr. H. H. MacKay, chief biologist and director of the Fish Culture branch of the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries, in the city hall Thursday evening for the purpose of finding ways and means for the protection and conservation of game fish in local waters, resulted in two new recommendations addressed by representatives of that body, which will ultimately be adopted by the Ontario Department. The recommendations which were moved, seconded and carried were: 1st, requiring to gill nets—That close season for gill nets in The Bay of Quinte be observed during the period from October 15 to the 31st, both days included, and was moved by Mr. M. Gerow and seconded by Mr. R. Belnap. Second resolution: "That hoop nets also be restricted in Moscow Bay from September 15 to 1931, both days inclusive." This is expected to materially assist the spawning of white fish during that period, moved by Mr. Gerow and seconded by Mr. Gerow. Minor recommendations were also brought forward through the instigation of local anglers for the protection of game fishing in immediate waters will also be forwarded to the Department.

Anglers as well as commercial fishermen were well represented although numerically the attendance was small in the chamber. What lacked in numbers however was made up for by fresh discussions pro and con which featured the gathering. Those who were not present missed the meeting, to hear the talk given by Mr. MacKay, to learn many new facts about local waters and to air their opinions, many of which constructive features which would have materially assisted them in future operations.

Possesses Many Features.

Introduced by Mr. Gene Illser, who acted as chairman for the evening, Mr. MacKay at once delved into the biological aspects of the Bay of Quinte. Physical advantages possessed by no other body of water were pointed out by him in lucid manner. "During the past few days," declared Mr. MacKay, "it has been my privilege to observe the bay very closely; through those trips I have gained first hand knowledge of a body of water, which is second to none for the propagation of fish of all varieties. It is an undisputed fact, that the Bay or Quinte has many natural advantages than many, who have lived along her shores all their lives have realized. For example with white fish alone are this breeding grounds contains more fish impersonified by actual cash value than any other fairly body of water in the Dominion of Canada. But it is not the grasp fish, the small mouth bass, the large mouth bass, pike and its muskinonge. For the first class of fish, the muskinonge and weed beds offer no better situation. They are the best to feel fish, that swim the water. We must protect this fish, and that is why this meeting is called."

"But there are other fish too, to consider, there are sometimes called "coarse, fish." That is a mistake. The question is not to convey the opinion that we must get rid of these fish, such as suckers and other varieties. That is a mistake. Let them off and the other larger fish will starve. Both are necessary.

Must Protect White Fish.

"There is one fish however, that we are tonight directly concerned with—the white fish. They constitute one of the productive, and needed assets of the Province. Year by year, however, shows a decided decrease in the catch made. In the year 1924 the average catch was in the neighborhood of 792-813 pounds, in the year 1931 had dropped to 180,034 pounds. Herring has shown a like decrease. Oatlas and others show a fairly steady progression. This drop in whitefish is something which must be corrected."

Discussion was aroused by the figures quoted by Mr. MacKay. "If some way could be found to put a stop to seining by residents of the Reservation who are as ill all the time," declared a member of the audience, "there would be no need to change any period for legal netting. Those fellows down there take more fish in a month than all the commercial fishermen in this whole district will take for the season." "There is no one doing any more to protect the game fish in those waters than the commercial fishermen themselves," declared Mr. Belnap, spokesman for the local body. Mr. Belnap also declared at this period, that the waters in the bay were teeming" with black bass.

Bullheads Distractive.

"What do you suppose is the most destructive fish in the water?" asked Mr. Belnap, when the question of other fish eating white fish eggs was brought up. The question was answered by himself: "Bullheads, redfins and perch, but particularly bullheads. I've seen bullheads so stuffed with eggs, that they were hanging out their gills. Why did the ling are the worst thing the whitefish has to contend with, added the speaker.

Mr. MacKay: "Are there many ling in local waters?" "The bay is full of them."

Reference was made to the disposical activity of the "sucker" and carp which clit up the weed beds and the mud in the bottom of the bay and cover other eggs, smothering them. Also the question as to whether or not they eat eggs. Mr. MacKay searched records he had brought, and from it quoted 1% of report which had been made of local waters:—"It would appear that the species accusation that suckers eat eggs lacks foundation, he read. "They may not eat them but they certainly do cover them over with a thick coating of mud and thereby destroy the development." fisherman.

Local anglers when called upon to air their grievances, stated that black bass was being caught out of season all along, and that in many instances illegal netting was being performed right before the public. Fishing from the Bay Bridge was also described by one angler. Not two weeks ago I was going along the bridge and I saw one lad fishing with minnows. He was hauling black bass in as long as that....." He had seven when I met him." A recommendation to advertise help is given the local warden will be sent to the Department.

Mr. A. Fairfield, Mr. Lloyd and Mr. H. E. Fairfield represented the local Chamber of Commerce at the meeting.

FRENCH SUB. SINKS AND 66 MEN ARE LOST

Testing for Mechanical Faults When Tragedy Occurs

Cherbourg, France, July 8.—The French submarine Promethee plunged without warning under the waves of Cherbourg harbor while on a trial maneuvre Thursday, carrying down at least 66 men in 150 feet of water between mole and forts of the port.

Seven members of the crew, including Lieut. du Mesnil, the ship's commander, were saved when they were hurled from the deck into the sea by the burst of an explosion in the unexpected dive. They swam until they were picked up by a fishing boat.

Efforts to locate and salvage the submersible with its imprisoned occupants, begun immediately, were impeded by strong currents prevailing at that spot. Search for the sunken craft by divers was also handicapped by miserable flying conditions, which made their job dangerous.

The submarine, in service only two years, was undergoing its correct mechanical faults when it set out particularly for diving trials.

The ministry of marine at Paris said the Promethee had been in perfect working order. Various adjustments had been found necessary before it could be declared fit for long voyage. It was in an effort to bring the machinery to perfection that this afternoon's disastrous trials had been arranged.

Marine Experts Offer Hope.

It was estimated that 49 members of the crew and 17 other men, including engineers and workmen, were known with the ship. Correspondent of the Paris newspaper Le Matin estimated the number at 70.

Marine experts offered hope that the men inside the submarine might have found time to close the watertight hatches before there was a fatal rush of the sea into the ship, which sank like a flash.

They added that if no serious break occurred in the hull, it was reasonable to expect that the crew rag no immediate danger of death. The pressure would be equalized because of the depth of the sea.

Arrangements were be passed in the endeavor to raise the submarine. They were aided by the presence at Cherbourg of France's special floating dock for the raising of submarines. Efforts to locate the ship concentrated on determining the exact location of the ship and the confirmation of the sea bed.

Saved by Fishing Boat.

The crew of a fishing craft plying near the scene of the disaster immediately watched the submarine this afternoon were shocked to see it suddenly stagger and disappear.

A number of men standing on the deck seemed to be flung into the air, while a terrific explosion/debris set ia course for the scene and rescued the seven from the sea, including the commander, lieutenant du Mesnil.

It was believed that others of the crew were on deck at the time, but were dragged down by the suction of the terrific current, which might have caused the submarine's sinking. Search continued throughout the night for other possible survivors.

STRAWBERRY BASKETS MUST BE WELL AND PROPERLY FILLED

Local berries which are being picked and offered for sale at the present time are governed by the clause in the "Fruit Act," which states that fruit must be packed in a well and properly filled at original point of shipment. This would indicate that any prospective purchaser of strawberries has a right to demand that strawberry boxes be full.

All crates of berries sold, states local Fruit Inspector C. E. Stevenson, should have the name and address or registered number of the packer plainly marked on each package.

We are also advised that there is no longer an "ungraded" clause for under fruits. This affects cherries, particularly in this district and these will now have to be marked, with one of the following grades: Select, No. 1 or No. 2 together with the name and address of the packer. Each eleven and six quart basket now considered as closed packages.

CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES Limited

ADDED SHERIFFS TO GUARD COURT ROOM

Los Angeles, July 8—Additional deputy sheriffs were ordered today to guard the court room where Myrtle Joan St. Pierre's $300,000 breach of promise suit against David Hutton is nearing an end.

Superior Judge Lester Roth asked for the guard after finding a threatening letter in his chambers. He said the letter, printed roughly in pencil and having suspended from one corner a bullet, demanded he instruct the jury to return a verdict in favor of the husband of Aimee Semple Mc Pherson, evangelist.

With testimony completed, arguments in the case were to be made today. The case was expected to reach the jury by tomorrow.

Miss St. Pierre became hysterical when she testified in rebuttal yesterday in an attempt to show Hutton retained her under promise of marriage before he married the evangelist.

"EUROPE CANNOT LIVE ALONE"—MACDONALD

"We Have Put New Page in History, Begun New Book" Says British Prime Minister Signing Lausanne Pact

Momentous Conference Ends at Lausanne Saturday

STATESMEN SMILE

Must Extend Hand to Nations Struggling Under Burdens

By Melvin K. Whiteleather
Associated Press Staff Writer

Lausanne, Switzerland, July 9—The Lausanne Conference on war debts and reparations was officially declared closed at 11:25 a.m. today, after representatives of the principal powers had formally initiated the agreement to scale Germany's reparations bill down from the original $64,000,000,000 to approximately $714,000,000.

The initialling ceremony was held in the Beau Rivage Hotel at which most of the sessions of the conference took place. Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain, whose tenacity was credited with having brought about the agreement, presided.

Mr. MacDonald himself was the first to use the gold pen on the document that represented the end of the long financial settlements in history.

He was followed by Premier Renkin, Paul Hymans, Emile Francqui for Belgium, Sir John Simon, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, representing the Dominion, Antonion Mosconi for Italy, Premier Herriot, M. Germain-Martin for France, August Zaleski for Poland, Ambassador Shigeru Yoshida for Japan and Chancellor Von Fancon, Ambassador Von Neurath and Count Schwerin Von Krosick for Germany.

Two committees were created before the conference adjourned. The first committee was to deal with Danubian problems.

"Great transfers of postwar capital," Premier Minister MacDonald said in his closing address, "have not been a punishment to one nation, but a burden upon all.

"The most self-sustained country in the world — the United States — has been hit as hard as we.

"This begins a new chapter. We have closed one book and opened a new one. Agreement has not been easy. There are too many old memories which are not easy to uplift.

"Lausanne must put into effect a universal framework. Europe cannot live alone. The arrangements signed here must be followed elsewhere."

Prime Minister MacDonald asked the Premiers of the various powers to go forward to Ottawa next July 1933 with great courage.

Referring to the Par East, he asked for "candor." "Our friends in the Far East," he said, "must show how to manage the Chinese as the other countries do."

After the conference was officially closed the delegates drank a toast to world prosperity.

PITCHERS MUST NOT USE "BEAN BALL"

Chicago, July 9—President Will Harridge of the American League today declared war on the "Bean Ball."

Disarmament Not Enough Need of Candor Confidence

Lausanne, July 9 — (Canadian Press Cable)—"Europe cannot live alone; the agreement signed here must have a response elsewhere," declared Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald at the closing session which closed the labors of the Lausanne Conference on reparations and debts today with agreement to drop German reparations annuities.

The British Prime Minister, deploring spirit of the conference, was the first to declare that political wishful thinking substitutes a final payment, sometime in the future, of around $714,000,000 for the reparation annuities which would have gone on for another 58 years under the Young schedule.

"We have put a new page in history, not the ending of a chapter but the beginning of a new book," Prime Minister MacDonald declared, stressing that the huge burden of signing national postwar intergovernmental payments was crumbling down the industry of the world, he added that even such a self-constituted union as the United States "is as hard hit as ourselves."

The crowd of European statesmen were in smiling mood, well satisfied with the outcome of their labors, confidently looking to the United States for common action on the war debts problem now that Europe has slashed reparations down to one-twentieth of one percent of the original reparations figure.

Prime Minister MacDonald expressed the hope that Geneva would put an end to the grave race in armaments. "But disarmament is not enough," he said, "We must have peace and confidence, moral disarmament among nations. We must extend the hand of friendship and encouragement to all the struggling nations."

The Lausanne conference result may well prove to be the first break in the vicious circle which has hindered the return to normalcy. Word came in the Canadian Capital tonight.

ST. LAWRENCE WATERS LAVE POLAR CRAFT

Admiral Byrd's Famous Barque Nears Old Quebec

HER RECORD

Will be Towed From Montreal To Chicago

Quebec, July 9 (CP)—Poking her way slowly up the mighty St. Lawrence, Admiral Richard Byrd's famous barque, "City of New York," is approaching this city. Heroine of a thousand Polar storms, the sturdy little vessel is now on a holiday jaunt which will terminate in Chicago.

Just a floating museum now, the "City of New York" made many a headline in those stirring days of Byrd's dash to the South Pole. She scarred her sides and marred her lines in the old days. But now the cool waters of the Great Lakes will have her sides and bring peace to the old vessel.

Once a Schooner

At one time the barque was known as the loneship "Samson." On August 25, 1928, she left Dundee, Scotland, for Dundee, Newfoundland, by way of Cape Horn, Panama City. Then she dropped into Dundee because she was unlucky.

A brief delay there while feed and bilge pumps were installed and then away she went again. Soon he landed in the Pacific doldrums, and for days held practically motionless. In November, however, she passed the 180th Meridian, the "date line" where a day is lost or gained. Late that month, Dunedin, N.Z., became her resting place for a week or so.

Sails For Barrier.

December 3, 1928, passengers the world round bulletined the fact that she had sailed for the Antarctic ice barrier. Before she sailed away her hither and thither and turned her back again. And again and again she set out for the Polar base where the main party of the expedition, who had arrived previously on the Eleanor Bolling were waiting.

Two months later, despite ice and storms, the gallant little "City of New York" neared her goal. On February 20, 1929, she started the return journey, favorable winds, calms and a sun eclipse featured the return journey. Arguments over rowing rights through the Panama Canal caused further delay. But on June 28, 1930, she headed proudly into New York harbor and ended her spectacular journey. Thousands of pennants dipped in salute as vessels raced in behind her and she moored at the ice-scarred "City of New York".

Carries Museum.

But that was not the end of her travels. Soon after she again headed out into the blue waters of the Atlantic, beginning an exhibition tour which took her to many cities. Her load was lighter this time, however for on board was a cargo of exhibits Byrd had brought back from the Antarctic.

On arrival in Montreal, the "City of New York" will be picked up by the Canadian National Railways and towed the balance of the way to Chicago. In the Windy City she will the old vessel is expected to be an interesting exhibit. She is now commanded by Lieut. Waldo Ford, member of Admiral Byrd's famous crew.

SEPARATED BUT LIVE TOGETHER

Chicago, July 9.—Mrs. Lillian Fergon and her husband will have a separation, but they will live together.

She asked for separate maintenance. He objected that she could not stay in the same house with him and sued.

Judge Daniel P. Trudo gave the judgment of a Solomon:

"It's much cheaper for you to maintain your wife in your own home than in another house. Draw a chalk line through the middle of the house and each stay on your own side."

So the Fergons are toeing or maybe heeling, the mark.

Flat Tires, Flat Broke But Boys Sent Happy Away

Two young motorcycle enthusiasts from Chicago, attempting to make a tour of Canadian provinces in Quebec, came to grief on the highway just west of the city. Tires on their machine, which had been well worn by the trip so far petering out on the last, they themselves were left stranded. They had no money to buy new tires, not even enough to get material to repair the old ones. A local dealer, Mr. Cook, was appealed to by 'phone at daybreak this morning for aid. Divers Will Work in Pitch Dark at 245 Feet Depth

Cherbourg, France, July 9 (AP) — The Italian salvage ships Artiglio and Rosto prepared today to attempt what many experts considered the almost impossible—the salvage of the sunken French submarine Promethee and the rescue of her crew if any of them is alive.

The two salvage ships arrived at 10 a.m. and proceeded directly to the arsenal to take on equipment for the rescue attempt.

Vice-Admiral Ledo, chief of the Maritime Prefecture, said this morning it would be a most difficult task. "At that depth (the submarine is lying about 245 feet below the surface the divers will be working in pitch darkness," he said.

"But we will first try to pass chains around the hull to permit the use of lifting gear and it might also be possible to drag the submarine to shallower water."

Offers of Farm Jobs Turned Down City not Aiding Idle Who Spurn Work

A dictum offered by Mayor Geo. City hall, Saturday morning, in respect existent, strengthens a feeling held by many that there is plenty of work and the support which has been given them by the fax payers

"There is no detectable difference between a man who refuses work and one who is content to sit idly by while jobs are going begging," Mayor Geo. O. Tice declared the mayor, will not be tolerated by taxpayers who have been at work

"Let me cite an instance. Just this week I have had three requests for farm help from three different farmers I know personally. In each instance enthused when I got the request but when I told them I was to be fifteen dollars a month. Names and the farmers were given to the relief clerk, Mr. Soules, with instructions to notify three men who had been coming to my office to send them to the addresses. Some time later I enquired if the men had taken the jobs. The answer the clerk got was that they were the men was: "We don't have to work on the farm!"

"It is to the best interest of every out of work man in the city to accept employment and be laid by for the coming cold months," emphatically declared Mayor Tice.

"Even if they have to take part of their pay in food product, it is much better than sitting around doing nothing. This idea that seems to have taken root in some men of losing the city to do all the work of keeping people who will not help themselves will have to be revived. The tax payer is burdened heavily enough as it is."

WORM IS BEST AT SIX WEEKS

Neither Too Fat Nor Lean For Fishing Bait

Toronto, July 9 (CP)—A fish-worm has most appeal when it's about six weeks old, is neither too fat nor too lean, and has plenty of ambition to wriggle upon a hook, Bill Campbell of Toronto, a connoisseur of worms, is authority for this.

Albert Farnol Believes Island Scene of Tragedy

The Pas, July 9.—(By the Canadian Press)—Albert Farnol 42-year-old trapper, arrived here yesterday with his arm badly lacerated and a story of a desperate battle with eight or nine half starved husky dogs which attacked him on an island in Southern Indian lake.

Returning from his winter's trapping operations Farnol said he reached his canoe on the island and was at once attacked by the dogs. He beat them off with his paddle but one of them seized his arm and tore it badly. Farnol got in his canoe and beat a hasty retreat while the dogs swam after him. He said he shot several of them from his canoe before they turned back discouraged by the cold water.

Suspects Tragedy

Farnol says the presence of the dogs on the island is indication of a tragedy of some sort Persons plan to land on the island and investigate on the way back. It is possible they belonged to some winter dog driver who perished and left them stranded. By means of rough first air treatment he kept his wounded arm free from poison.

Owing to the extreme youth of the boy who resides on the east end of the charge was laid. Questioned, the boy declared that since last June he had been in the habit of carrying

Importance of Theatre Ventilation and Systems Of Artificial Cooling

Physical Comfort of Patrons Menaced by Poisoned and Stagnate Air—New Cooling System Installed in Belle Theatre Changes the Air Every Few Moments, Draws in Fresh Air, Cools it and Drives Out Used Air Before it Becomes Dangerous to Patrons

Man lives in a sea of air just as fish and other aquatic animals live in a sea of water. If air were visible to our eyes, we would see man actually plowing his way through the air. It would flow about him as the water flows about the brow of a boat, with a turbulent spray, we might call it, over his head and shoulders a whirling wake stretching far out behind.

We would see the air entering and leaving his nostrils as he breathed, passing beneath and through his clothing, and if we could complete by sight the constituent gases in the air we would see the flow of oxygen as it was inspired, and note that it was much diminished as it was expired, and that relatively large amounts of carbon dioxide and water vapor were also present in the expired air. We would see the air circulating over the body surface, taking up heat and moisture from the skin, some carbon dioxide and other waste material. And then we would begin to appreciate the importance of man's aerial envelope to his health and comfort, even to his very existence.

The nature and extent of the contamination of city air is serious. With every breath we inhale a million micro sicks that are no part of a pure atmosphere; dust, decayed animal and vegetable matter, dangerous, irritating pollen from plants and bacteria spores and microbes that circulate everywhere.

Authorities on ventilation state that first, consideration should be given to heating under control and regulation. Secondly, adequate circulation of clean pure air that will carry from the lungs and pores, the waste elimination of the body, avoiding dangerous drafts and open windows that bring in dust or chilled air to discomfort of workers. Humidity during heating seasons proper moisture must be added to the artificially heated air to bring it to 40 or 50 percent relative humidity, otherwise dried out mucous membranes are a fertile breeding place of organisms that cause all kinds of nasal troubles, that sometimes result in other body complications.

At Zero outside, if air temperature inside is raised to 70 degrees Fahr, it is necessary to add several grains of water per cubic foot per hour in order to satisfy this parched air. Drying and cracking of fabrics, furniture, plaster, etc. is the result if this is not done. Humidity has assumed such importance that many prominent medical and scientific authorities are strongly advocating measures to supply this deficiency for health and economy.

Progress in sanitation has eliminated the source of many epidemics by supplying modern sewerage disposal, pure water and milk. But when one realizes that seventeen times a minute we are breathing in what may be either contaminated air that saps our very vitality and disposes us to diseases risks, how necessary then is the study of this important question.

Portunately, the problem is being solved by experts who have made a long study of the subject of proper ventilation, and new devices have been developed to supply the requirements of either individual rooms or whole buildings. devices that will supply individually or collectively proper controlled humidity, clean, washed air, free of dust dirt, circulation and even deodorization. Restaurants, theatres, stores and other places where the public gathers have been proven more healthful since said when air conditioning has been adopted. The same applies to offices, large and small, for undoubtedly more and better work can be gone by healthy, happy employees.

The subject is one in which the public interest is being aroused and it will not be long before shoppers will not care to shop or employees care to work in places where bad air conditions exist.

Many Ways to Lead a Dog But Not Through Middle

There are more ways than one to lead a dog, but little Jackie Cook aged four, chose the wrong one to plot his full grown coolie through the fire o'clock traffic on Grant St. near Campbell. Friday afternoon, and landed bang up in the middle of a first class dog fight in the street to which he had been protestingly but unceremoniously towed. He stood bewildered in the middle of it, and wound with cord, until pedestrians parted the warring dogs and rescued him. Jackie had started leading the dog by hand. Experimenting, he tied the rope around his middle. His charge, almost as tall as himself, resented the attitude of a passing youngrel and set off at a rapid pace to administer chastisement to the other dog. Jackie was hauled, howling, after him like a fish at the end of a line. Two dogs, a small boy and several feet of rope became an integral mass. Spectators grinned, but acted. Peace was restored and traffic resumed in normal. Mrs. Cook, who had been shopping hove into sight and finished the bussess of rope untying.

Quebec Police Quickly Run To Earth Bank Bandit

More than $1,000 was recovered The robbery was committed by two men, and pursuit of Deslaurier's companion was being continued in the wooded areas of this St. Lawrence short county. According to Deslauriers, who was arrested on the road to St. Genevrive, toward which the men fled in a stolen car, his companion sought refuge in the woods after they had abandoned the car. It was found a few miles from the spot where Deslauriers was taken into custody. A complete statement of his part in the hold-up was given by Deslauriers, police stated. He was found in possession of $1, but the authorities allege, the rest of the money having been given his companion. Arrest was made by police of the city, aided by Provincial authorities summoned to the scene soon after the robbery. Search was facilitated by Miss Carmon, who obtained the license number of the car the men were living and telephoned it to police.

LIGHTNING KILLS COWS UNDER TREE

CLINTON, July 9.—During a violent electrical storm, which struck Clinton shortly before midnight, five dairy cattle were killed on the farm of Charles E. Elliott, who conducts a retail milk business here. The cattle which were among the best milk producers in Mr. Elliott's herd, were under a tree which was struck by lightning. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

Belle Theatre Announces Installation of Cooling System

Patrons of the Belle Theatre are now assured of the last word in ventilation when attending this theatre.

After exhaustive research and study the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, one month ago decided to adopt what is known as the Sheldon System of Ventilation. The fresh air enters an immense fan located in a pent house directly over the stage roof. The fresh air is forced through a system of galvanized iron ducts located above the ceiling space. The air is diffused evenly throughout the entire auditorium and balcony. The supply roseties are specially designed to match in with the ceiling decoration and are furnished with adjustable bottoms to allow the conditioned air to diffuse of of the side opening. This is very important as an opening in the bottom of the roisette would allow too air to be carried straight down and cause draughts on the patrons sitting in the theatre.

When completed with an air-washing unit, the Belle Theatre now has one of the most up-to-date cooling and ventilation systems in Canada.

The system is designed to handle approximately 25 cubic feet of air per person. This amount meets with the requirements of the Public Health Association throughout the Dominion of Canada.

FLAMES SCHOLAR AND PARENT

Students and parents are alike responsible, according to a statement made by Principal Hall of the Peterborough Collegiate as to the showing of first year students, 65 of whom in a class of 176 failed to make their year. Among the five reasons for the large percentage of failures he gives two of the utmost importance — first, "a lack of serious application on the part of the pupils" and second, "a lack of intelligent co-operation on the part of the parents." Overcrowding, lower entrance standards and lack of ability of some pupils are given as the other three reasons.

Peterborough Examiner pointedly remarks that the last three are either in the hands of Board and Department or form a condition "always with us," that is in regard to ability to study but the other two are concerned with the home life of the pupil. The Examiner indicates that no matter how efficient the schools may be, if the pupil and the parent do not play their part, high standards are impossible. Seeking for causes for this unfavorable condition the editor sees them in the distractions of the day, dancing, the movies, the radio and other pastimes, which have cut into the home life and are now in turn naturally interfering with the schools.

So the situation stands and undoubtedly conditions somewhat similar to those in Peterborough exist elsewhere. Few if any schools lack the distracting influences of the age, which are a real threat to general efficiency in education. With all the modernization which has been brought into schools, the burden still rests upon the scholar, the teacher and the parent. The first two little encounter element when he or she sees the lack of a sense of responsibility among the young who sit before them for instruction. There is the danger that the condition may also result in a detrimental influence upon instructors. Good men and women were turned out of the schools with few of the modern embellishments. Schools thoroughly modernized ought to make for a more highly trained generation. The greater is the responsibility of the scholar and parent to let the scientific apparatus or the teachers do the work or studying. These improvements are but aiding agencies and they are education—they are only a vehicle of education and interest in the vehicle must not be so great as to detract from the real purposes of school buildings and equipment.

It is well to place before pupil and parent alike their duty. Here is another deplorable case brought to light in the listless of real achievement. All the world talks today of debt burdens. Here are expenses in part and if at least a standard equivalent to that of the past is not reached, there is lamentable waste.

Sometimes one wonders if a little more hardship for children should not be injected into the routine of some of the young. Doubtless some are learning it now with their parents under the pain of economic stringency. No board and no community will oppose large expenditures for education which is properly appreciated by the school pupil, but it is the failure to seize the advantages which rouses the critics.

One sympathizes with the student of today with the multifarious distractions and attractions bewildering him but it is someone's duty to impress him with his responsibility and those who will not pay the bills. Educational opportunity is a sacred trust and to neglect it is folly of the worst type.

TURNING DOWN FARM JOBS

Those who turn down an opportunity to work on the farm for ten or fifteen dollars a week and find it hard, indeed, to have nothing else to do are to be given short shrift in Belleville.

While a job on a farm is calling for a man, no man who is idle should rest contented until he has secured it or has tried to secure it. Failure to do so means placing a heavier burden on the workers only in the city but on the farm. Belleville will not maintain those who are idle because they like to be idle.

Probably worst of all is the throwing away of an opportunity to do real constructive work in a day of economic stress. By helping the farmer get in his crops a man does a work worth while. Incidentally he may acquire such a love for farming as to devote a portion of the rest of his life for it is no mean calling, that of agriculture.

While farmers raise the remuneration, and strive through Mayor Tice to get men, both farmers and the chief magistrate are disgusted with the result of the appeal which was met with a snub by those who were approached, "we don't have to work on the farm."

The sincere man will go to work on a farm and try to learn. The other type in need will be content to loaf in a city until a job he likes appears, meanwhile depending upon city for help.

Those who refuse to take the task at hand should be refused aid. Probably there will be some day an enactment which will take care of needy persons who will not work.

HORSES AT GAS STATIONS

Fountains or drinking troughs for horses have passed out of sight in most cities. In larger cities more than in small ones the absence of these conveniences for animals is keenly felt and an agitation is on foot to restore one or more of these refreshment places for the toiling animals even though their number is largely reduced thanks to the motorcar. In smaller places on the other hand, taps are accessible and a horse can quench a drink when he needs it.

No one thinks of taking a horse to a gas station to get him a drink but in the cities this is the only place where he can find the cooling liquid.

"I should say, by the way, there is no public drinking fountain for the use of human beings in Belleville. Some of the aldermen or members of some societies ought to think of that.

A BIT OF CHEER

Never mind the clouds, dear, never mind them;
Trust in God and look ahead; the sun will shine again—
Singing after sorrow, and good health after pain;
Sow the seed, and by and by comes the golden grain;
Sow the seed of happiness when all the skies are bright
If the clouds come lowering down, laugh them out of sight.
Never mind the comfort, though it whistles loud and long;
Whistle up a tune yourself, and then break out in song;
Laugh away your troubles, and pray away your cares;
That's the way, my sweetheart, to climb the golden stairs.

CIRCUS DAY IN BELLEVILLE thirty years ago was sure some event, according to back files of the Great Family Journal, as recorded in the 20-30-40 and 50 years ago columns of the countryside and more hitched Old Dobbin to the shay and headed for the county seat for a shopping spree, the pretty red brown Belleville Eight hundred Belleville railway tickets sold at Madoc on the morn of the circus, showed that the excitement had penetrated even that far. No doubt the wife-beater and the ductor did their very best to get the crowd in in time for the Great and Glittering Street Parade with all the beasts of the jungle showing in the open cages, and the familiar cry "Watch Your horses, here come the elephants—the calliope and the clowns, and the blaring brass bands "neverything." Will you ever forget it? You kids who have never grown up? Stores and factories were busy, and the kids they did a tidy business with those who fancied the mahogany and brass rail. Long to be remembered, Circus Day in Belleville was always a humdinger, unmarred by the grouches who always cried loud and long afterward that "it was the same old thing—only worse"—kickers, that's all—for the circus was one of the brightest days of the year, especially for the young gaffers, who held ten and twenty pin shows for weeks afterward and copied all the feature acts—in their own way, of course.

NO COLOUR LINE

Judge Tetreau, of Montreal, gave a Southern racing man a striking example of Canadian justice this week. The Southerner was fined $10 or a month in jail for striking a colored boy across the face with a horsewhip.

"You would have done the same thing yourself in my position," the Judge told the racing man, assuming that the boy had stolen $10 from him.

"I should say not. I would kill the kind," the Court replied. "I am here to see all persons in this country protected and I am here to punish anyone who is guilty of violence." No matter how a Negro might be treated in Kentucky, Judge Tetreau added, he is entitled to justice in Canada.

Beside the penalty of a fine or jail sentence, the accused was bound over in the sum of $500 to keep the peace.

The Montreal judge's attitude will have the hearty backing of the Canadian public. All men look alike to our Canadian judges. Canadian justice draws no color line. And this is as it should be. There is no sympathy in this land for a social system which makes certain sections of the human population to the status of mere animals.—Border Cities Star.

NEATNESS A COMMUNITY ASSET

"Here's a nice, clean-looking town," the visitor said, when he heard this expression when on a trip you pass through a bright, clean, good-looking town, where a man or woman sets a town might have, that do not look dirty and shabby. You go into the character of the town and the people as the fact that it is neat and clean as well kept. Cleanliness may or may not be all new, or of the latest style of architecture, but if they are well taken care of, and the streets are clean, the vacant lots are clear when reeds, weeds and stones in the grass, a good town in which to live. Such a town invites business and attracts people. People like to live where it is usually worth more. The secret of such a town is that the people have town pride or civic pride. No town can get along without it. Every town can have too much of it. — Powassan Outlook.

MAN RULES THE EARTH

We read in the first chapter of Genesis that man is given "dominion over the fish of the sea and over the fowl of the air and over the cattle and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth and yet not one of those forms of life that men rule has any dominion over known there is a depression, no, not even the ruler is the only being who is worried. Even the birds, beasts of the earth and fishes of the sea have problems to solve. No conductor did their very best to get the crowd in in time for the Great and Glittering Street Parade with all the beasts of the jungle showing in the open cages, and the familiar cry "Watch Your horses, here come the elephants—the calliope and the clowns, and the blaring brass bands "neverything." Will you ever forget it? You kids who have never grown up? Stores and factories were busy, and the kids they did a tidy business with those who fancied the mahogany and brass rail. NO CAUSE FOR ALARM

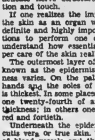
The great annual shuffle of school teachers is taking place. The judge by the number of advertisements of the agencies for teachers, it might be assumed that there will be a great shortage, and the number of replies received would be taken as no indication that there was a surplus. Quite large numbers are applying. Yet the whole business is not as alarming as either of these conditions might indicate. The fact is that many teachers desire a change. One young lady admitted quite frankly that she had answered 30 advertisements. Of course she was not get that number of offers, she explained, but she read the notices and choose the one that made the most favorable offer, and if she pursued that course 29 others at least would be disappointed. It is simply the annual shuffle. It is not a national pastime with the pedagogues. When it does come it is no sooner the school bell to ring there will be usual running to cover up the holes in the ranks. The trustees know this, and so do the teachers, and so there is no need for the rest of us to worry.—Alliston Herald.



BATHING SUITS

Recently the Spectator had occasion to condemn the bathing suits worn by girls attending public bathing parties on Hamilton's beaches. The attendance of hundreds of the male persuasion at these bathing parties is quite well policed down, was held to be objectionable and we note that the Beach constabulary has taken steps to put a stop to such stamping out the practice by summoning seven offenders to court. It is to be hoped that these test cases will be the last that will be required. Since the Spectator commented on the matter, it has received several letters on the subject. In one there was an attempt to make out a defence of the wearing of trunks alone, the therapeutic value of the sun's rays on the body being cited. That correspondent drew attention, too, to the fact that bus drivers and wrestlers appeared in public garbed only in gym trunks and asked why bathers should be discriminated against. The modern bathing suit offers more than a fair chance to the sun's healthful rays that this argument may be dismissed as worthless in the other direction. He argues that the old by-law, making it compulsory for bathers to be covered from the shoulders to the knees, be rigidly enforced, and the Spectator is no more in sympathy with him than with the chap who has the actinic ray complex. There is just a happy medium.—Hamilton Spectator.

SKIN IS MORE THAN A COVER IS AN ORGAN

Importance of Skin Indicated by Analysis

BY LOUISE E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

The skin is more than a protective covering for the body. It is really an organ with very definite and most important functions It is, in effect, the most important exercitory organ as are the lungs and the kidneys. Through its structures much water, and an amount of carbon dioxide and urea eliminated.

Besides being a principal organ of excretion it is likewise an organ of absorption and secretion. It also helps to regulate the heat of the body. It has glands which secrete and contain in its structure the delicate nerve structure of sensation and touch.

If one realizes the importance of the skin as an organ with certain definite and highly important functions to perform one can readily understand how essential the proper care of the skin really is.

Besides being an organ the skin is known as the epidermis. Its thickness varies from that of the hands and the soles of the feet it is thickest. In some cases it is about one twenty-fourth of an inch in thickness; in others one two-hundredth and fortieth.

Underneath the epidermis is the cutis or the true skin. The cutis is full of blood vessels and there is connective tissue which gives strength for elasticity or stretching purposes. In the true skin are to be found the tactile corpuscles, the nerve terminations which appreciate pressure impressions.

Hair and nails are growth from the epidermis. The hair is in a follicle or pit and extends down into the true skin. Connected with the bottom of the follicle which is often referred to as the "root" of the hair, there are small muscles of heavy cells. And connected with the glands of the skin are small muscles which, when it contracts, makes the skin appear roughened. Fortunately these muscles do not work, so to speak, in extreme states of fear, when the hair is said to actually stand "on end", as the saying goes, because of fear activity.

Hair keeps on growing unless the nourishment of the follicle ceases and the roots are said to be dead. The rate of hair growth averages about half an inch a month.

Sort of fat cells—the sebaceous glands—are found in the skin and the muscles mentioned above. Some are fairly large, especially around the nostrils. This is what gives the skin and especially the face a greasy appearance although it is the purpose of the lubricating secretion of these cells to keep the skin soft in the skin and to keep it soft and flexible.

The sweat glands are also located in the true skin. These are long tubular affairs with little coils at the lower ends. It is estimated that the entire surface of the skin contains about five million of these glands. They are most numerous in the skin of the palms, the soles of the feet, under the armpits and in the groin.

Through the sweat glands the body is continually exuding moisture in amounts varying with atmospheric conditions, exercise, amount of water drunk, etc. It is said about one quart of perspiration is produced in twenty-four hours. One of its chief values is that it cools the body as it evaporates from the skin surface. One can easily understand how important the skin is. Yet persons sometimes neglect it entirely and do not cognizant of the facts mentioned.

CARING FOR OWN

Organized labor has attacked the problem of caring for its own with courage and skill. Union men have shown a remarkable spirit of mutual helpfulness and sacrifice. At Philadelphia they have given from $5 for single men to $50 for those with families—a better record than the city administration has been able or willing to make. In addition to direct relief, the unions have helped the men find and pay bills and made loans to prevent foreclosures of mortgages. If they drop their relief work in the near future, it will not be for lack of need.—New York Times.

CHERBOURG, France, July 9.—(AP)—Strong currents and rising tide halted efforts to salvage the sunken French submarine Promethee three yesterday, and small harbor craft, unequipped for their heavy task, sought shelter in the harbor.

Today they will load chains and cables and heavy lines and steam out again to the spot, seven miles off Cape Levi, where the Promethee lies nearly 150 fathoms.

Dominions Should be Kept Out Of Irish Disputes is Belief And Advice of Rt. Hon. Thomas

Issue Not a Matter For Empire Conference He States

Valera Has Adopted More "Conciliatory" Tone to Question

London, July 9—The principle that the Anglo-Irish differences on the Irish Free State bill pending in the land sannities are a dispute which the Dominions have no concern and not a matter for the Imperial Conference, according to a letter was enunciated in the House of Commons today by Right Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary for Dominion Affairs.

Mr. Thomas was winding up the debate on the Government's measure empowering the collection of imports from the Irish Free State, by which the Government hopes to recoup the amounts lost by the Free State withholding £3,000,000 the calendar year. The bill was given third reading by 222 votes to 30, Conservatives and Liberals declared: "The one thing we have to avoid is dragging Dominions in the Irish question in which they are not affected."

Mr. Thomas declared.

He declared the British Government would not agree to the Free State Government, headed by President Eamon de Valera, repudiating the letter to submit the annulties to arbitration. The Irish Government refused and not by an international body as the Free State has so far demanded.

The government regarded the penalty of taking action against the Free State by imposts on her goods, the Minister said, warning that the bill was not a bluff, but the British Government hoped that by agreeing to an impire triumal the Free state would make it unnecessary for Britain to use the powers conferred by the present bill.

"BOY" CHIEF LULLED TURNS OUT TO BE GIRL

Windsor, Ont., July 8 (CP)—Police Chief James Marsh of Walkerville is a man of parts.

To his accredited list of fields of crime prevention and big game hunting he has added new laurels as a detective. Windsor police, while they give him credit for his accomplishments chide him for mistaking a lost two-year-old girl for a boy.

The child, Rose Medlar, lapsed into sleep under the spell of Chief Marsh's caption after other members of the Walkerville force had failed in vain to sooth it. But its restoration to its parents in Windsor was delayed on account of mistaken identity.

Windsor reported a missing two-year-old girl. Walkerville reported a found two-year-old boy. But it was two hours before the "boy" Chief Marsh had lulled to sleep was found to be the missing Rose.

The finding that President Zamon de Valera had adopted a "conciliatory" tone in the Irish Free State note to the latest note from the British Government, and the appointment of annuities by the Free State, which defaulted the semi-annuity payment due on June 30.

The Cabinet agreed to the principle of the new Irish note, which has not yet been despatched. It was understood, however, that Premier, maintains his attitude, that he is unable to agree to submission to arbitration by an; other than an open tribunal, not confined to persons selecting from within the Empire, as demanded by Britain.

Knocks and Boosts

We have not concerned with our old time readers in quite some time past. We scarcely picked an old Ontario fyle at random yesterday and sure enough it happened to be July of 1907, or exactly 25 years ago now. Baseball was not so hot in this community that season. It seems that Prince Edward County League had garnered all the good baseball players between Trenton and Montreal. They had but a four team league—Picton, Demorestville, Wellington and Bloomfield comprising the circuit in the league. Each team was allowed five "ringers" each game and had a merry battle was staged when the teams met and according to the press dispatches of those days, players were coming and going from the different teams each day. Some of the clubs went so far as to import players from the then Eastern League, now known as the International League. (There days are gone forever.)

We also ran across a story pertaining to the late Harry "Sam" Watkins who received an offer to play ball in Port Arthur that summer. "Sam" was a ball player of no mean ability holding down the third sack in big league manner. He reverted about the "real owner" in the balmy days of Vince Brennan, Dan Keeyes and Walt Grrow. Hi-ya Harry. Watkins made the usual promo sacrifice fighting with the Canadian troops at the Gallipoli peninsula.

The old Victoria roller rink was one of the feature places of amusement staged such added attractions as carnivals, races and other fun producers which went over in a big way then. Those were the happy days, eh-wot? A feller could get a "big one for a nickel".

Continentals Score 4—2 Win Over Millionaires in Snappy Game

Trenton, July 9 (Special)— The Continentals improved their position in the league by taking a fall out of the Millionaires here Friday night by a score of four to two.

The Millionaires are a team whose rating has steadily increased until now they rank with the leaders in the league. They have been dubbed the Millionnervors but the name should have been switched to Doc. Crowe's boys in last night's game. Brewer on third accounted for a number of them, while Barber on third for the Millionaires was equally as bad. Chambers starred for the Continentals at short. This is now his regular position but he filled Larry's shoes to overflowing by making three spectacular catches Lewis on the mound for the Millionaires failed to mesmerize up to the game, he pitched against the Shannonville lads a little wild. Sager in the box for the Continentals was good as usual getting a large share of the strikeouts. Ross Burtt, who has been engaged in every branch of sport here for the past twenty years is still at it, acting as backstop for the Millionaires and a good deal of the credit for the improvement of the team is due to Ross as he certainly steadies the boys down.

"YES, SIR," said Mr. Picobac, lighting his pipe. "Nine boys and seven girls."

He shook out the flame of his match with a twist of his wrist.

"It was hard work that killed off the pioneers," continued our philosopher of the Lake Erie tobacco belt. "Hard work and big families. But it killed them off tolerably slow. My grandmother died at 76, my grandfather at 94." Mr. Picobac chuckled. HOW TO TRAIN YOUR CHILD

BY

Constance Cameron

Privacy of Youngster's Mail

Not long ago a mother came to me for backing against an institution to which—reminded—old daughter had fanned. The mother was disappointed. Her opinions often are, in me.

"Sally says I have no right to open her letters," the mother announced indignantly. "How's that for the younger generation's attitude?"

"It's right for any generation, in my opinion," I replied. "I was brought up on a strict code of property rights, and letters were included."

To begin with, the fear indicated by the mother's words and expression showed a doubt in her own mind as to the efficacy of her training of the growing girl. Had she been sure of her contact with her daughter she would have been unwilling to worry about.

Youth, as I remember it and now observe it, fears nothing which is such as it fears ridicule. Letters friend from a boy or girl friend are apt to contain sentiments wholly innocent in the moral, yet signify to older people; and is a reasonable that youth should try to shield itself from the too-broadly laughter of Mother or Dad when they read those messages, which are so very serious, so very important to the young recipients.

Her Own Right

Personally I don't believe mother has any more right to open her youngster's mail than the child has to open hers. But a child is old enough to write and receive letters is old enough to know good from bad, old enough to make choices and decisions, and these choices will be either for good or bad, will be made somehow, somewhere, anyway whether or not the child has been received a key to the mail life.

Mothers magnify the significance of daughter's mood when she rebels at distributing her letters around the house. It is probably nothing sinister in the fact that daughter rushes to her room to devour her letter in private. If you care to, go to a school or parties, or to have companionship with her friends, you can't see why she won't know every word written to her, when you don't hear a big enough, very word that is said to her.

Rhymes of The Girl Guide Camp

Girls from Picton who are in camp at Consecon composed these verses and sang their first camp performance on stunt night. They are sung by families and friends who enjoyed:

Oh my sunburn, O my sunburn
How it stings!
But we all forget it, but we all forget it
When the dinner bell rings.
When the dinner bell rings.

Pack up your dishes in the old dish pan
And wash, wash wash.
Get your dishes all nice and bright and clean, too.
Soap and splash and swash.
What's the use of grumbling
And saying gee and gosh!
Pack all your dishes in your old dish pan
And wash, wash, wash.

The rain rained down from overhead
And fell upon the dust and said
"Now look you—you—you're mud!
Money can afford to talk because it is drawing interest.

Weddings

CALVER — STEVENSON

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon July 6th, at the home of the bride's mother, Kenmoden, Halloway, when their youngest daughter, Eva Maria, was married to Mr. Samuel Reid, son James Calver, youngest son of Mr. W. J. Calver, of Bath.

The marriage was performed by Rev. Mr. Clarke, of Shannonville, beneath an arch of flowers and ferns.

At 2.15 the bride entered the room with her father to the Wedding March played by Miss Helen Clarke, of Shannonville. The bride was gowned in white georgette crepe net, wearing a veil of tulle caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of lily-of-the-valley and maiden hair. The bridesmaid, Miss Stevenson, sister of the bride, wore a frock of cream lace over pink taffeta and carried American Beauty roses.

The groom was attended by Mr. Charles Young, of Bath.

During the signing of the register, Miss Sadie Van Camp, of Black-stock, very sweetly sang "Because."

A dainty buffet luncheon was served by the Misses Rena Clarke, Mabel Laycock, Leslie Jones and Mabel Hatfield.

The contrtd and good wishes of the bride and groom left on a motor trip to New York City from where they will sail on the S. S. Prince Henry to Bermuda. BON VOYAGE

Here's summer gently flooding all the sky
Let us depart, scarce knowing how nor why,
But driven forward as a ship is cast
Against high-flung waves—and last Found Land at last!
And in the wash and waste of untried seas,
Seek a near meaning for old Odysseys.

Oh! brave, adventurous morning spread your wings
Radiant sails and be tangled drift or things
Unconquered we, and chartless take control—
And fix each crumpled body with a soul!

KILLED BY CAVE-IN

Kirkland Lake, July 8—John S Gibson, a native of Cumberland County, was instantly killed while at work in the Lake Shore mine here. The accident was caused by a rock cave-in at the spot on which he was working.

By the time help reached him, he was dead.

Gibson was a timberman and was a single man of 28 years of age. During his stay and work in the mine he had made many friends.

The apples exported from the United State are worth almost as much as all the other fruit exports put together.

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Light Colored Frocks, Light Colored Make-up

Willing weather, Pavements thirstingly hot. Soda fountains surrounded with people lapping up cooling liquids. Pretty girl covers her little legs with cobweb silk, does her glorious frock, massages and powders her feet won't boil over—then lacquers her cheeks with rouge-pot and pigment that makes her look as if she were suffering from a temperature of 106. Is that sense?

To look cool and comfortable is the beauty bill's cry in mid-summer; every woman wants to make it. There is the frantic struggle with the heat that is reflected in sink and string. There is the session with the powder puff and cream two times a day. There is the furtive dab at the face with astringent that bedevs the brow. Why then set the face afire with splotches of pigment that make her look as if she were suffering from a temperature of 106. Is that sense?

To look cool and comfortable is the beauty bill's eye in mid-summer; every woman wants to make it. There is the frantic struggle with the heat that is reflected in sink and string. There is the session with the powder puff and cream two times a day. There is the furtive dab at the face with astringent that bedevs the brow. Why then set the face afire with splotches of pigment that makes her look as if she were suffering from a temperature of 106. Is that sense?

The complexion has its seasonable changes in the winter time it is qualified to carry more make-up than frocks and velvets and furs lend themselves in a kindly manner to the application of the deep-dyed variety. Skin is fairer in cold weather. When the direct rays of the sun are strewing freckles, laying on a film of tan, changing the color and character of the epidermis, conditions aren't right for high-powered complexion treatment.

Office improves the good complexion. It doesn't do so well by one that is the victim of the elements. That lovely chiffon frock of lace-blue—is delicate and delicious then —begs for faint wild rose rouge instead of raspberry of Chinese red. So do the cool shades—those palpitating greens, mauves, pinks. Cherry lips, cherry hair summer beauty by bringing them into proximity with drug store bloom! Have a heart!

She who paints her face—and what woman doesn't now—should belong to the school of realism. The purpose of make-up is to offer a helping hand to nature when nature has fallen down on the job or never did do the job properly. Alas, there are too many portrait artists who go in for futuristic work. They are the ones who are forever painting above the charm of personality. And that's a laughter. The observer is so fascinated by the reckless application of war paint that stitching charms go by the board. He is dazzled by orders how she goes it. And comes to the conclusion that she's not so smart.

Color harmony is one of the first rules of good looks. In the composition of the counterfeit complexion—powder, rouge, and lip stick in combination—consideration must be given to the color of the frock. Otherwise there's likely to be a chromatic war.

Think of a girl with bronzed hair cherry lips, carnation cheeks blazoned up in a red dress! Hurts you, doesn't it, to visualize it in your mind's eye? Well, imagine how such sights every day.

Well, it is the bad example that makes us think a bit and plan a reform movement.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

THE SCRAPPER

As a young fellow you were ready to fight at the drop of a hat.

You were scrappy and proud of it because you did not realize what cultured people think of the fighter who uses his fists.

In fact you were fond of saying that you could help it—temperhorn that way—and none could impose on you without getting a punch in the nose or some such statement.

It is also true that before you made a ferocious onslaught to smack the eye who had insulted you, you unconsciously measured the strength of the opponent whom you had sized up, but between the lines.

If he were a bigger fellow, you could exercise self-control, strange as it may seem.

So, when you look back you will find that you have always been able to control yourself when you thought the odds were against you.

Then you got older and yourself became you are a gentleman?

Why not be man enough to think that supremacy gained by physical prowess can take the place of results gained by mental and moral merit?

Brutes can win by brute force only.

Men and women talk things over and arrive at an understanding without bristling with anger.

Fashion Flashes

Crowned with flowers are many of the newest Summer hats. For instance, a white straw sailor with pale green in a capeline of black Milan lace with a tiny crown of flat green velvet gentians.

Another hat of the same pleasant drives which will be materially aided in the comfort afforded by the new spring dresses which are of natural linen with the palms lined with felt. Also, there is the matching gauntlet type.

Sleeveless frocks shine this year with knitted things so much used for town and country. Grand for the beach is a sleeveless frock and one-piece pyjamas with three-quarter length sleeves. Both are purled at the hips, giving the boat-like effect. Wide, flat shoulder straps are substitute.

The paisley motif is strong in printed circles through the medium of tri-color clothes. Grand for the country is a many striped wool skirt and sweater. The latter in combination—consideration must be given to the color of the frock. Otherwise there's likely to be a chromatic war.

Think of a girl with bronzed hair cherry lips, carnation cheeks blazoned up in a red dress! Hurts you, doesn't it, to visualize it in your mind's eye? Well, imagine how such sights every day.

Well, it is the bad example that makes us think a bit and plan a reform movement.

The Beauty Box

Once there was a little girl whose hands were the envy of her friends and whose finger nails were black like her father's. She died of a broken heart because nobody loved her. Too bad she didn't rush to the Beauty Box and get a bottle of peroxide, a jar of powdered pumice stone and an orange wood stick, with which to banish those darkened lines under the nail caves. Nevertheless, the pumice, form a cleaning paste, the stick does the work. Stagged cuticle is an enemy of pink finger tip sheaths. It must be softened with cuticle oil (cold cream will serve), detached from the nail by means of the orange wood stick and with the stick, snipped off with needle point scissors, the ends of which have been protected with nail caves.

Those small gaps between teeth, where they emerge from the gums, are where the wrecking crews of bacteria gather for their wretched work. Place the toothbrush with bristles pointing toward the gums, give the bristles a downward rolling movement and then brush from side to side. Special cleaning the surface of the dentine and keeping teeth healthy. Dental floss can be used, but it is necessary to manipulate it carefully so as not to cut into tissues.

Don't let your mind on the back of your neck, summer girl. That's where freckles collect and skin roughens. When cold-creaming the complexion slather the sweet smelling stuff on the back of the neck and shoulders. Just as well to keep the arms white. Time to do some winter comes and the lovely evening robe accentuates unfavorable defects.

Massage movements on the crepey neck anoint with heavy cream, stroke from collar bones to chin with flattened palms. Stroke from chin downwards using first one hand and then the other. Place finger and thumb on Adam's apple —which you haven't got—and sweep outward under the ears. Clasp hands back of head—more the head slowly up and down.

"What has become" of those hair rats we heard about a few years back? They haven't materialized. And for that let's shout hooray.

Every girl should be a water-baby drinking six or eight glasses a day. Through its refreshing qualities water helps to build energy. Lack of sufficient water has a bad effect upon the circulatory system, changing the proportions of the blood. The tissues of the face are partly water; they need it to be properly nourished and to keep from sinking into a state of flabbiness and inactivity. The morning facial tubbing of cold water plants roses in the cheeks and lends a sparkle to the eye. A beauty wet and reap the rich reward of the cleanly habit. Begin to cost a cent and works like magic.

Using the swimming season, wet and knock back pristine fairness. They get sunburned and tanned, collect a bathing suit tan. Others succeed on defects. A five minute massage with cocoanut oil will keep them in form. Rub vigorously with flattened fingers. Let the knees receive attention and the skin surface under the knees, at the back. This method is highly beneficial to little dearbearts who wear anklet socks.

Up to date beauty experts are tweezing eyebrows into natural lines again. Overplucking has ruined hundreds. Freaky eyebrows that rear up at one end or the other, that look like a hair caterpillar is still old stuff, though she sees plenty of them still along Fifth Avenue, U.S.A. ways. The off-the forehead coiffure that is becoming known as the regular hope-to-die eyebrows instead of those skinny little shadows that were all the rage.

To avoid bringing home a dingy complexion from the country, powder a face one doesn't recognize as one's own—the solid stuff—and use the best active. Apply a thin cream before powdering, use it when coming in after a swim. Powder "until" 500 miles. Road dust dries the skin! Sunlight burns it. Cream provides comfort and cutaneous consolation.

The smart hairdress remains passive. It clings closely to the head. It's not fussy, every hair must have its special place and stay there. Curls are all right, but they are diminishing.

PARLOR MEETING W. C. T. U.

A very interesting parlor meeting was held on Thursday last at Mrs. French, Thursday, with Mrs. O. S. Wright's group in charge.

The profusion of roses and other flowers added to the charm of the parlor where many were present and a delightful time was had by all. The guests were cordially received by Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Sharpe.

The Parlor Meeting superintendent, Mrs. Pearsall, occupied the chair and introduced the leader who came to all; she spoke of the splendid work accomplished by the W. C. T. U. and showed great interest in the temperance work in in evidence. Mrs. Pearsall also read a number of ladies most and much literest ing letters from friends.

Miss Helen Denike sang very sweetly "Dark Hour" and Miss Buckle delighted all with a reading by Dr. Drummond, "Little Dominique."

A charming duet, "Fairy Flower" was rendered by Mrs. Buckingham and Mrs. Pearsall, the latter also urging the ladies to help in the Fair Study.

The president, Mrs. Farnsworth, gave a very helpful and helpful address on "The Work of Women," she quoted Ann Anderson Parry in which she said that women's work is not magnificent workers who give unstintingly of themselves and who selfishly of time, money, effort and prayer of us.

"A nation cannot rise above the level of its women" she continued "this places on all women for we believe the duty of the drink evil rests with the home. Let us seek to create public sentiment against the drink in our homes, and in the community. This is beginning at the right end. Public opinion must precede every law enacted. "Drink" is a national vice, said Dr. Hincks, Principal of the Normal School, Toronto, who is now with the Ontario Educational Association.

The statement, "there always has been drinking and there always will be," is not accepted for the last century years has shown that real progress made against the organized and lawful traffic than in all the previous history of civilization. A dry U. S. would have been an impossibility a generation ago.

Prof. Irvine Fisher says: "The old idea of moderation has fled as a mist before the light of science, moderate drinking means moderate intoxication."

If a great army of total abstainers would give momentum to the push for a dry world.

The meeting was closed and a social time with dainty refreshments was enjoyed.

SOCIAL EVENING TO BID GOODBYE

Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Flatt Also Daughter Presented With Purse

Prior to leaving the Thomasburg circuit for their new field at Norham, Ont., Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Flatt and family were given a farewell which took the form of a social evening held at the Thomasburg Church Monday night and representative of the circuit. Fully one hundred were present and many more would have been at the gathering but for an inherent dislike of factory meeting of patrons of the Bethel appointment and many prayer Roalin appointment not having been in time to attend.

The event was a complete surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Flatt when they were called to the church and found so many friends gathered to say good-bye. Mr. Albert Beatty called the meeting to order and spoke briefly of the nature of the social evening and then called on Mr. Joe Chappell to read an address expressive of the esteem in which the pastor and his wife and daughter were held and regret at their departure, also on behalf of the people of Melburn Adams presented them with a purse of money amounting to nearly $30 which had been gathered that day.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Flatt replied in expressing thanks for the gift and appreciation of the day and every effort being made to make the day an enjoyable one.

HUCKLEBERRIES AT 30 CTS. QUART

Green Vegetables And Fruit Principal Items of Barter

Huckleberries made their first appearance on the market on Belleville market Saturday when they sold for 30c and 35c a quart. The market was largely attended by farmers and others who had evidently presented a very business like appearance during the many hours of the morning.

The price of eggs remained about the same as last week, 18c to 20c a dozen, while butter was a little lower, selling at from 22c to 24c a pound. Plenty of chickens were offered to the buyers, selling at prices that ran upward according to their size and weight. Small broilers sold at 30c to 35c per pound, while those of the first appearance selling $1, spices while one larger weighing nearly over 3 lbs. sold for $1.25. Plenty of home cooking was also offered for sale.

In the fruit market, cherries sold for 15c a berry pint, while the larger, sweeter black cherries sold for 20c a box. Black currants brought 15c a box, and sold for 25c a box. Small baskets of cherries sold for 10c and large baskets of currants sold at 10c box. Plenty of cut flowers were also in evidence and sold for the season's prevailing prices.

Green vegetables was the largest in some time. New beets, lettuce, asparagus, greens, cabbage and cauliflower sold for 5c bunch, while new potatoes brought from 40c to 50c peck. Green beans sold for 15c quart while shelled green beans were 25c a quart. Five young cauliflower sold from 30c to 35c each. Other seasonable vegetables were offered and soon disposed of.

LISTS CLOSED MORE STEADY

Packing Stocks Rose on Upturn of Hog Prices

New York, July 9—A ripple of buying in the packing stocks, evidently predicated on the sharp upturn in hog prices, was conspicuous in a placid stock market today, in which trading dwindled to around the lowest levels of the past eight years.

About the best that could be said for the market was that it showed no inclination to violate the cyclical low registered early in June. The list closed with a steady tone. The turnover for the two-hour session was around 250,000 shares.

Arthur of Delaware preferred pushed up 7 points to 30 on the list. Wilson preferred gained almost half as much and Cudahy common advanced a couple of points. American Sugar preferred scored a point.

American Telephone sagged about a point to a new low, in spousal to published unofficial reports that the Bell system lost more than 225,000 phones in June. The stock recovered partially. Coca Cola closed a point lower, after an extreme drop of 2.

U. S. Steel reported the large decline of 142,394 tons in its unfilled tonnage for June, which was about as the unexpected, in view of the extreme slump in the steel business.

Heavy selling renewed demand among cheaper golds and closed with a 3-cent gain. Vipond and Sylvanite also advanced but Sisco dipped another cent and Bankfield unchanged.

Sudbury diluted golds received comparatively little trading attention, Wright Hargreaves remaining the noticeable change with a small advance to $2.72.

YOUTH CLAIMS GIRL SLAIN ACCIDENTLY

Buffalo, N.Y., July 9— A young Italian girl died and her fiance was arrested on a charge of first degree murder today.

The girl, Louise Aquisto, 16, was shot through the heart early today and Ralph D'Avanzato, 18, was accused by police of the killing despite his statement that the shooting was accidental.

The shooting occurred in the home of Samuel Maida where Miss Aquisto was visiting. Police said D'Avanzato told them he was demonstrating a .32 calibre pistol to the girl. He said he believed the weapon was unloaded and pulled the trigger four times, then it suddenly discharged.

Depression Soon to Overtake Corn Borer by Placing 25,000 Parasites in Fields of District

Entomological Labratory Busy Placing These in Field

DEADLY FOE

Lay Eggs in Corn Borer and Eventually Eats Them

It will be a bad year for the corn borer.

It will be a year of dire portent for the fat, while destroyer of the succulent corn, which will soon grace the tables of homes throughout the land. In fact it will be about the worst season the worm ever had.

His size, in the shape of winged silies, gentlemen from the land of the lionally came, in a chance shipment of bronze army from the sunny slopes of southwestern France and the blue hills of Italy, have at last caught up to him and promise to give him the most thorough trouncing in his life. They will, in fact, exterminate him if they are given but half a chance. For be it known Madcrea Senilis, Eulophus Viridulus and Chelonus Annulipes not to mention six other varieties of the genus silies, whose names increase in length and complexity as they are enumerated, are deadly foes of the pest. The borer, who has installed himself heretofore so securely in Canadian corn fields. Like many other foreign specie of fish, plant and insect, which have been brought to this country in various ways only to prove themselves an ineradicable pest, the corn borer has proved such a foothold that nothing but heroic measures involving much time and great sums of money can do much with him. But at last some progress in his extermination is being made. With the aid of such parasites as the government can secure and liberate, local farmers themselves can do much towards stabilizing the menace, which hovers over their waving corn.

Place Eradicator Ant.

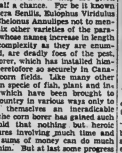
Throughout the past week men from the local entomological laboratory on Dundas street, the only one of its kind in Canada, have been working till midnight scurrying about the immediate country in cars, laden with weird looking tin cans wherein are housed the imported parasites, which have begun to grow and fill out, and along the bay shore, from Belleville to Trenton, to Carrying Prince, Hollowell, Bloomfield back to Belleville, Mr. A. B. Baird, chief of the local laboratory, has assumed charge of that section and is busily carrying the round cans of their precious freight, tabulating and checking new corn as he goes.

25,000 of Species.

Symbols of agricultural prosperity twenty-five thousand individuals of nine different species in each batch of parasites are arriving in the city from Arlington, Massachusetts, every few days. Arlington gets them from Japan, France, and other European countries, where they have been bred and captured. In their native state, they have specialized in the work of destroying the eggs and grub of the borer and they are now being turned to serious work of that nature in their new country. Without their aid in a very short time Canadian corn would be a thing of the past.

The method followed by the different varieties of the parasites, which have been liberated are very similar in each case. Hope of extinction of the magnet of the corn borer lies in the fact that each parasite will try to find this maggot and either lay their eggs directly in the body of the insect/ure grub or hatch them on the body. In time the eggs, which have been laid, will hatch and the tinier grubs eat the larger corn borer grubs. In the case of Eulophus Punctoria, when liberated it will seek the corn borer grub in the corn stalk and deposit its eggs inside the body of the grub. These eat the grub when they hatch and Madcrea Senilipes follows a little different procedure. It deposits the eggs on the corn borer, while Masicera Senilius, which resembles a housefly so much that it is with difficulty one can go told, unless a close examination of the hairs of the bristles on the back are observed, something which a housefly has not, hatch their eggs at the entrance to the hole in the corn made by the borer. The parasite grub when hatched, seeks the borer inside and slowly eats it up. Other varieties of parasites which are being liberated have their own peculiar methods of making it very unpleasant for the corn pest.

Parasite Is Cannibal.



The manner of liberating these parasites is simplicity itself. Packed in tin cans which resemble in size that is retained in their carrier until the parasites are liberated, the local men scout packing makes the creatures ready and less likely to use up nuisance energy. Liberated in the fields the warmth soon stimulates them and they immediately start feeding on moisture laden plants.

"Sometimes various farmers seem to think we are slighting them," declared Mr. Baird, "when we happen to pass their farms and unload a few cans of the parasites in the corn fields of the next farm. This is not the case. Farms vary and localities vary and the kind in the fields the warmth soon stimulates them and they immediately start feeding on moisture laden plants.

"Sometimes various farmers seem to think we are slighting them," declared Mr. Baird, "when we happen to pass their farms and unload a few cans of the parasites in the corn fields of the next farm. This is not the case. Farms vary and localities vary and the kind in the fields on one particular farm for the non-existence of the parasite. Very many factors have to be taken into consideration when we are liberating these insects. Many farms we can leave a great number, and on others, we have to take into consideration the lack of shelter and other factors and only place a minimum. Even if we don't come near the locality the insects we have let loose on the next corn miles away will find their way to the standing corn and multiply. The parasites which are sent at great expense and we will be the very fanciful of them."

Asked if some of the farmers, whose land he liberated on, had picked and commenced spreading flies from the can, ever objected owing to the fact that apparently most of the particular treatment, Mr. Baird stated that such seldom had he been asked not to put any on the land. "But often", he added, "when the flies have mistaken for corn thieves when we've been seen standing in the corn when it was being husked. But most of the farmers around here have come to know us now and they are grateful for what we can give them. Considerable progress has been made during the past season and greater progress than ever is expected during the present year.

All in all it seems that a depression is about to overtake the borer in Central Ontario.

ONLY SLIGHT DAMAGE DONE

Crop Prospects Better Than Year Ago is Forecast

Toronto, July 8 (CP)— "Crop prospects throughout Canada are uniformly better than a year ago, and so far only slight damage has been sustained by the prairie crops," says the monthly commercial letter of the Canadian Bank of Commerce issued today.

"Some manufacturers dependent on western trade are preparing somewhat higher production schedules. Wheat exports continue in substantial volume and railway loadings have increased. Some of the leading branches of manufacture show a decline but several factories have recently received fairly large orders."

The outstanding features of the past month, the letter says, have been an increase in construction operations and a limited amount what the level of employment, a greater volume of railway freight traffic, substantial exports of wheat and a sustained good outlook for the new crops.

"Against these favorable influences must be set a further decline in manufacturing, in some major industries to the lowest point in many years, and the blow which lumbering has received from the new American and Japanese tariffs.

"LIGHTHOUSE" COOPER LEADS

Strokes Treacherous Hunt Club Course For a 75

Ottawa Hunt Club, July 8— Breaking all treacherous Hunt Club links in 75 strokes, "Lighthorse" Harry Cooper maintained his lead in the Canadian Open Golf championship today. Only the fourth of the field of more than 100 finished today's 18-hole round, the Chicagoan was setting the pace as he did yesterday when he shoved the way with a course record equalling 66.

Dairy Second

Olin Dutra, Atlanta, Georgia, went into second place ahead of Von Elm with a 72 today, the latter, also with his 72 Thursday, gave as the 36 hole total of 146.

A brilliant round of 71 today shot "Sandy" Somerville, of London, Ontario, into third and sharing the amateurs. His total was 150, nine strokes better than Arthur Lynch.

Mortie Dutra popped up in third place ahead of Von Elm when he came in with a 72 today, three strokes better than his Thursday score. Ky Laffoon, of Memphis, Tenn., only three behind the leader, Cooper.

Ottawa Hunt Club, July 8—(CP) Lal Watrous, Birmingham, Mich., stole the lead in the Canadian Open golf tourney with a 71 today for the firs' 18 holes. He was leading Harry Cooper, Chicago by two strokes.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

It came in this afternoon looking kind of mussed up and with my nose kind of bluddy on account of the fight Elmo Grout having been having a fite and ma said she was going to tell pop when he came home.

With she did, and pop said, Well that's a serious matter unless he had due and sufficient provocation, what was it Elmo?

Well pop, I did that's just what I did, I said and ma said, What nonsense, pa knows we have. There's no such a thing as a cause for fighting, and pop said, Let him me never want him to fite.

Well pop, I had to be pacifistic to arbitrate, both men and women, for miles and miles, and Well, pop, G. winickers, do you know what I had the nerve to tell me, he had the nerve to tell me he didn't like your cuck you easy.

What, that cuck you easy, I popped Elmo, he couldent lick a postage stamp, I said, and he said, Well what if he could and I said, Well I'll bet you a dollar and he to say you're going to stand calmly and peacefully by and not a reason for allowing Benny to fite?

Well pop, we've all more or less influenced by the gentle influence of the survival of the fittest, and I'll be darned if I'm the only decent squirt being able to lick me, I said, and Well, pa, Benny should've arise, and I said, and ma said, You're perpetrating, and my finances analysis.

Well ma, do you know what else he had the nerve to say, he had the nerve to say Elmo's mother is younger than you, I said, and ma said, Why I'll all things, well now that really is perpetrating very sense of the word, Mrs. Cross is just one wrinkle after the other compared to me, why she shows her wrinkles when she takes her. Any boy stupid enough to make an ignorant remark like that deserves to be beaten, she said.

Why pa has a date, I'm the one that was beaten and put him per, being the eldest boy of the family.

Last of Three Alleged Gunming Comm'ts Suicide

TWO CAPTURED

Brothers Will Face Trial For Murder of Corp. Ralls

Kelvington, Sask., July 9—(CP) —Trapped in a relentless circle of armed constables and farmers, forming the strongest criminal-hunting force in the history of Saskatchewan, William Miller today himself to death near here late Friday, rather than be arrested and face trial with two companions for the murder of Corporal Leonard V. Ralls of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

A wound in Miller's ankle, when the body was found showed that a police bullet had found a mark during the furious gun-battle which preceded his suicide.

Miller died in the bushy, farm-dotted hills of central Saskatchewan, where for more than three days he has eluded a grim pursuit carried on by a determined police detail. Scores of farmers joined Mounted Police in the manhunt.

First of the trio alleged to have killed Ralls, on the highway, near Foam Lake, Sask., was captured Saturday. He was 17-year-old Mike Kuriuk, who surrendered when two policemen came upon him as he was bending over a haystack in a farmyard. The bandit trio had been seen by farmers scouting them to make better time at the pursuing posses drew closer.

Caught Asleep

Friday William Kuriuk, 30-year old brother of Mike, was arrested without struggle as he slept under a tree on a farm. He had been captured after a frantic flight with his two companions that started early Thursday morning on an automobile and ended after 48 hours of ceaseless scuttling through swampy lan-berland, without sleep.

With the Kuriuks brothers in custody, the posses threw all its resources Friday in the hunt for Miller, who is believed to be the most dangerous of the bandits. Several farmers sighted him as he sped across open patches in the bush. When they did Miller returned the shots from behind bushes and trees.

No one was injured during the nearly two-day gun battle with Miller, though the bullets rang on more than a dozen occasions. He reached the end of his trail late Friday.

Hidden in a wood near Warner Lake, 15 miles northeast of Kelvington, he was surrounded by the heavily-armed posse. Two more hours he kept up a running gun fight with his pursuers, and consented to surrender with bullets.

After a lull in the battle, a section of the posse charged the woods. They found Miller dead, a bullet from his own rifle in his body.

Reductions in Payments May Be Effected by United States To European Debtor Powers

Be on Individual Basis Subject to Congress Approval

WILLING TO PAY

Favorable Comment is Heard in Halls of Congress on Agreement

Washington, July 9—The United States stands ready to hear appeals from European powers for a reduction of the $11,000,000,000 they owe this country on loans during and immediately after the war.

Since Europe has agreed at Lausanne to cut Germany's reparations down to $750,000,000, the State Department said today the United States is willing to consider individual proposals for a revision of debts the fifteen nations which owe this country.

No promises to revise or cancel debts have been made by the United States. But the government has repeatedly stated in recent months that it would grant a rehearing to European debtors individually after they have agreed among themselves to settle reparations.

The United States has insisted it had no interest in reparations.

Until the Lausanne conference works out its agreement in detail and the full text is available to the State Department, Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State, and his associates will not be able to arrange plans for hearing appeals of the debtors.

Congress Approval Needed

Any change in the amount of war debt payments would have to be approved by Congress, which is on record against further reductions or cancellation. Both the House of Representatives and Senate look this position in approving the Hoover-Stimson plan for a one-year international debts.

Meanwhile, the Capitol Hill Representative Rainey, the Democratic leader, told the House the Lausanne agreement "would have a stimulating effect upon this country."

Senator Hiram Johnson, Republican, Wisconsin, said "The two great nations that exploited the peace agreement are to be congratulated."

Senator Borah said: "Germany is entitled to equality for Germany to recover industrially," he said.

Borah said: "These foreign governments are not shysters, they are going to pay their debts."

If remains to be seen how great a European powers will ask the United States to make in the war debts. Some economists predict the debtors will suggest a reduction of 80 per cent. which is approximately the same percentage just made in German reparations.

Others say the debtors will ask for 50 per cent. Chancellor von Papen would be offered slightly more than $1,000,000,000.

Three Powers Owe Most

Great Britain, France and Italy owe approximately 80 per cent. of the total debts due the government, the remainder being obligations of Belgium, Greece, Austria and other countries which fought on the Allied sides.

In its previous war debts negotiations the United States has dealt separately with each country and has made terms based on the economic conditions of the country entering into full consideration the ability to pay without too great hardship. The same principle of the plan again will be followed.

Washington officials prevailed in official circles that extended preliminary discussions would take place before any concrete proposals are submitted and that there is little likelihood of settlements until the short time before December 15, when the next payments are due on the United States fall due.

EXTENDS HAND OF GOODWILL

Edouard Herriot, France Makes Noble Gesture to Germany

Lausanne, Switzerland, July 9 — (CP) — Premier Herriot of France, the handclasp of friendship to Germany in the session of the Lausanne Conference Friday which adopted the conclusions dropping the reparations burdens.

Asking the powers to create the "spirit of Lausanne," Premier Edouard Herriot turned and pointed to the German delegation and added: "The French have listened with emotion to the story of the sufferings of the German people. In their name, we would like to establish relations.

"The Frenchman who is speaking to you is saying that we be united in common thought in those noblest of all causes, that of peace between nations." Chancellor von Papen said in German: "We are ready to cooperate."

Chancellor von Papen of Germany replied, proclaiming reparations dead issue.

Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the British Exchequer, said: "We are prepared to be associated in the work which should bring about a European peace," while Dino Grandi, Italian Foreign Minister, said the Lausanne conference represented political art of the highest order.

"I hope the abolition of economic barriers and the present political truce will lead to lasting relations," Chancelor von Papen said in German.

"The creditor powers made great sacrifices but Germany also assumed a great burden that means a great deal of capacity to make these sacrifices willingly in the interests of general reconstruction, and we are confident that a new era has dawned."

A Vacation for You

Lake Louise, Alberta, Canada

ARE you looking forward to the time when you will be able to lay down the tools of labour and enjoy a well-earned rest—a permanent vacation amid pleasant surroundings, free from worry or dependence on others?

This need not be an idle dream. It can be a reality for you as it will be for thousands who are "pensioning themselves" by means of Life Insurance Pension Policies, which provide for monthly payments to them at definite ages in addition to the insurance protection in case of early death.

We shall be pleased to send particulars of a pension policy for yourself entirely without obligation.

At age 25, for instance, it is necessary to save less than $6 per week to provide a pension of $25 per week for life at age 60. (This includes $10,000 life insurance protection.)

Just Recently Puts in Appearance in Th's District

Activities of the cedar beetle, which has made its appearance in Ontario during the past few years, seems to devastate large wooded areas of immature cedar trees, according to reports which have been issued by Mr. A. B. Baird, director of the local laboratory. Cool and cross-country during a recent interview on the subject, Mr. Baird said that members of trees have been reported in the Ottawa district and attacks of the beetle which steadily grows in numbers each year. Many districts readily observed. Cedar trees, which show dead and dying limbs, tipped with brown foliage, and the cedar are infested with the beetle, he said.

"Chop the dead trees down and burn them," advises Mr. Baird. "Burn all the slash and keep the fires burning until every bit of the dead limbs to collect near the trees. If you have a wonderful success.

"EMBERS OF LOVE"

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

COPYRIGHT 1931-BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

The motor started. They lurched off in the dust of the cold, wintry evening.

There was a time, much later, when Lily Lou was to love Paris. A Paris of lights and laughter, of tragedy and luxury. Paris, the cheetuna abolish'n the Bois, the French Premier dissolutions, with their idiotic manikins, their breath-taking display of models, the scent by the little perfume and jewelry shops on the Rue de Rivoli, the magazines where linen and lace were displayed in livelihess. A Paris of fades and parties, theatres and fashion and gay camaraderie on the left bank of the Seine.

But she did not love it now. The cold of a well-bundled child bit to the bone. The Grand Hotel Ortzy was an old-fashioned sort of place back of the Opera, with sagging floors, dingy corridors, bad hangings and vast, unclean beds.

"With bath" she read on the letter heads. But she never found the bath. Nobody could tell her where it was, or how much extra to pay for reservations for hot water. On the second day, however, she found a closet with a bathroom, she wandered from door to door and from floor to floor, and finally in the attic she found a door with no number. Inside she discovered a fat, bearded gentleman of large proportions, attired in a red flannel undershirt and sagging blue trousers, was sitting on the edge of a bed, eating bread and cheese.

He looked up sleepily, and slowly showed his teeth in a broad, welcoming smile.

Lily Lou banged the door shut and ran down seven stepping to beg his pardon, and fled down three flights of winding, narrow stairs to her own room.

At the table d'hote that evening she hardly dared look up from her plate. She was afraid of seeing the bearded man.

When Madame Nahlman arrived, not on Friday but on Monday, at the Ritz, Lily Lou moved over there, and had a cot in the dressing room adjoining Nahlman's bedroom.

At least it was warm there, and there was a bath. Suzanne Colin, the maid, bobbed in and out, silent and efficient. She was more company than Nahlman. Nahlman was always dressing to go out somewhere, and sometimes was already calling to see her. Men mostly. Men who wore striped trousers and high-tailed coats, and handed slick new gloves to Suzanne as they came in the door. But a few of the callers were woman. Tall, angular women mostly. Women with black governs, a great many pearls and diamonds, and immense opera cloaks.

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

After a week or two at the Ritz they moved to a large apartment on the Boulevard Hoursman, out near "The Arch of Triumph." Here Lily Lou had a small room of her own, and the use of the piano when Nahlman was not using it, which was not often.

It was a place of gilt, spindle legged furniture, pale murals, immense cut-glass chandeliers, and many servants. Lily Lou never got them quite straight, and Nahlman didn't even try to. She had invented them with the apartment. What little managing there was to be done by the rather silent Suzanne fell silent with Lily Lou and Nahlman, tempestuous with the servants. Lily Lou envied her her gift of languages.

"All Swiss speak many languages," Suzanne said. Lily Lou wished she had been born in Switzerland, instead of Nahlman. She knew now that Gwin had been right, her French was terrible. She couldn't understand the Parisians, and the French could not understand her. Nahlman, born in Philadelphia, educated in the public schools there some thirty-five years before, spoke French like a native.

There were times when Lily Lou thought wistfully of Gwin and Elaine and even Mrs. Manchester and Wanda Pillsbury and the artists.

None had bothered to write. Probably they cared not a thing about her, but now that they were distant they seemed nearer to her than Nahlman would ever bother to be.

She wouldn't let herself think of Woodlake and the folks and the old dog Shep.

Whenever she did she cried, and it upset Nahlman to see her red-eyed and depressed. If there was to be any temperament, any display of feeling, it was to be done by Nahlman herself. So Lily Lou mindful of her own good, kept her thoughts from home as much as she could, and put her whole heart into the tasks that Nahlman assigned her.

Nahlman was an inspired teacher. But abt was an indifferent and irregular one. Sometimes there was a two hour lesson every day for two days. Then not another for a week.

Somehow the days slipped by. Paris wakes early, and so did Lily Lou. There would be the rattle of the milk wagons and purchase carts over the cobbles, the shrill cries of the drivers. Bang, crash, bang, and a high pitched exchange of French greetings and curses. Then the screech of the iron shutters being raised across the way. The beginnings of traffic. The awful smell of strong coffee from the little grocery on the corner. Presently Lenoline would come with coffee and a hard little roll on a tray.

Practicing in half hour stretches. Reading. Studying. Bedtime again. The days slipped by.

She even got through Christmas, with Christmas letters from home, and a box of homemade fruit cake from her mother. She wried over that.

She learned to distinguish the servants. Leonline was the tall one with the fuzzy hair with the cockney accent. She brought the coffee every morning. Jean was the waiter. The gaunt, stooped man with the walrus whiskers was Le Chef. If he had another name it was never spoken. The servants spoke of him as Monsieur—Le Chef. Or, Monsieur le Chef.

She ought to go sightseeing. I certainly ought to see Paris." Lily Lou told herself, but she had no desire to go anywhere. She went on a few sightseeing tours, but did not enjoy them. Paris was terribly frightened her. She preferred to stay at home. She spent her mornings beginning to tire quickly now. She'd sit on the stone bench, sometimes starting at a painting, sometimes looking down at her own tired feet. Alexandra came to see her twice. I'd speculate about her —she said, briefly young Mrs. Proctor Sanders.

Something must have happened to Nahlman's opera plans. She told nothing about them. Came in one day with a tale of having signed up for concerts in Berlin.

Lily Lou worked with her. Playing accompaniments. Nahlman worked herself into a frenzy..... this wasn't right..... she couldn't get that note.....cursed crazy program.

But Lily Lou almost despaired, just listening to her. How would she ever sing the long program that was Nahlman's? How would she ever rise to her heights? And how would she ever perfect her language, to be able to sing in French, in Italian, in German, as Nahlman did.....

Then winked off to Vienna on a blustering March day when the sun shone palely, and the dirty winter's snow melted slowly on the shady sides of streets.

Vienna was thrilling from the first. There was the fun of sitting in a box at Nahlman's first concert, wearing a string of Nahlman's pearls and a Paris gown of dead white lace, a delayed Christmas present, and one of Nahlman's evening wraps, shawl-like, about her shoulders.

There was a supper at the apartment afterward, and a gay company of singers and artists who flattered her when she sang for them.

The next day Nahlman went off to Berlin, for what she said was to be a brief visit with friends. Susanna went with her. Lily Lou began to worry. She felt that the time was nearly installed that she had not asked Madame Nahlman about doctors, hospitals..... Suppose that when they were all away from her.....and she, not knowing any one, man.....

"It won't happen—not for weeks yet. I'm just being morbid. How Bess would laugh at me for being scared!" she thought, waking terrified and pain racked one windy March night.

She turned on all the lights for comfort. She walked out to the bell hall to look at the telephone. It was right there. She could call anyone. Except that nobody would understand her.

She waited another hour. Then sobbing, and half out of her mind with fear, she rang the bell for the servants.

Rang, and rang, and rang.... She could hear the bell echoing through the house.

Presently the door opened. She saw a little man in a nightshirt and peaked cap, and behind him a little group of huddled, fright ened women.

"Oh, help me! Help me" she cried, not caring, not knowing that they knew no English.

The frightened circle closed around her. The man with the nightshirt and peaked cap bent over her.

"A boy!" Nita Nahlman cried bending over the bed in which Lily Lou and the little sweaded red thing lay. "And what have you named it?"

Lily Lou shook her head. She couldn't talk. She didn't want to even try to talk again. Not even to tell Madame Nahlman to please not shake the bed. Every time motions touched the bed a pain shot up from her temples and out through the top of her head. But it was easier to bear it than to try to talk.

The nursing staff made clucking noises as she rocked the babe she had taken from Lily Lou's unresisting arms.

"He is a sweet, adorable, darling thing!" the furcosted prima donna crooned, leaning over the sister to get a better look.

Lily Lou shut her eyes. She was so tired.

When she opened them again Madame Nahlman was gone. The sweet faced night sister sat dozing by the window, her head sunk on her breast.

Lily Lou looked furtively by the bed. The baby. She hoped it wasn't in the room. When she saw it she wanted to cry, she couldn't remember why. So she closed her eyes again. It was better to sleep. Sleep, and forget.

They were always waking her. Always wanting to move her and straighten the sheets and plump the pillows. Always talking. And they couldn't do a thing without talking. Thick, fast talk. They were talking to her as though she couldn't understand a word—to each other—to the doctor—

There were two day sisters who came in and out, white-coffer and starched, and one night sister in glasses. And one was pale and did not wear glasses. The two things brought the baby to her. Lily Lou let it lie there in the crook of her arm, and kept her eyes shut. This, it seemed, was not pleasing to the night sister. She made clucking noises with her tongue, and talked at great length in German. Evidently all about the baby's charm.

The pale sister brought trays of food, and made clucking noises with her tongue also. Sometimes she became quite cross because Lily Lou wouldn't eat, and the world Nahlman was used to the accompaniment of a wagging forefinger. Professor seemed to be another name for Herr Doctor. Rather than risk the Professor's displeasure and further argument she always opened her mouth and swallowed what was offered. Then the sister would smile and nobody would bother her for a little while. It was so good to be let alone. They let her alone so seldom. Always the fussing of the sisters. Their guttural whispers.

Pain that gnawed so that she tossed and twisted in a frenzy of feverish discomfort. Then the sharp stab of a needle in the arm. Then sleep. Sleep that never lasted long enough. Sleep that began to close her lids before she wanted to wake. Sleep that cost out pain. Sleep that was forgetfulness.

Into her forgetfulness the doctor forced himself at intervals that had no time. Sometimes he was a dark silhouette against the sunshine of the window, and she knew it was day. Sometimes he was a shadow in the light of the lamp, and she knew that it was night.

"Don't you know me? Don't you remember what has happened?"

The doctor spoke English. Lily Lou wished that he did not. She always answered his questions as quickly as she could, so that he would go away again, and she could slip back to forgetfulness.

"Don't you know that you have a fine baby boy?"

Didn't she know? How could she forget? They wouldn't let her forget.....that night in the apartment.....one of the servants bringing in Herr Doctor Sanders, from across the street.

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 70

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

Meriem knew she had a chance to escape, if only she had cartridges for this empty revolver. A swift survey of the tent revealed a hide-covered box in one corner. She rummaged hastily through it but at first found only odds and ends of the Swede's belongings. Then at the very bottom, wrapped in musty paper, she came upon a little carton containing ammunition belonging to the weapon she had taken from Malthin.

Her search rewarded. Meriem turned to flee from the tent. Lying uppermost upon a little pile of newspaper clippings yellowed by age and handling, something arrested her attention as abruptly as though Pate itself had placed the thing before the girl's eyes. It was the photograph of a little girl. Meriem examined the string-tied packet curiously. Where had she seen that picture before? Suddenly it came to her.

This was a picture of herself as she had been years and years before. Where had it been taken? How came the Swede to have it? Why was it also reproduced in the old newspaper clipping attached to it? What was the story the faded type told? Absorbed in this puzzling reflection she was startled by a noise outside. Hastily slipping cartridges into the revolver and tucking the packet into her blouse, she crawled forth into the underbrush.

Staggering through the jungle, the once fastidious and handsome Morison Baynes doggedly made his way, followed by his native attendant. Though he did not know it, he had about reached the Swede's camp. His face and hands were badly scratched, his clothes were tattered and he almost fell from exhaustion, yet remorse for his scurvy act and an honorable desire to right the wrong done the woman he now knew he really loved, urged him on.

PICTON PLANS TAX RATE CUT

Annual Confederation Service at St. Mary Magdalene's

At the regular meeting of Picton Town Council, Mayor Geo. Welch expressed the hope that the town tax rate would be 2 mills lower this year than last. Council would strike the rate at its next meeting if expected, and he asked that all expenditure be kept to a minimum. On account of a smaller amount asked for by the County, about $2,000 less this year than last, the ex Town would have have a smaller amount to raise this fall, he said. Last year the tax rate was 33 mills. He did not know yet how much money the schools would require, but had asked for requisitions from the School Boards which would be filed before the next meeting.

The doors of the Old church on St. Mary Magdalene at Picton, erected in 1833, were opened on Sunday for the annual Confederation Service. There was a large congregation. The service was conducted by the Rector, Rev. Rural Dean Wilmer and the lessons were read by Rev. O. M. Scott, B.A., and Dr. W. H. Wilkins. The special preacher was the Rev. C. G. Wright, L. Th. Washington, July 11—Henry F. Stimson, Secretary of State told newspapermen today that no proposals have come from European powers for revision of war debts and said no representatives of the State Department had anything to do with the framing of the so-called "gentleman's agreement."

Winston Salem, N.C., July 11—The Twin City Sentinel today says it learns on good authority that the number of persons in Smith Reynolds' home at the time the young heir to huge millions was fatally shot last Wednesday was five instead of four.

Walker, a close friend of young Reynolds, was held in jail as a material witness while Mrs. Reynolds' body was under guard at Reynolda, the Reynolds' estate, a few miles from here.

Mrs. Reynolda, held as a material witness also, was released and questioned as yet.

SKIFF STRAYS

Fishermen and Others Bring Lost Parties To Safety

A thick blanket of heavy pea-soup fog which rolled in from the lake Sunday evening created dismay not only to motor traffic on the highways surrounding the city, but caused considerable consternation to a number of water craft which were on the bay when the veils of vapor blew up without warning.

Following on the heels of a strong west wind which whipped the waters of the Bay of Quinte into choppy whitecaps, and menaced the lighter craft which were abroad, came the fog to render visibility so poor that objects a few feet away appeared as vague blurs. Several boats were lost and wandered over the bay not knowing where they were. One party from Belleville in a motor boat remained out of the early part of the evening running in circles, unable to find their location. They were finally attracted by lights Mr. Harold Leggett, of Point Anne, driven by the lights in windows of his cottage to guide the lost boaters, and managed to land on their boat at Point Anne docks. Mr. Leggett drove the party back to Belleville late Sunday evening. Several other parties also lost out in Point Anne until the fog lifted. For some hours another man in a skiff was also lost and found himself when the fog lifted among fishermen surrounding a shoal in Mosaics Bay. He was given a low back to Belleville by a party of fishermen who noticed his plight. No accidents on the water were reported.

Gold Standard Best Mechanism to Create Trade Flow, Says World Bank

Switzerland, July 11.— (AP)— National Settlements today adopted a report to the Gold Standard as the best available mechanism and best suited to make trade."

Sweden and Japan, both of which left the gold standard today, also endorsed the resolution. These votes were regarded in informed quarters as an indication, that those countries will return to the Gold Standard.

Directors of the Bank for International Settlements declared that the "best available monetary mechanism a free flow of the world's trade."

The resolution asserted, that it is desirable to prepare measures necessary to re-establishment of the Gold Standard and that the Bank will act as a common agency in the task of monetary reconstruction which will begin at the propitious World Economic Conference to be held here at Session of Geneva.

"Realization of these measures," said the resolution, "depends largely upon the governments. Without that it is beyond the power of the Central Bank."

Bottles of Acids Hurled at Nazis at City of Dusseldorf

Berlin, July 11—Reports from the Provinces today showed that Sunday was one of the bloodiest days the nation has suffered since political clashes became commonplace a few months ago. Nine persons were killed and scores were seriously injured.

In one case it was even necessary to call out the Reichswehr to assist the police. This unusual measure was taken at Ohlau in Silesia where Adolph Hitler's National Socialist (so-call Republic) Reichsbanner members. Four dead and 21 more or less seriously wounded were left on the field of battle.

Similar serious clashes, in which Communist Reichsbanner members and Nazis participated, took place at Breslau, Hindenburg, Aachen, Bremen, Wismar, Witten and Kiel.

At Dusseldorf Communists hurled bottles of acid at Nazis, injuring four of them.

In view of the serious riots, Socialist party leaders requested Bavarian Premier Von Dayl, Minister of Interior, to confer with them tomorrow.

PARTRIDGE FOUND IN MOTOR CAR

Alleged cutting-in while driving on the Foxboro highway led to the arrest of Fred Hall of Hamilton on Saturday afternoon. Traffic Officer Frink while patrolling his beat of Highway No. 14 noticed a large car travelling at quite a rate of speed approaching him. The car used cutting in methods twice and later the officer stopped the daring motorist. Upon investigation the officer found a partridge, which had been shot recently, in the bonnet of the car. Officer Frink confiscated the bird. Mr. Hall will appear in the police court on Tuesday. He left immediately after receiving a summons for Kingston where he visited friends over the week end.

Richard "Dick" Philp, who sustained a fractured skull, when hit behind the right ear in a baseball game played on Saturday afternoon at the Fair Grounds, is reported by Dr. J. J. Robertson to be well on the way to recovery. Dick was rendered unconscious when hit and later rushed to the Belleville General Hospital. Upon X-raying the unfortunate boy's head it was found that a small fracture was in evidence at the base of the skull. On Monday evening "Dick" was reported to be in a much improved condition.

LIGHTS FOR TIME DARK ON SUNDAY

A failing limb which fell from a tree on Campbell Street and carried to earth a number of wires by Hydro Electric system, temporarily plunged some sections of the city into darkness Sunday evening until the emergency truck could be called out. Lights on Front Street as well as residential streets, were off for a short period.

NEW CHAIN STORE FOR BELLEVILLE

Belleville as a shopping centre is steadily increasing in importance with up-to-date stores and stocks, none finer in the province, where it is unnecessary and very foolish for any resident of this city or district to go afield for their purchases when they do as much better in Belleville. During the past few years many changes have taken place in the business section of Belleville, and a number of new enterprises started. The latest business enterprise to choose Belleville for an outlet is the Lipson organization which maintains stores in Brockville, Napanee, Picton, Trenton, and Gananoque. The Lipson stores carry a complete line of clothing and footwear for men, women and children, as well as house furnishings. It is understood that Lipson's will be open the latter part of this week.

W. K. Kerr, 266 Bleecker Ave., reported to the local police that burglars had been active in the rear of his residence on both Friday and Saturday nights of last week. Mr. Kerr told the police that the culprit had stolen some of his finest flowers on Friday night and then returned the following night to steal a large Hydrangea plant from his verandah. Constable Evans was detailed to investigate the case and found footprints of what appeared to be that of a woman's near the verandah. No arrests have been made to date but the local police are keeping a strict watch over this community for these dark thieves, who have been working nights of late.

REV. MR. WILLIAMS IS SPECIAL SPEAKER

The second anniversary of the erection of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Tabernacle in this city was celebrated on Sunday, when Rev. J. E. Williams, district superintendent of Central and Eastern Canada and vice-president of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Movement was the speaker at the evening service, his wife giving the morning address. Mr. Williams spoke from Revelations on Christ in relationship to the millenium and he contrasted the times of today with the literal reign of Christ. Mrs. Williams spoke from Exodus 14 and 15th verse basing her remarks on the words "go forward."

FREAK RAIN STORM DROPS OVER CITY

Belleville witnessed the strange spectacle Sunday evening of showers falling over the city in scattered patches only a few rods apart, with correspondingly scattered patches of dry streets and roads between them. In some cases the dividing line of the sprinkle was as sharp as if some shield had covered the section. On East Dundas Street it was particularly noticeable. Heavy clouds which rolled only a few hundred yards above the city were responsible for the freak downpour.

APPLE MAGGOT IS GETTING BUSY

Warnings issued from the Dominion Entomological Laboratory, on Dundas Street, to farmers of this section advise of the apple maggot which has made its appearance early this year. In some sections this grub threatens whole orchards unless means are taken for its extermination. "The best remedy is to spray the trees and keep spraying" declared Mr. A. B. Baird, chief of the local laboratory. "Various sprays have been made up for that special purpose and are guaranteed to check the apple maggot if applied in time." Various farmers have heeded the warnings and are now spraying all trees. For those who wish to mix their own spray or dust, there is plenty knowledge of various insect pests. Mr. Baird is happy to give advice from his office on Dundas Street.

FARMERS ROUSED BY STARLINGS

Farmers and gardeners in this section, incensed at the activities of starlings and blackbirds, who slash the rows of tender growing things in well kept gardens, maliciously destroying more than they eat, seek the extermination of every member of the birds which have become such a pest. Many fields of cherries are ruined. Peas, which have lately matured, are the chief attraction for the blackbirds, but the starling shows no decided preference for any particular plant and attacks them all with utmost impartiality. In some sections for yards and yards of worn fish netting have been used with success to protect the fruit. Strychnine, the cost is prohibitive for larger sections.

WEATHER COOL AND SHOWERY

Following Sunday's rain and the heavy fog the local temperature dropped considerably and Monday morning the mercury registered 78 high and 61 low, while on Monday evening a heavy rain fell but had not in but to 70 at noon. Exactly .30 inches of rainfall was registered on Sunday.

FEW VACANCIES YET TO BE FILLED

Increased interest being shown farm vacancies recently filled by the local employment agency has this week responsible for nearly all available positions being filled by a large number of local men who are still available for work. While the majority of the men who have registered for this work have been single men, a number of married men also have taken the opportunity such work offered to prepare themselves for the coming winter. Not only in the government employment agency here has there been registered and found work, but also in the relief office in the city hall the clerk has found positions for the men, who have come in. The prompt response has filled nearly all vacancies but a few still remain.

ALTAR FIRST THEN THRONE IN MAN'S LIFE

Orange Societies Hear Sermon at Christ Church

TRIBUTE TO ORDER

"To acknowledge the presence of God in his life and to prostrate himself before Heaven is the chief duty of man," declared the Rev. C. G. Wright, delivering the annual Orange sermon to the members of the Orange Order and the L.O.B.A. on Sunday morning at Christ Church. Welcoming the members he said it was particularly fitting that a member of the Church of England to welcome the descendants of those who founded the order which spread from the lives of devoted members of the old Church of Ireland. "You remember the symbols of four degrees and you can look around this church and you find them almost all here," he said.

Mr. Wright spoke of the sentiment of the Promised Land after the years of depression in the wilderness.

Depression in the days of Israel the minister called a period of preparation. Noting conditions today he said the days of unrestricted immigration have ended for ever for there are more people living here than there are jobs for in Canada.

"If you had a right to dictate the conditions of settlement what would they be"? asked the minister. "Some would say we will go and drive the Church of Rome off the map. But that is not the teachings of Orangism and that would be untrue to the principles of the Orange Order.

Tribute to Orange Order

Mr. Wright told of living in a parish controlled by Roman Catholics of French-Canadian birth at the time of the disturbances over the school question when Orangism was taking a prominent part in the debate. He continued: "I have been on one occasion saying that the Orange Order was wrong right in their agitation on the school question. I have come to get what is right from the government we will appeal to the members of the Orange Order to get our rights. That speaker recognized the Orange Order and claimed the rights of all with special privileges to none. He was a French-Canadian Roman Catholic."

"You cannot be true to the principles of the order and deny the right of liberty of conscience to any individual," the rector said.

One of the conditions of settlement must be positive not negative. "If the Orange Order means anything it means a group of people who are devoted churchmen because they have been on their knees before Almighty God on Sunday in their churches. They believe in the principles of God, they will succeed and their work will progress to the degree to which God is with them.

Remembering God

"I cannot see any greater opportunity to serve the Orange Order than by remembering God constantly. We are not here to hold a parade once a year, to meet in the lodgeroom to carry out the ritual but to serve God constantly.

"What is the watchword of your order? The altar and the throne. We heard a great deal about the throne, the empire, liberty, the right to worship God, we do not hear a great deal about the altar. It is the most prominent thing in church life because it represents what we offer God in prayer first. We must make God absolutely supreme in the community and in the membership. The Orangeman is called upon, secondly to loyalty. We believe we have under the British crown the greatest opportunity of serving God.

Kindliness, Truth

"The greatest argument for your order is kindliness to everybody, and truthfulness which characterizes the individual life. This was the basis of the conquest of the early church.

Mr. Wright saw signs of growing international kindliness in the wiping out of part of the Versailles treaty which was signed when feelings ran high. Present signs among the nations are most hopeful.

"Some people of this kind because they have no conviction. But Christians have to be kindly and earnest. Be sure of the claims of the order you are in and in the spirit go out into the world.

Rev. Canon Bedford, members of the two orders paraded to the war memorial and there deposited two wreaths, one from the L.O.L. and the other from the L.O.L., George A. Reid addressing the gathering after the laying of the flowers. Mr. Robert Ferguson was the wreath for the Orange Order and Mrs. Holt for the Benevolent Association.

Mr. C. Reid is master of the L.O.L. No. 774 and Mrs. Turner, president of the L.O.B.A.

CEREMONIAL AT OTTAWA

The Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir,—

I am sure your readers and especially ex-service men will be interested in the ceremonial that will take place at Government House Grounds on Sunday, July 24th, at 4 o'clock when His Excellency, the Governor General of Canada, will present to the Governor General's Footguards new colors. The Governor General's Footguards share with the Peterborough Rangers the distinction of the Senior Militia Unit, First Canadian Division, C.E.F., and plans have been made whereby all members of the Second Battalion are notified to take part in this ceremony at Ottawa. Arrangements have been made whereby the ex-members of the Second Battalion will march past the Governor General and on the Saturday from the various parts of the Empire, who will be attending the Imperial Conference and it is expected that all members of the "Iron Seconds" will do their utmost to attend. Civilian clothes with War Medals will be the dress and the parade will be commanded by Colonel L. T. McLaughlin, C.M.G., D.S.O. It is indeed a wonderful opportunity for the ex-members of this famous unit to "resurrect" themselves and to revive not only the old battalion spirit and discipline but old associations. It is suggested that those who can go to notify the undersigned immediately as that a nominal roll can be prepared in good time. 3 YOUNG MEN FACE CHARGES

Molestation of Two Persons in Automobile is Alleged

Charged with intent to rob and with assaulting one Vannickle with sickle of Brighton, George Jekinson, Albert Ethin and "Andy" Gray ranging in age from 18 to 22 years, were arrested by Provincial Constables Kelly and Campbell on Sunday night and arraigned in the police court here on Monday, held before Magistrate Mikel Monday morning.

It is alleged by the Provincial Police that the three young men, while walking on the highway west of Foxboro, came upon a parked car in which were Vannickle with a sickle and a young lady. It is also alleged by the police that the three youths approached the car and asked the driver for either his money or the young lady, that Mr. Vannickle then tried to fight his cigarette lighter so as to ascertain who the assailants were, but, it is said, the lighter was knocked from Vannickle's hand. Later both Vannickle and the young lady were ordered it is claimed from the car, that the three youths searched the latter searching Vannickle's person and it is alleged by the police that the latter had some money but took Vannickle's cigarettes and later told him and the young lady to get in the car and get out of that section of the country.

Description Given

Both Mr. Vannickle and his companion immediately notified the Provincial Police and offered clues of identification which resulted in the arrests on Sunday night and when arraigned in the police court Monday morning. Elvin asked the court for one week's enlargement. The prosecution then asked for a week's remand for the other youths charged and all three lads were remanded in custody, in the county jail for seven days.

Trowel Presented 48 Years Ago Returned To L.O.L. at Lodgeroom

Daughter of Late Sir Mackenzie Bowell Returns Emblem

USED AT FUNCTION

Wm. Craig, Master 48 Years Ago, Receives Trowel

A unique ceremony was performed at the United Church at Tweed on Sunday during the attendance at Deetna service by Tweed L.O.L. No. 747. A silver trowel which had been presented to Sir Mackenzie Bowell in 1884 following the laying of the corner stone of Lodgeroom Methodist Church was returned by Mr. S. Dunnon M.P. on behalf of Mrs. Evelyn Bowell McCarthy, 194 William Street, Belleville, daughter of the late Sir Mackenzie Bowell. The trowel was received on behalf of the Lodge room congregation by William Craig, Tweed and William Gordon, Lodge room, only surviving members of the Building Committee of 48 years ago and is to repose in the church where the Lodgeroom people worship, which at the present time is at Tweed United Church. Should they at anytime leave their own church the trowel will be placed in that church.

Story Told.

An interesting story as told by Mr. Tunmou: is connected with the original presentation of the trowel. Forty-eight years ago on July 12th an Orange celebration at Lodgeroom, an immense crowd in connection with the celebration was the laying of the corner stone of the a building, that was to serve the community as a place of worship and the members of the Orange order a place for their lodge meetings. Fifty-six years before this event a ten year old boy, who later became Sir Mackenzie Bowell came to Canada from England with his parents. They settled in the Lodgeroom district on a homestead, only a few miles north of the site of the present church.

History of Sir Mackenzie.

Later the family moved to Belleville. In the years which followed, Mackenzie Bowell was elected for North Hastings for the House of Commons and in 1884 was a member of Sir John A. MacDonald's cabinet, as the best minister of customs he ever had," to use Macdonald's own words. He was also Grand Master of the Grand Orange Lodge of British North America.

It was in 1884 that the event above described took place and Honorable Mackenzie Bowell was invited back to the home town to lay the corner stone of the present church. Sir Alfred Bowell presented to him and used on that occasion remained one of his most prized possessions. It has remained in the family since that time and through his thoughtful kindness of his daughter, Mrs. McCarthy, has returned to the Lodgeroom Orange members, who will undoubtedly cherish it in honor of one of its most distinguished sons, Sir Mackenzie Bowell. The inscription was "Presented to Hon. Mackenzie Bowell M.P. by W. G. M. by the Building Committee of the Lodgeroom Methodist Church on the occasion of his laying the corner stone of the same. "Hungerford 12th of July, 1884."

Same Master Receives.

An interesting coincidence in connection with the presentation is the fact that William Craig at present Worship Master of Lodge room L. O. L. 94 and he was 48 Years ago, the Master Tweed was originally presented to Honli Mackenzie Bowell. It was considered fitly appropriate that it should be handed to him on behalf of the Trustee Board of Tweed church.

The July meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Belcour, in the form of Grandmothers' Meeting. There was a large number present and the meeting opened with Opening Ode, followed by the Lord's Prayer, after which there was community singing, next the roll call, which was responded to by an "ancient experience or custom" of one hundred years ago. Then the business part of the meeting and another community song. A reading by Bessie Bleecker "When manners were Minded" and a piano solo by Mrs. Mills, also another reading by Marjorie Belcour "Cooking in Grandmother's Day" were well received. The meeting then closed with Mizpah, after which a dainty lunch was served.

OWNER SLEEPS HOUSE BURNS

Wife at Church, While Neighbors Carry Furniture to Safety

Rawdon, July 10 (Special) — A brick dwelling, situated on the 4th concession of Rawdon and owned by John Downs was completely destroyed by fire about 9.30 Sunday morning, all the contents being saved excepting the kitchen furniture and the clothing of the family. The loss is estimated at $3500 and it is understood in the neighborhood of $2,000 insurance was carried.

Mrs. Downs and her baby were at the time attending St. James Church in Sidney, while Mr. Downs was walking over his farm to see everything was in order. Becoming drowsy he lay down under a tree and fell asleep and awakened only to find his house in ruins. Arthur Morrison, a neighbor, noticed the blaze and rushed to the farm house but finding no one about raised the alarm and many neighbors came to the rescue. Not being able to find Mr. Downs they carried out all the furniture possible but were unable to save the structure. Mr. and Mrs. Downs are at present staying with Mr. and Mrs. Leo Farrell, with whom Mrs. Downs attended Church on Sunday.

CYCLONE HITS WESTERN PART

Trees Levelled and Tops of Barns Blown Off

Ridgetown, July 11—A cyclone taking a path of about 1,000 feet and covering a distance of more than six miles through the townships of Howard and Oxford, and passing about three miles northeast of Ridgetown, levelled buildings, crops and telephone poles in its path Sunday. Evidence of the force of the windstorm is first noticable at the junction of the sixth concession Howard and Erie Street, due north of Ridgetown, where trees were uprooted in numbers.

The storm seems to have reached its height when travelling over the farm buildings of William Cudmore and John Bowden. Arthur Cudmore and children were residing on the Cudmore farm at the Howard-Oxford townline where a solid brick house was wrecked and two barns and a silo were levelled to the ground.

Muriel Bowden, aged 11, who was seized with an attack of measles Saturday evening, was lying ill in bed upstairs, when plaster began to fall and the house seemed to waver. She jumped from her bed and ran to the porch of her home and had no sooner stepped out than the huge chimney of the house fell through the roof into her bend and then the entire second storey of the house collapsed. While narrowly escaping death, she was hit in the face by a falling brick a tree smashed against the window shattering the glass. Damage done on the Cudmore farm had its roof torn completely off and one side caved in. The Detroit-Buffalo telephone line, which carries some 60 wires was so crippled that communication east was cut off.

Life's Problem Often Unexpectedly Solved as Storm on Sea of Galilee

Many were favored Sunday by hearing again Rev. E. Leroy Rice, B.A., of Barrie, Ont., who is summering with his family on Wolfe Island.

In the morning he preached for his brother-in-law, Rev. Dr. R.-H. Bell, minister, of Bridge Street United Church and in the evening conducted the union service at the Tabernacle. His theme Sunday night was centred on the text, "There were other little ships" in the miracle story of the Saviour's calming of the storm on the sea of Galilee as described in the fourth chapter of St. Mark's Gospel.

From recent personal experiences Rev. Rice portrayed the scene vividly and noted that the Jewish disciples were easily perturbed by boisterous waves because they were unaccustomed to water conditions in contrast to modern Anglo-Saxons. "It is difficult," said Rev. Rice, "for even men of the cloth to accept the nature miracles of Jesus per as Drummond the practical theologian has proclaimed spiritual law is above all. Answered prayer may be the fulfilling of ordinary Divine plans and is instinct or intuition of the soul reaching upward "when in tune with the Infinite".

Mr. Rice pointed out that on the voyage of life amid its tempestuous experiences others have like problems and sorrows and sometimes do not realize that the sudden solution of troubles is brought about unknown to themselves because somebody like Jesus effected help through communion with the Omnipotent.

A deeply spiritual and searching discourse was enhanced by an address of the Bridge Street choir, entitled, "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me". Mr. Fred Symons contributed a fine baritone solo with Prof Hunt as accompanist.

8,000 ITEMS MAY BE PLACED ON FREE LIST

Preparation Has Been Going on For Some Time

LIST GUARDED

Would be Splendid Stroke to Put Across This List

Ottawa, July 11—Canada will meet the Imperial Economic Conference with a list of well over 8,000 items which is prepared to submit free of duty from Empire countries. It is felt in Government circles here that with such a list, this country will be in a position to make a substantial contribution to the efforts to lower the tariff barriers within the Empire.

Many weeks ago, manufacturers and other interests were asked to submit their needs in the matter of tariff protection against their British countries. These briefs came pouring in. It is understood and have been studied by a tariff committee headed by R. W. Breadner, Commissioner of Customs. The representations of the various interests have been carefully weighed as between what protection they asked and what they might be called upon to do without. As a result, a list has been prepared giving all the commodities which Canada would be prepared to admit free under British preference.

The list is a carefully guarded secret, but those who have seen it say that it contains many items which should have a far-reaching effect on Empire trade. Suggestions have been made in this direction, through newspaper editorials and other sources that under the existing Canadian tariff there are many instances where the actual British preferences which really do not mean much since when with the British preference the tariff barriers are sufficiently high to stop any commodity from coming into this country. It is said in some circles that this is one such criticism to a considerable extent by the list which is now before us which would be admitted without duties.

Meanwhile preparations to improve Canada's markets within the Empire are going on. The Dairy Agricultural Committee, under Hon. Robert Weir, will hold another meeting today. It has represented to it the views of sections of agriculture except the grain trade and flour, which comes under the Department of Trade and Commerce. Live cattle and bacon are two commodities which offer the greatest opportunities among those being considered by the committee.

Another important question to be dealt with will be Canadian flour, which will probably occupy much time at the conference as it will wheat. Word has been received that a delegation representing the British milling interests will be here as observers during the conference.

The so-called "observers" will comprise a numerous body. At a glance at the reservation lists at hotels would indicate that most of the larger companies in Canada will have men on the spot. Many have arrived in the country already to engage suites of rooms close to where the delegates will stay. There seems to be a general desire among the larger corporations to have their representatives within hailing distance.

The arrangements for the utilization of the main Parliament Building are also being completed progress. All the entrances to the building except the main portal, will be closed and admittance there will be by ticket according to present plans. The Parliamentary restaurant will be open for officials of the conference and so will the cafeteria.

$5,000 HEART BALM AWARD

Evangelist Faints and Suffers Injury on Hearing Verdict

Los Angeles, July 11—Fainting after she heard that a $5,000 verdict had been returned against her husband in Myrtle St. Pierre's breach of promise suit, Aimee Temple McPherson Hutton, the evangelist, toppled backward on the porch of her lodge Saturday night. Physicians said she received a concussion of the brain.

As Hutton and Roy Watsing, Angelus Temple radio announcer, hurried her after their arrival from Los Angeles with details of the jury's adverse action. The woman preacher swooned in their arms, swayed and, before her nurse could reach her, fell rigidly back, her head striking the cement floor of the verandah.

The jury Saturday awarded Miss St. Pierre $5,000 of the $300,000 she demanded from Hutton.

HEAD OF RAZOR COMPANY DIES

Invented Double-Edged Razor Blade and Made Millions

Los Angeles, July 11—King Camp Gillette, who perfected the double-edged razor blade, is dead at the age of 77.

The inventor and manufacturer succumbed Saturday after undergoing several operations during two years for an intestinal malady.

He came to California nearly twenty years ago from Boston, where he organized the Gillette Safety Razor Company in 1904.

Educated in Chicago, Mr. Gillette became a salesman and later Lorenzo branch manager for a bottle-stopper company. After inventing the thin, sharp blade to overcome the task of straight-edged shaving he spent several years to envolving a holder.

The razor was launched as a commercial product in 1902. Only fifty-one sets were sold that year, but annual sales of as many as 15,000,000 razors and 1,000,000,000 blades followed.

Mr. Gillette was born in Food Du Lac, Wis., on Jan. 5, 1855. His father, George Wilcott Gillette was an inventor before him. His mother wrote "The White House Cook Book."

TIRE MANUFACTURER CHAS. GOODRICH DIES

York, Me., July 11—Charles O. Goodrich, wealthy tire manufacturer and a member of the Maine House of Representatives, died at his home here yesterday. He was 60 years old.

His death was caused by hemorrhages from ulcers of the stomach from which he had suffered for two years. This spring he suffered a series of shocks which paralyzed his right side.

Goodrich was born in Akron, O., where his father B. F. Goodrich, founded the Goodrich Rubber Company. Following his graduation from Harvard in 1894 he became associated with the rubber company and continued to play an active part in its management until 1907.

LAUSANNE, OTTAWA NEXT

His Majesty King George will send a message to be read at the opening of the Imperial Conference next week.

Last week the conference at Lausanne made a momentous decision as to the reduction of reparations to one per cent of the original figure.

Next week begins a conference of delegates of an empire, whose people total one quarter of the inhabitants of the whole earth.

Everywhere the repercussion of Lausanne is ringing and all ears are trained towards Ottawa whence repercussions will be felt, it is confidently believed, which will have much to do with the uplifting of the world from the "blues."

The press has unfeasibly hailed the ending of the reparations as one of the most promising events since the war's end. The New York Times says, "When the full effects are realized in the United States, and when it is accepted here that, pending a readjustment of the war debts, the existing economic system must naturally be extended, the improvement in financial sentiment and business outlook cannot fail to be marked in this country also."

The result of Lausanne has been something for which Great Britain has been striving. Britain has by almost superhuman efforts begun to dig out of the slump and sees a way out for the rest of the world, but knows that the rest of the world must assist. France gives away a point. Germany early desired something of the kind achieved.

From Lausanne to Ottawa is likely to be another of the most progressive steps towards stabilisation of a world which has lost confidence.

BACK TO HORSE AND BUGGY

The Mail and Empire notes the congratulations which Middlesex County is showering upon itself because road costs are to be cut, thirty per cent since 1930, and diminished, as many farmers are going back to horse and buggy.

This policy is dictated by the need of economy and it will mean a saving on a road which is not entirely permanent. But if the policy spread to the highways, it would mean congestion, lack of speed, and immense reduction of provincial revenue. However this is not likely to become general because of the difficulty of horse travel on highways.

On county roads shrinkage of motor traffic would undoubtedly reduce the burden on roads but on the highways who would pay the bills if motorcars were dropped and the gas taxes failed to pour in?

The turn to the horse and buggy is undoubtedly but a momentary expedient, unless there is a swing away from the trend of the past two decades towards improved roads.

"FIVE CENTS A BOX"

One hears a lot these days about the bargains to be had on the central market and in the fruit and vegetable stores. It is human nature to shop around and, other considerations being equal, to buy at the cheapest quotation and the other expenses incidental to the placing of his crop on the market. Strawberries are cited as an example, and one may run through the entire list of fruits and vegetables and find that the margin the grower has a right to expect has disappeared, in almost every instance. The dictionary definition of bargain is: "An advantageous deal." Are these advantageous deals that city consumers are marketing, when such prices reduce the purchasing power of agriculturists to the vanishing point? Hamilton's retail stores are massacring largely depend on the trade of the surrounding countryside, and this city, in common with other urban centres, is suffering because the farming class has not the wherewithal with which to buy. If berries at 5 cents a box, green onions at three bunches for a dime, and potatoes at gift prices are keeping city clerks and bench workers out of employment, then they are no longer to be viewed as bargains and provide no reason for jubilation. There is another point which warrants reflection. Producers who were caught holding the bag this year reasonably may be expected to till a reduced acreage in 1933 and prices of a certainty will react to the curtailed supply.
—Hamilton Spectator.

CHANGEFUL LIFE

By Aline Michaelis

Life used to seem as tangible as stone,
A thing that dwelt in limits well-defined;
Adventuring, true; but somehow tried, and unknown,
And cast in certain bounds of soul and mind.
Some line would to the end be good, be
Some would be false, some brave, some weak, some wise;
Yet in each life one thread would carry through,
And each some pattern would of life devise.

I now find life a but a mood, a prayer,
A silver stream that glides through desert sands,
A sea-gull's wing that cleaves the empty air,
As echo of a voice from unknown lands.
In life are all the things that flee, that change;
I seize the instant at its too, grow strange.

MOOSENEE, away up on the rim of the world, back of sundown, and all that, is rapidly advancing to be known in the way and a position on the Front Pages of the nation's newspapers. Moosenee is the terminal for the extension of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway. Moosenee is situated on James Bay, which is an extension of Hudson Bay, that great inland sea which took its name from the noted explorer, Henry Hudson. Before the coming of the railway Moosenee was the Hudson Bay post, Moose Factory, where the mail arrived regularly at least twice a year, an occasional ship came up from England with supplies for Hudson Bay posts and to take back the accumulated fur pelts. Communication with Winnipeg and other points was by canoe and freight boats manned by crews of experienced voyageurs making the dangerous trip, braving the white water rapids, portaging around almost impossible rapids, portaging around death traps, performing incredible feats of strength and endurance and always happy, gathering each night around the campfire for the gay songs and stirring chants of the French Canuck, rowing, paddling, sailing, and poling freight boats up the rapids, incredible loads supported by tump line around the forehead —winning through after weeks of hardship. Now the Cree Indian, the Ojibway Indian who formerly had little to do but lay around the post when marketing their furs, now can gather at the railway stations and watch the trains come in and go out—can see the wonders of a cinema show, and buy pork and beans and eggs in a restaurant. Friday, July 8, at 10.15 a.m. Eastern Standard Time, the line will formally be declared open by Premier George S. Henry. Hon. Earl Lee Lasfford, Minister of Public Works in the Ontario Legislature at the time who turned the first sod for the Temiskaming and Northern Railway, will drive the first of the last three golden spikes, Hon. E. C. Drury, former Ontario Premier, will drive the second spike and Premier Henry will drive the third and last and declare the steel highway open from New York to Hudson Bay. Think of it, another stupendous achievement to the glory of Canada, the same Ontario that took mining prospectors into the greatest silver and gold mining camps in the world, Cobalt and Porcupine, enabling the Guggenheim's, Earls, Hammods, and other mining moguls to go to bed in their private cars in New York, Boston or Wall Street, awake for breakfast in Toronto, have lunch in Cobalt, and six o'clock dinner in Porcupine or Kirkland Lake—and among those present at Moosenee when the bigwigs will declare the line formally open will be George W. Lee, Chairman of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, who has been with the road since its early days when the view from the station platform at Cobalt was mostly rocks and looking hills, Pipe and Prestly's log store and postoffice and very little more. Chairman Lee has grown with the railway which is now operating and executive chief can look back with pride on the many obstacles surmounted and problems solved in pushing a railway through rock, forests, and clay belt of Northern Ontario, not the least difficulty being to span treacherous muskegs, which had a habit of swallowing locomotives and any other rolling stock, which chanced to attempt a crossing when the mud was in a melting mood. Millions of tons of rock and all kinds of metal junk were dumped into these sink holes before a safe bottom for the rails could be assured. Yes, Chairman George W. Lee will be there and will be able to look with pride on this great achievement in which his part has been a leading one.

SOME ENEMIES HELP

Franklin Roosevelt's enemies are in a fair way to elect him, even if they only keep it up. It is an old, old saying that you may know a man in politics by his enemies.- And the American people are the surer likely to elect Roosevelt since Tammany was against his nomination and now Wall Street is reported to be against his election. Utility stocks took a fine drop on Saturday, and the word went round that Roosevelt's nomination was a sure one, since Roosevelt has not been disciplined for his utterances towards American utilities and may make an issue of the whole question of the ownership, operation and control of power and utilities. From the utility stocks the fear of Roosevelt spread to the general list, and on the theory that Tammany generally, and particularly Wall Street did not like him. . . . And this is just "pie" for Roosevelt. When Tammany and Wall Street looked too good to be true.—Montreal Star.

CANADA'S FARTHEST SOUTH

It is not generally realized that the most southerly point in Canada is as far south as the southern boundary of California. This point is Pelee Island, in Lake Erie, situated about 45 miles southeast of the City of Windsor and about the same distance from Windsor, Ontario. The southern limits of Canada are further northward than that of the states of the United States and south of part of eight other states. Moreover, the greater part of Europe is north of Pelee Island "down south," to about the same latitude as Rome, Italy, and the northern fringe of Portugal.—Chinese Transcript.

RADIO PHILANTHROPY

Two Indian philanthropists have generously undertaken to establish a 200 radio receiving sets in villages throughout India, which will enable each listening-post to be a concrete structure with a loud speaker on the roof and with literature attention about it for a thousand persons. Besides entertainment, it will be used as to floods and famine and such important matters. The Viceroy approbates in question should be popular with the Indian people and their radio scheme may have the effect of diverting a certain amount of mass thought from trouble-making to pleasure-seeing. It is to be a famous idea.—Montreal Gazette.

RAIL VS ROAD

In view of the manner in which traffic laws are now enforced, it may not be without significance to note that there have just issued by the British Ministry of Transport, in which travel by rail is compared with travel by road, that while the Minister states, 6,501 people were killed in street accidents last year, and 302,178 injured. As against this, railway passengers were killed and 414 injured in accidents to trains, while 63 passengers were killed and 3,907 injured through such causes as failing at stations, falling out of carriages and jumping the line, the blame in the majority of cases being with the passengers themselves.

The inference is obvious. And in view of the fact that the percentages of street fatalities and accidents is far greater than the proposal of the population in Canada than in the United Kingdom, there is an equally obvious moral for us to draw. It had been shown that the law requires many of the motorists to come to a dead stop at all railway crossings but it is a curious fact that even though it is observed it is carefully as it ought to be. It would be equally easy to demonstrate that many of the motorists do not cut down very much more if other essential precautions are taken as observed more carefully.—Montreal Star.

"SLOW" SIGNS

Opinions of motorists is more or less divided as to the value of "slow" signs at street intersections. There are those who would have no signs whatever. They are the kind that would, if left to their own methods, drive ahead at the speed that suited their sweet will, regardless of danger to themselves or others. These motorists disregard even "stop" signs when there is no cross traffic in sight, and are a constant source of annoyance to others. There are other motorists who contend, however, that the "slow" signs are unnecessary and should be abolished as being a hindrance to the flow of traffic. They argue that the law calls for a slowing down to eight miles an hour at a crossing and therefore the signs are not needed. This argument has merit in it, but on the other hand the average motorists heed the eight-mile provision? There are numerous drivers who would not dream of slowing down to such a pace unless compelled to do so by traffic. But there are some drivers do slow down in the face of the "slow" signs. That fact is proof of the value of the signs. The "slow" warnings have made a remarkable difference at intersections on heights of Decarie boulevard.—Montreal Gazette.

WHY NOT USE PSYCHOLOGY TO GAIN JOY

Work Should be Studied in Relation to Psychology

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph. D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

Psychology is of course, the science of the mind. It studies the mind works and by means of it we learn what ordinary our minds and how to make our minds work at the pitch of greatest efficiency.

The world what psychologists are pleased to call "psychological" is, of course, a bigger and more powerful place than we ourselves are at times when we are protected. Then, too, we are educated and trained in order to compete on equal terms with other men and women that we may stand a fighting chance at least in harmonizing with this big world or be conquered in the struggle.

But despite the advantages in childhood training, many men sooner or later comes into conflict with reality and this conflict may be most important and vital.

Our primitive, instinctive desires urge us to do this or that, make a way for ourselves, to find expression, to entertain, to amuse and subsistance to our ideals. In some things we succeed; in others we fail.

Even success crowns our efforts we become bolder in trying to succeed again, but failure may also grow timid.

No one succeeds in everything, of course, nor fails in everything. Experience is the route to success and failures tend to counterbalance each other. And so by a "trial and error" method we learn to avoid obstacles and push ahead.

But this way is seldom appreciate is the overwhelming influence of the mind in helping this struggle to go ahead. We seldom pay much attention to the principles which underlie the mental mechanisms, the ways by which mistakes can be avoided and success gained.

But psychology, as I hinted above, is the science which has in a few decade ago identified facts concerning such matters were not known. In fact these facts were unknown to come into its own.

Psychology has become the science of self-mastery. It has become the science that means by which we can get the help we need, to overcome our problems, know what we are best fitted for, and the ultimate goal should be, etc.

Therefore, read psychology. Start with a simple text, then study the more intricate mental mechanisms as your interest grows. Psychology is not specially difficult, however, it is a science that requires energy it takes to learn the power that psychology has to master work, things can give you.

Psychology has no matter what you are, whether you have failed or succeeded, a knowledge of how your mind gratis has a practical, personal benefit to you.

Psychology must work in relation to psychology. Apply its principles to your own character traits, to your ambitions, to your failures, to your ideals. Let psychology help you in your relationships, in your social life. Let this science of thought aid you in solving your problems, in your business, in

"Peeney" Mills Had Two Hits in One Frame in 9—8 Win

Peterboro, July 9 (Special)—Crashing through with eight runs in the ninth inning, the fighting Belleville Nationals staged their way into a second place tie in the O.B.B., here by beating the Petes 9 to 8. It was a shocking upset to a huge crowd of fans, as the homesters were leading 5-1 going into the last frame, the only Belleville run being Alex Weir's homer.

Ninth Rally

After being held to two hits for eight innings, the Mats came to life in the last session. Cretney, first man up, got a single to left and went to third on Mills' hit to centre. An error by the pitcher sent him home, with Mills countering right after when Ellis' grounder went out and Morgan reached first. Mills, Fielder's choice, batted going to second.

Chambers drew a walk and Fisher singled to centre by Barriage, after Kitchen relieved Holmes on the mound and handed Weir a bad throw by Hollingsworth on Cretney's grave second. Three runs to take the lead. Scarlett countered on an error by Kitchen and Mills' single to centre sent Cretney home with the last one. Morris was thrown out trying to steal second.

Had Nationals Helpless

Outside of Cretney's single in the first and Weir's clean homer over the left field fence in the sixth, hit Ernie Holmes held the Nationals helpless till he weakened in the last ninnth. He struck out three and received fine support from his infield and outfield for eight innings, but faded fast in the ninth. Russ Kitchen was rushed in but was unable to stem the tide of base hits till it was too late.

Alex Weir went the route for Belleville, pitching nice ball all the way. He sent eight back on strikes and in spite of the thirteen hits allowed, kept them fairly well scattered. His support was good for the most part, and he handled six clean chances himself, with Morgan on short being the busiest infielder.

How Peterboro Scored

A hit batsman, Foley's single and Collins' double gave the Petes two in the first. Singles by Nichols and Foley with an out meant one more in the third, and they got their last two in the fourth when Dallin got one on a fielder's choice to score on Holmes' triple, the latter getting in later on an error. Hollingsworth singled in the sixth, Foley and Ash repeated in the seventh, Dallin and Hollingsworth hit safe ones in the eighth, and Carroll, a pinch hitter doubled in the ninth. All piling on the socks.

For the Belleville crew, Mills and Cretney clouted two hits each in five times up. Ehler, Barriage and Weir being the only others to hit safely, the latter's being the first for bagger. Foley, league leading hitter, was the only Pete with the willow, getting three singles in five trips. Ash, Nichols and Hollingsworth all had two safe blows. Holmes batted for Kitchen in the ninth, while Collins and Carroll had doubles, Scully on second for the loser, fielding a clean six times while Dallin and Weir both pulled off classy running catches.

Philip was hit nearly on the right ear and fell prostrate in the ground. He was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital, where he remained unconscious late Saturday night. Young Philip was in a rather bad condition but his physician was of the opinion that he should be able to leave the hospital in the course of a few days.

Muscle Strappings for Sagging Tissues

Has something happened to the oval facial contour, that soft padding over under the skin that makes for smoothness and contour? Have you of late begun to suspect that youthful firmness isn't quite all there? Is it possible that the complexion is not prospering, but has slumped in to a state of depression? If so, map out a campaign. Start a fight. Give Pepper Time the laugh.

Frown and hasten to wrinkles is but a step. The skin, having no rich firm cushion to rest upon, falls into fine accordian pleats. That condition must not come to pass or you'll be stealing money from yourself for facial treatments and magic oils, and you'll think about this matter with no ecstasy of spirit. If you think wrinkles are the badge of a woman can regard wrinkles with-out a kinship of the heart. She has to be a Spartan soul not to lift up her voice in protest and in charging.

Muscle strapping is a preventive measure against facial pullies. It can be administered by a strong armed, ruthless operator or it can be accomplished at home in lighter measures. Its purposes is to reenergize fibers and cells that have there's through carrying on, that it is time for them to retire from active service. Slapping and patting are rejuvenating treatments because they shake up the circulatory channels, rouse languid glands, assist the skin to throw off impurity and have no danger of making conditions worse if movements are quick and if they do not in any way produce folds in the skin.

Tuck the hair under a bandage of some kind to protect it. Spread the face, neck and neck a layer of heavy massage cream. If that cosmetic doesn't happen to be in the house, lift up toilet lanoline or cocoanut oil.

Start with a couple of good slaps on the chest, taking a deep breath and letting the hands meeting between the breasts. Slam away on up to the collar bone—this is good fun, really—then scurry to the sides of the neck and scamper up to the ears. A simple movement. Try it. The idea is to work on the large arteries, sending the blood in full currents up into the cheeks.

Don't be shy on cream. Give chest, neck and face a sound spanking, filling the finger tips, smack along up over the cheeks to the temples. Stop there and begin the circular finger movements—it's a camping ground for turkey tracks—then skip from eye corners to the center of the forehead, treating the forehead with alternating blows, first one group of fingers, then the other.

Lastly, go at the back of the neck. Two reasons for that. Vigorous slapping will keep the skin smooth and the stimulations of the large arteries will be beneficial to the health and tone of the glorious crown.

Wipe off the cream with a dry cloth, apply an ice cube, working from cube bones to forehead, law with which haze.

Weddings

NORMAN—ROBERTS

Toronto—Miss Gwen R. P. Robarts, youngest daughter of Rev. and Richard Roberts, and Mrs. Roberts, was married to Rev. Harold J. Norman, son of Rev. Dr. Daniel and Mrs. Norman of Nagano, Japan, in St. Sherbourne church, Saturday, at 3 p.m. Rev. Dr. Roberts, father of the bride, performed the ceremony and C. D. Atkinson, organist, played the wedding music. The bride was given in marriage by her mother, and was attended by her sister, Miss D. H. MacVicar, of Montreal. Dr. Fayne, B. Ayres, Toronto, was groomsman, Mr. E. Herbert Norman, brother of the bridegroom, Toronto. Rev. Howard Saul of Orangeville, and Rev. Robt. Hall, Belleville, the ushers.

The bride wore a gown of blue georgette made on classic lines, a large hat to match, and she carried a bouquet of mauve sweet peas, lady-slippers and roses. Miss Ruth Roberts, who entered with her brother, was in a costume of pale grey georgette with large hat and Mrs. MacVicar was in orchid georgette with hat to match and carried a bouquet of pink roses. On the Commodore's two years leave of absence Mr. and Mrs. Norman left by motor for Montreal, where they will sail for Japan about August 15, and will reside at Nagasana, Out-of-town guests present at the ceremony included—Mrs. Robert Hall, Mr. Francis Doxsee, of Belleville.

The Church of Hagia, Sophia in Constantinople and St. Mark's in Venice are examples of Byzantine architecture.

"Alice: Come Home. All Is FORGIVEN"

Few advertisements in your newspaper start that way. Yet most of them are just as personal, and almost as promising.

Manufacturers and merchants must know your needs and wants, or go out of business. They must know, for instance, that about the first of next month you'll be very much interested in a new hat, new dress, new shoes, or a new lamp, or new towels or many other articles, useful or ornamental besides the week-end prices on food products. They must foresee your wishes—and have what you'll want when you want it.

And they do—constantly striving to suit, at the lowest possible prices. Then telling you in advertising of the gifts they have brought from the corners of the earth, to please Your Royal Highness.

Read the advertisements in this paper. They are addressed to you—personally. They bring you news of better things to have and easier ways to live. Intimate news, of immediate interest.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

The Third Person

Don't ask a third person in your home to settle disputes that may arise.

It is embarrassing.

Especially between husband and wife, to whom the arguments on either side is unwise and makes trouble.

The guest who does this often finds the atmosphere growing colder.

If repeated, this taking the part of one or the other is sorely felt by the general loser or the one with whom the guest least often favors.

If a woman guest supports the opinions of her husband against his wife a more or less serious situation is brought about.

It does not require much to start an unfavorable situation in the home where a third person is responsible for its inception.

In the first place a guest should not be asked to settle a question between husband and wife.

In the next place, a wise guest will not be led into taking sides.

Some persons are naturally jealous and can't stand another's opinion put before them by either home head or wife.

Husband and wife should expect to stand together against the world.

That is a commendable sort of loyalty to have when a third person attempts to stand between them in any question.

Correct Manners

INTRODUCTION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I are having quite an argument as to how he should introduce our parents to our friends and strangers. His parents are dead.

He claims he cannot call my parents Father and Mother as they are dead. I have always told him that he is showing very poor manners, if he does not call my parents by them.

He said you would agree with him on this point, that he should introduce them as "in-laws" to let people know that he has them. J.

I do agree with your husband in that he should not be urged to use, in these circumstances, words that he does not feel, I wish, as I am sure that you do, that there were a word in the English tongue about his wish or use the words mother and father for your mother-in-law and father. But if he feels that "they are not mine" that is not what you desire is to it, until he changes his mind. I agree with you that it would be a most happy circumstance if he would feel that he could call them mother and father, but agree with you, dear friend, that tell using them is hypocrisy, poor manners for that it is "disrespectful" to them. These two words are very precious words and he shouldn't be forced to use them as we prefer not to use them for the personal choice.

Now what to do as the "next best thing" is the question. To me the word "in-law" is as it appears, a cold word. It is a cold bleak and unfriendly word. So we should not use it if we can . . . and such all we can.

The customary choice is the use of the words Mother and Father with the addition of the last name in front of them, as Mother Graham. Would your husband be willing to adopt this form of address with you in your girlhood days. In the words of our poet, Oliver Wendell Holmes:

"There is no friend like the old friend, who has shared our morning days.

No greeting like his welcome, no homage like his praise.

Proud is the gentlest sunflower, with gaudy crown of gold,

But friendship clings and breathing rose in every fold."

We felt we could not let this pass without public recognition from us, so:—

Now on this occasion

We have brought you today

A few cups and saucers

As dainty and say.

Just accept these few gifts

As a slight token we pray

Of the love and esteem

We shall bear you always.

Please kindly unwrap

And we will stand by,

And watch with delight

As each one you untie.

Now in future years,

As you and Sheldon drink tea,

Then a sip and remember us

Wherever you be.

OXYGEN KILLS COFFEE FLAVOUR

So We Removed All Oxygen

Here's what happens:

If there is air inside the tin or package or if air is allowed to get in—

Coffee loses flavour, deteriorates.

Exclusive Vita-Fresh Process Removes all Oxygen

Maxwell House Coffee is now packed so that all oxygen is completely taken out and kept out from the sealed tin. This new Vita-Fresh packing method is absolutely exclusive to Maxwell House Coffee.

So you can not only count on the famous quality of Dixie's far-famed blend. You can now be sure that this quality is preserved so as to guarantee richer flavour and smoothness always.

Today, tell your grocer to send a sealed and locked tin with the words "Vita-Fresh" stamped on it.

Air Inside the Package Kills Coffee Flavour

Loose or bag coffee loses 65 per cent. of its flavour in 9 days after roasting.

Vita-Fresh Maxwell House or cardboard carton loses 45 per cent. of its flavour in 9 days after roasting.

GIRL FRIENDS HONOR BRIDE OF THIS MONTH

Monday afternoon, July 4th., Mrs. Earl Snider entertained the girls of Glen and Bethel Communities and Sunday School teacher, Mrs. Cecil Ketcheson at her home, in honour of the bride-to-be, Miss Rita Stevenson. Mrs. Ketcheson called the gathering to order. While the guest of honor sat in a prettily decorated chair, the girls proceeded to present her with a shower of cups and saucers and singing "Wedding Bells."

Then Miss Edna Ketcheson read the following address after which Mrs. Snider served a very dainty luncheon.

Halloway, July 4, 1932

Dear Eva,—

We girls, your friends and former schoolmates have gathered here this afternoon to rejoice with you at this happy occasion in your life —your future marriage.

We have known you for many years and have grown to love you. We are well acquainted with your hobbies and musical talents. We will miss you very much, but we hope you will still see us occasionally as you visit your old home. We realize that it will not be as often as before. As Carrie Jacobs Bond expresses it in her poem:—

"I can't fancy that some folks you can't miss,

An easy thing 'tis' just miss a pile,

An' the folks that you can't miss all the time

Are the other folks—once in a while."

You are one of the ones we will only see once in a while, but with all the sincere friendship we have with you in your girlhood days. In the words of our poet, Oliver Wendell Holmes:

"There is no friend like the old friend, who has shared our morning days.

No greeting like his welcome, no homage like his praise.

Proud is the gentlest sunflower, with gaudy crown of gold,

But friendship clings and breathing rose in every fold."

We felt we could not let this pass without public recognition from us, so:—

Now on this occasion

We have brought you today

A few cups and saucers

As dainty and say.

Just accept these few gifts

As a slight token we pray

Of the love and esteem

We shall bear you always.

Please kindly unwrap

And we will stand by,

And watch with delight

As each one you untie.

Now in future years,

As you and Sheldon drink tea,

Then a sip and remember us

Wherever you be.

Signed: On behalf of your girl friends!—

SCREEN ATTRACTIONS

Present and Prospective

Previews and Reviews of Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres.

At The Belle

"SUNSHINE SUSIE" BOTH GAY AND ENTERTAINING

"When 'Sunshine Susie' comes your way go and see her. You can't help liking her!" That's the advice given by Norma Saunders, the screen critic of "Chatelaine," Canada's leading women's magazine, in a summary of the outstanding British pictures that are coming to Canadian theatres. Her article she says;

"The only one of these I have seen at the moment is 'Sunshine Susie', and without reservations of any kind, I can report this to be as gay and entertaining a film as has been released from any studio in the world. In previous years one has been inclined to say that a British picture was good—for a British picture. But 'Sunshine Susie' brings no apologies. It is just a swell picture, by our note in musical entertainment to the screen. When the picture was released in Boston the critics in all the papers acclaimed it as being far superior in the way of a musical picture to anything Hollywood has ever produced.

"It is difficult to decide just what factor makes this such a sparkling, scintillating piece of work —there are so many. The cast is a clever English one, with the exception of Renate Muller, a German star who plays the title role, an enchanting accent. Renate Muller is a great personal favorite of mine, and often played with her on the continent. To-day she has a far wider following in Europe than Dietrich. She is not strictly beautiful, but has all the delicious gaiety and charm that reaches out from the screen and envelops you in a sense of enjoying life with her.

"Hartley Power has a comedian's role as the janitor who conducts the Musical Hall, and Jack Hulbert is the bank director. Jack Hulbert has an original style of acting and humor that is impossible to resist.

"The story is laid in Vienna and concerns a girl who, when she comes to find a job; who uses all her charms to get by the janitor, clerk and janitor—Jack Hulbert—and who finally marries the bank director, Owen Nares. The plot is the ageless Cinderella theme, but Victor Saville has treated it so with swiftness, grace and humor, the music is catchy and delightful, the character acting is remarkable; the scenes in the Musical Hall have a spontaneity that no other film has achieved."

Manager Fitzgerald of the Belle announces the return of "Sunshine Susie", beginning Wednesday matinee daily, with a selected program of supporting and entertaining feature. Each lady attending the Belle Wednesday matinee will receive a free ticket to a beautiful Rose Dressersware gift.

Double Bill Tonight

Joan Blondell, Stuart Erwin, Zasu Pitts and Ben Turpin are appearing in "Make Me a Star", Harry Leon Wilson's clever and amusing story of Hollywood, which will be shown tonight and Tuesday at the Capitol. Brown Pete in "Alias the Bad Man" Tom Howard in a funny comedy and Fox Movietone complete the program, which are being exhibited for the last time tonight.

At The Capitol

"THE FINAL EDITION" NOW DINNERWARE GIFT TONIGHT

The perils and dangers run by a girl reporter to get a "scoop" and capture a murderer before the police even suspect her who is make thrilling, exciting and fast moving entertainment in "The Final Edition" which will open today at the Capitol Theatre.

Pat O'Brien and Mae Clarke, who had Fourth Estate adventures together in "Front Page" fame again teamed in "The Final Edition" written by Roy Chanslor, adapted and dialogued by Dorothy Howell and directed by Howard Higgin. O'Brien plays the city editor whose fires Anne Woodman, played by Mae Clarke, and she accuses him of being mean enough to do it because she had refused to marry him.

Just to plain thrill and prove she is a good reporter, she goes out and gets on the track of an exclusive angle on a story that is concerned with the trial for the murder of the police commissioner. How she follows through on her hunch, trails the murderer, gains friends with him, steals evidence against him, and then, with victory within her grasp, finally betrays herself into his hands and is thrown over the boss, ruler of the metropolitan underworld, make "The Final Edition" an exciting situation after another and one of the best of recent films.

There is plenty of comedy and action. Getting onto the street as a result of her exploits, the cadre of a skilful organization, yet is every detail of its making there in this film, from setting the story and writing it, to getting it set in type and printed. Performances are all convincing, there is another story that never gets dull and "Behind the Scenes in 'The Final Edition'" shows details of a murder hunt that never reached print and that will be a revelation to anyone who would have been otherwise unaware.

Pat O'Brien is breezy, vital and fascinating as the city editor. Mae Clarke's poise, skill and charm are in excellent advantage as the sob sister who didn't stop at danger to herself to get her story. Bradley Page, Frank Gross, Edmund Wallace, James Donlan, Phil Tead, Wallace Clark and Barbara Weeks add to the picture's entertainment value with excellent characterizations.

Dinnerware Gift

Tonight ladies are advised to be early to secure the beautiful gift of Wedgewood Richelieu Dinnerware to be given away at the Capitol to each lady patron.

Coming

"Attorney For the Defense," a tremendous drama starring Edmund Lowe arrives at the Capitol on Wednesday (Dinnerware Gift Night).

"Strictly Dynamite" with Wheeler and Woolsey, claimed as the funniest musical comedy of the year, is heralded for showing on Friday and Saturday.

The University of New Hampshire reports that fraternities seeking low-cost meals are returning to such pioneer dishes as chowder, boosting dishes and apple pan dowdy.

GIRLS ARE HELD FOR ANOTHER WEEK

Irma Wright alias Marie Bellanger and Dorothy Smith, both girls, who have been in custody for the past two weeks in the county jail appeared before Magistrate Mikel on Monday morning on a charge of vagrancy. The local police have been in communication with the Windsor authorities, where the young girls said they had previously lived and no record could be found of their living in that city. The court thought it advisable to hold the girls as they are but 17 years of age and are alleged to have been living with the hoboes in various "jungles" about the province. The Wright girl was given a position in a local home but ran away after staying but two days.

CONFIDENCE

For some one, every day, the biggest news is not on the front page. It's not even in the news columns.

There may be an earthquake in Italy or a revolution in Central America. There may be a hot election campaign or a million-dollar fire or a metropolitan crime wave. But for Jim Jones, who has decided to buy a new sedan, and for Mrs. Thompson, who needs some schooldresses for little Mary Lou, the big news of the day is in the advertisements.

Even the doings of Parliament and the baseball results pale into insignificance beside the news of something you really want.

The advertising columns bring you, each day, sound information about quality, style and price. They announce new products and new developments that save time, trouble or expense for millions of people. They point out healthful habits of eating, sleeping, exercising.

Consistently advertised goods are safe goods to buy. Behind them stand the manufacturer and the merchant, guaranteeing their uniform quality. Read the advertisements before you buy.

Governor James McNeil Of Irish Free State Asks Apology or Dismissal

Three Day Ultimatum Given After Letter is Received

BLUNTLY REJECTED

De Valera Orders McNeil Not to Publish Letters in Case

Dublin, July 11.—His Excellency James McNeil, Governor-General of the Irish Free State, Sunday demanded an apology from ministers of President Eamonn de Valera's government or else his own removal from office, as a consequence of what he regarded as a series of insults by the Republican cabinet ministers.

Mr. McNeil, who has been Governor-General of the Free State since 1927, furthermore made public some of the letters between himself and President de Valera on this subject, one of which was an instruction from the executive council not to publish the correspondence.

"It must surely be evident," said a letter from the Governor-General to Mr. de Valera, "that you and the executive council are the only people in Ireland who think the course you suggest is an honorable one." This was in reply to the formal advice of the executive correspondence public.

The incidents which Mr. McNeill so deeply protests began last May when five members of the Irish Free State cabinet ostentatiously left a party at the French legation on the arrival of Mr. McNeil, and continued through to the funeral in connection with the Eucharistic Congress last month.

The first of the letters exchanged in regard to the alleged affronts was from President de Valera on May 27. Commenting on the affair at the French legation, he said: "I am sure that this is unfortunate and regrettable and should not have been permitted to occur," but added that "more than this, I am unable to go."

"You have made it necessary," the Governor-General wrote on this occasion, "for me to explain to my countrymen that without any change of principle I have not suddenly become a creature of the executive, the mistress of an honorable office."

This letter warned that if an apology was not forthcoming within three days from Mr. de Valera and the ministers who behaved with the greatest discourtesy," then he would publish the correspondence.

President de Valera replied to this with the statement, "I hereby convey to Your Excellency the formal advice and direction of the executive council not to publish the letters in question."

Mr. McNeil answered, "It must surely be evident that you and your executive council are the only people in Ireland who think the course you suggest is a honorable one. I think that only you and your council will be surprised at my decision to have no apology made to me as an alternative to my removal from office."

With the publication tonight of the letter demanding an apology or his removal from office, Governor-General McNeill defied the order of the Free State executive council in publishing the series of previous letters between himself and President de Valera on its subject.

Irish newspapers were forbidden by de Valera to publish the letters on the ground they were confidential state documents. The President said that publication of the letters would be deals under the "Official Secrets Act."

Meanwhile Irish exporters are rushing huge consignments of cattle to Britain and Northern Ireland before any high large quantities of butter one week large in view of the imminence of new British tariffs against Free State goods.

The British government has been empowered by the House of Commons to levy special duties up to 100 per cent. ad valorem, by which means it will recoup itself for the loss by the Free State's default of the land annuity, which amounts to £2,000,000 for the calendar year. Irish farmers view the situation with dismay. They are already far from prosperous, their fairs and markets having practically dwindled away, and cattle prices having slumped alarmingly.

NO CHANGE IN U. S. WAR DEBT STAND

Washington, July 9 (AP) — The State Department said in a statement today there was no change in the attitude of the United States Government on the question of war debts from the views outlined by President Hoover last June when he said he did not approve cancellation, but that further temporary adjustments would be necessary.

OVERTURE ON DEAL IS MADE

But Province and Bond Holders Fail to Agree on Price

Toronto, July 11.—Canyon Power negotiations were resuming in summer. Hon. George S. Henry Sunday night stated that his representatives had been busily in touch with leading representatives of the holders of defaulted bonds of the Ontario Power Service Corporation, but that as yet there was nothing to report. Enquiries from other sources that no agreement had yet been reached as to what would be considered by both sides an "equitable basis" for the province to acquire the enterprise. The bondholders may entertain an entirely different idea from that of the government, in regard to what they should receive for their investment.

It is known that the bondholders have received two offers already to finance the completion of the Abitibi Canyon power plant, without the government participating at all. One of these offers, namely, that of Nesbitt, Thomson and Company, was laid before the government by Mr. Nesbitt, but Premier Henry signified his disapproval on the ground that the province itself had "more reliance and completing the project as private enterprise.

Second Offer Made.

Since that time, another offer has been made, upon terms which are stated to be unexpectedly generous. This offer, it is said, will also be laid before the Government, since the individuals behind the new offer are the same position as did Mr. Nesbitt, namely, that they would be unwilling to put money in without the approval of the government.

The proposition is that the answer will be the same as it was to Mr. Nesbitt, but it is common gossip that the bondholders are stiffening their backs against any effort on the part of the government to beat down to a very low level the value of the bonds in the process of determining "an equitable basis."

It is also likely that the bondholders will refuse to give up hope of financing and retaining the property themselves as a private enterprise, without the most explicit written refusal of the government to their plans of financing.

From all current gossip over the week-end, an agreement between the bondholders and the government is not in sight, and may not be for many days.

U. S. A. Congress Not in Favor of Debts Revision As Passed at Lausanne

Wants to Know Who Told Europe, Washington Might Reduce

HITLER REPUDIATES

Treaty as Agreed Upon Has Been Signed by Powers

Washington, July 11.—Agreement among European powers to pare Germany's reparations payment to $173,500,000 has not lessened the hostility of the United States Congress toward cancellation or further reduction of war debts owed the United States.

The row which flared up Saturday in the Senate over published reports that the State Department is willing to hear proposals from European countries for debt revision promises to continue tomorrow, when the resolution of Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, asking for information about the department's attitude is to be considered. This, despite a statement from Acting Secretary Castle of the State Department that there had been no chance in the Administration's views.

The resolution declares that Congress alone has authority to act on debt curtailment and Republican Senators joined with Democrats in denouncing any further cut.

Might Accept Colonies.

Senator Gore, Democrat, Oklahoma, also presented a resolution requesting Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State, to ascertain if any debtor nations wish to pay their obligations to this country by transferring their colonies.

Acting-Secretary Castle issued a statement yesterday, asserting the State Department's pleasure over the Lausanne reparations agreement, as one which should do much to better economic conditions in Europe. He held, however, that the government's position on war debts is exactly the same as when President Hoover, last year, declared his position on reparations and war debts in announcing the one-year moratorium.

The Bank for International Settlements, as trustee of the German bond issue of $3,000,000,000 gold marks (approximately $714,000,000), which is the kernel of the settlement, is proceeding as if a "gentlemen's agreement" which technically might cause reversion to the Young Plan, existed.

"The gentlemen's agreement means nothing," said one authority. "The Young plan is dead and Europe must act on the assumption. Canada and ratified the Hoover moratorium (which suspended reparations and war-debt payments for one year) but it was nevertheless executed faithfully."

There was nothing in the reparation agreement itself, which was initialled yesterday by delegates of the leading powers at Lausanne, about a "gentlemen's agreement" linking reparations with war debts.

The Hague does not go into effect, however, until it is ratified by the Parliaments of the initialling countries — Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Belgium and Japan —which by an unwritten agreement will not take place until after the United States reconsiders the question of scaling down the war debts due her from Europe.

Officials were reticient to discuss the "gentlemen's agreement," which was not made public, but it was understood that a memorandum containing it was circulated to remind the parties to it of the agreement, and that a copy was sent to Germany.

Banks Assign Task.

The Central Bank Governors of the various powers declared that the Bank for International Settlements should assume the tasks provided for by the Lausanne Conference.

The agreement provided resolutions providing for conditional measures extending a moratorium on intergovernmental debts, an agreement to assist Austria and the Danubian States which are in financial difficulties, creation of a committee to study ahe grain problem in the Danubian States which are embarrassed by a huge grain surplus, and the creation of ministry for economic conference under the auspices of the League of Nations.

German officials are due here on Tuesday to arrange for a reaffirmation of the loan guarantees under the Young Plan, which were legally tailed by the Lausanne Convention.

Committees of the proposed world economic conference are expected to begin functioning within three weeks with late August or early September mentioned as a likely time for the conference, to which the United States would be invited.

Banks Meet at Basle.

Switzerland, July 11—Machinery was set in motion Sunday to carry out the reparations agreement reached at Lausanne, as the Governors of the Central Banks at a meeting of the Bank for International Settlements people have no desire to see any delaor to put beyond his capacity.

Congress is Satisfied.

That statement was interpreted by Congress as leaving the door definitely open for further negotiations and in its ratification of the moratorium. Congress declared unequivocally and by overwhelming vote against further settlement.

The Governments, politics, outlined in the conversations between President Hoover and former Premier Laval of France and often restated by State Department officials was, that reparations were a problem for Europe alone to settle, but that this Government might consider proposals for debt revision made by individual European nations after they have reached an agreement on reparations.

Agreement is Signed

Lausanne, Switzerland, July 11— The reparations agreement, scaling down Germany's bill from an original $64,000,000,000 to approximately $714,000,000, was initialled Saturday by delegates of the leading powers, and almost before the ink was dry preparations were started for the world economic conference authorized in the pact.

Convinced that a great stride had been made toward pulling Europe's economic house in order, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, Great Britain, whose indomitable determination was largely responsible for the agreement, announced his intention to adjourn the agreement of Lausanne by noon today. That means bringing in the question of war debts of $11,000,000,000 owed to the United States.

Hon. H. A. McKeown, Former Chairman of Railway Board Dies

Saint John, N.B., July 11—Stricken with a heart attack as he stepped aboard a ferry at Westfield near his summer home, Hon. H. A. McKeown former chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, dropped dead yesterday. His wife was with him at the time.

Mr. McKeown had appeared to be in his usual health and made no complaint of feeling unwell. Ten years previously he had acted as Chairman of a Commission appointed by the government of New Brunswick to investigate charges of extortion in relation to lumber of crown lands.

Hon. Harrison Andrew McKeown was born in St. Stephen, N.B., on Nov. 28, 1863, the son of Rev. Hezekiah and Elizabeth S. Harrison McKeown. He was educated in the College School, Fredericton, and Mount Allison University, Sackville, N.B. graduating with a B.A. degree in 1881. Entering the offices of Hale Pr. A. A. Stockton and Hon. PREMIER GETS REAL OVATION

Hero in Eyes of People as He Returns From Lausanne

London, July 11—Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald, returning from the Lausanne Conference, his declaration that the new reparations agreement may mark the beginning of confidence, hope and good, honest work," was received by the public as a conquering hero.

Enthusiastic crowds greeted on Victoria Station, where the Prime Minister was welcomed by members of his cabinet and by the cheering crowd numbering thousands. The Lausanne pact, not as set aside, and was beaming with optimism.

The moment he stepped from the train, the Prime Minister was surrounded by newsreel microphones. Smiling cheerfully, he stepped forward to meet the battery and said:

"I am glad to be back after a very strenuous fight in behalf of a wholly admirable cause with my splendid colleagues. I hope this will be the beginning of confidence, hope, and good, honest work."

In the evening, King George received the Prime Minister in a private audience. They lasted half minutes, and discussed with him the terms of the Lausanne agreement.

"EMBERS of LOVE"

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

COPYRIGHT 1932 BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

Being put on a stretcher..... strange faces...Krankenhaus.... that meant hospital..... Hospital that remembered time.... Sisters with blue dresses and thick white aprons that bobbed....

Dark into which she was rushing! Oblivion....beyond oblivion ..... But they wouldn't let her have it, they kept calling her back, the sisters with their trays and their medicines, the spectacled Herr Doctor Sanders.

Maidens Nahlman, too. Lily Lou saw her, beaming from the foot of the bed, sometimes. Saw her bringing flowers that smelled too sweet, dainties she couldn't swallow, letters that she didn't want to read.

Sometimes she picked up the letters and set them down again. Why should anyone have to say that would matter to her now? One fingered envelope, postmark from Woodlake, addressed in her mother's pedagogic hand..... What did her mother have to do with her now? Her mother was writing to a girl who was supposed to be an opera star, not to this sick woman she had brought into life.....

She put the letters down unopened. They remained under the tightly closed lids, rolled down her cheeks.

"Tsch! Tsch!" The rosy day nurse was right at her side with a big white handkerchief. They wouldn't even let her cry. Lily Lou bit her lip, her clenched, resentful-ing to sleep.

Rustling. Creaking of the rosy sister's starched skirts. More clucking noises. Bubchen! The rosy sister was bringing the baby to comfort her..... to comfort her! How funny! How terribly, whastly funny!

Lily Lou turned her face toward the wall. The little head was dark, and silky, but there was something about it, about the ears.....

"Take it away, please," she begged. "Please take it away, Schwester!"

The sister bustled forward, and right as her heels came Susanne Coin who had probably been in the room right along. Nobody ever cared if they might come in, nobody asked whether she wanted to see them or not, they just came.

"Hello," she said, making the effort because it was Susanne's first visit, trying not to mind when Susanne kissed her on both cheeks.

"The sweet baby. Do let me hold him, Schwester. Oh, the darling! How lucky you are!"

Lily Lou cast a suspicious glance from under her lashes..... Lucky? She?

"How happy you will be now!" Susanne said earnestly, her pleasant mind fixed alight with interest. "Think of it, a son! I myself have desired a son, I want to be a mother; I adore motherhood."

Lily Lou shut her eyes. The old trick of pretending to sleep.

"Madame Nahlman sent the flowers. Do you like them? Now tell me what you have named the baby?"

"I haven't named it yet."

"!!! You're the first mother I ever heard call such!!! Really, Miss Lansing—"

"Robin, I think. Yes, I'll call him—Robin."

"Well! That's better! After me."

"After one. I always liked the name that's all. Robin —Robin Lansing—"

That smiled she dropped her eyes again. Lay there motionless, her black baby's somber frame for her pallid face, dark lashes mercifully veiling tell-tale eyes.

Susanne Coin stood with the infant in her arms, rocking him gently.

"Would you like to have him adopted? By a good rich Swiss family? They could give him a good home. Perhaps better than you, who will soon be singing again—"

She broke off, as the sister, with a little cry, elbowed past her to the bed.

Lily Lou was not faking oblivion this time. Her jaw had dropped. She was staring straight at Susanne Coin with eyes that were already glazed and sightless.

"I could give him away," she told the rosy sister who was trying to coax her to drink something out of a glass tube, "if it weren't for his ears. His ears are like Ken's. I saw that the first thing. That's why I didn't want to look at him. That was why. You didn't understand, did you?"

She beat her thin, veined hands together with a hopeless gesture. They didn't speak English here. That was the trouble. She used to know some German, but she could not remember any today. She tried again, more slowly and distinctly:

"I could give him away to Susanne Coin if he weren't like Ken that way. I don't want to look at him, but I can't help it. I've got to keep him. I can't give him away. No that nice Swiss family. I've taken away too much. I let them take Ken away from me, and it was wrong. I shouldn't have let them. I should have kept Ken and my wedding ring. I left it on the table in the hall, it was made of diamonds, but on the inside it said 'Ken to Lily Lou, forever and ever.' Do you understand? Forever and ever, but it has his father tell on—"

"Shh! Schlafen sie—"

Sleep! When she wanted to they wouldn't let her, and now, the sister, shaking it, "Schlafen sie—"

Lily Lou tried to sit up and was a little surprised to see that nothing happened, she remained lying flat on the pillows. She felt if she sat up she could talk louder and they the sister would understand. She began again, "So if you don't mind, I'd like to hold him, for a little while. I would be very grateful of him."

But they didn't speak English.

"Subchen—" She tried to hold out her hands, so that the sister would see that she wanted the baby.

"No, no—schlafen sie — sleep, please!"

Lily Lou made another attempt to reach out her hands. She wanted to push back the covers and get up. She was very sleepy. She had been too warm for a long time, but she could not tell them! Nobody would listen.

The pale sister had come in, and was rubbing back her sleeve, to put the needle into her arm. But she did not hurt, not much now. There were things she wanted to say.

"No!" she cried sharply, but they paid no heed to her. The rosy sister brushed the wet dark hair from her hot face. Lily Lou tried to push her away, too.

"Subchen—if you'd just bring him back to me—"

The sisters, the rosy one and the pale one looked at each other. The pale one shrugged. The rosy one pulled a big handkerchief from one of her many pockets, and blew her nose violently.

But they did not bring the baby. "Well, then, bring the Professor," Lily Lou whispered. "Herr doctor —I can talk to him. Herr Doctor—"

He at least spoke English. He would make them bring the baby.

"Herr Doctor," the sisters echoed. They whispered. "Herr Doctor—"

But Lily Lou found she could not wait for him. Her leaden eyelids fell. Darkness came again!

There was no time. Just light and dark. Sometimes they gave her cool things to drink, and then, for a little time she could float in the dark, and be at peace.

There was a cradle song of Brahms, that Gwin had taught her. She thought that she was just singing it silently in her heart, but she must have been singing it aloud, for the doctor and the sister, and Madame Nahlman stood at the foot of the bed, as if they were listening.

Lily Lou looked at them with interest. Madame Nahlman had been crying. The mascara was running in bluish streaks down her cream enameled cheeks.

"She's conscious! Darling, speak to Nita!"

"Heln!" she pale sister, said, shaking her head.

That was all the pale sister ever knew about anything. Wrong every time. Lily Lou wanted to tell her so, and to speak about something very important, but it had something to do with the baby, and that would be hard to explain, so she would not say it just now, because she was so tired. A little later, when she was not so tired, she would ask for him again, for her funny little baby, with ears like Ken's.....

Was she going to die? She inferred, listening to them talk, the doctor, and Madame Nahlman, near as she opened her eyes.

She was very sicke she was sure of that. So sick that they did not bring the baby to her any more. Two other doctors had come, Germen, both of them, with long-tailed coats. One had a beard.

If she had felt better she would have told them not to lean over her so much, and the day sisters, flustered and respectful, kept breathing on her neck as they passed things to the doctors. But it was too much effort to speak. She just lay here. She was sorry that she was going to die, her mother would feel very bad..... possibly she could do something about the baby..... but not-now..... she was too tired.....

Once she heard Madame Nahlman upbraiding Doctor Sanders. The loud, angry words seeped into her consciousness:

"If this were in the States it would never have happened. Vienna! Don't talk to me about your wonderful surgeons! What good is a surgeon without a decent hospital and a respectable trained nurse! What do these cows know about nursing! Look at what you've done to that girl. She should be at will as I am by now. Bunglers! That's what you are —bunglers!"

Madame Nahlman thought it was the fault of the sisters that she had died. Oh, they had been kind, even if they had brought her sausage to eat. She wanted to write. It wasn't their fault.

Presently she heard the doctor blaming Madame Nahlman. "What kind of crazy business is it!" he was saying. "Bringing that girl all over the country like that! With no medical attention. Nothing! What kind of crazy business do you call that? ..... A girl all skin and bones, ready to get any infection that blows her way..... They will not blame it on me..... But you will not. I will write. I will cable if you cable. "I'll die—I'll—I'll—"

"Darling, we won't. I won't let him—"

"No, no cables. Now quiet, please."

"Shh!" the sisters whispered, fingers to lips, "Shhh!"

Madame Nahlman was on her knees by Lily Lou's bedside. "She's better!" she whispered to the doctor."I know it. Lily, cherie, you are better! I knew it!"

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO

"I want my baby!"

Lily Lou, feeling child, you're been so sick—"

"I want him. I want him!" Lily Lou quite so see that she could get what she wanted now, beat the coverlet with her white, claw-like hands.

Then they hesitated, looking with glisten from one to the other, the first suspicion of what might have happened, dawned on her.

Then there was a reason..... the little baby that she wouldn't look at at first was gone..... had slipped away from her before she had let herself love him.....

She lay back on her pillow, her eyes closed. The old impulse to hide. To keep them from knowing that she cared. They must not guess..... her baby, hers and Ken's!

"When did it die?"

She opened her eyes, brought the words out baldly, looking Herr Doctor straight in the eye. He started, and Madame Nahlman gave a little cry.

The sisters looked from one to the other..... they were not sure what she had said.

And suddenly she could not bear it. She began into harsh, strangled sobs, sobs that tore themselves for her, the sake of the child she had lost.

She felt them crowding around her, offering comfort, but she could not accept it. There was nothing left to her.....nothing..... Until the rosy sister brought the baby, his dark little face looking strangely flattened and pinched, like a sick little old man.

"He was ill, the poor little thing," Madame Nahlman said. "When you got sick, he got sick, too, and so—"

But Lily Lou did not listen to them. She took him in her arms, and held him close to her heart, smiling at them triumphantly through her tears.

She did not remember them taking him away. But when next she remembered things, they brought him back to her, and she knew that her troubles were over..... the baby would get well..... she'd get well.....

Downstairs the hospital changed from a place of torture infested with strangers, who pushed and prodded, and did unthinkable things to her, to a haven of safety inhabited by mingling friends.....

She could lie on her soft white bed.....so safe, so drowsily content, and know that the babchen was close at hand, that she had only to nig her eyes and Schwester Schmidt or Schwester Wolfe would be right there.

Warm April sun filtered in the sparkling windows. A milky blue sky was just visible beyond the roofs and spires. They had seemed grey before, but now they were silvery or fawn-colored, or opalescent in the sun.

A porcelain enamelled 'metal house, 'small family size' will be one of the exhibits at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago in 1933.

HEIR'S WIDOW RELEASED AS VERDICT GIVEN

Jury Ascribes Death to Party or Parties Unknown

MAY CONTINUE

Investigation Can go on Regardless of Verdict

Winsto Salem, N.C., July 12 —A coroner's jury, unwilling to call it murder, today returned a verdict which ascribed the death of young Smith Reynolds to "a party or parties unknown." The verdict, coming late last night had the immediate effect of freeing from custody the young tobacco heir's widow — Mrs. Libbey Holman Reynolds, 21 year old Albert Walker, his friend.

Coroner Hall said he had ordered his inquest in the death of the 20 year old Reynolds following a mysterious wakey party at his estate early on the morning of July 6. The jury has returned its verdict after a session lasting less than an hour.

Many Developments.

Numerous developments, marked the final day of the coroner's inquest. Questioning of witnesses occupied a six hour session. The jury heard Mrs. Libbey Reynolds widow, daughter of a Cincinnati attorney, describe the shooting. She testified young Reynolds to make suicide threats on several occasions. None of those times, she said, she was led to believe he was crazy. At least once, she said, she expressed the belief to him.

That was the last Sunday he lived. It caused him, she said, to leave her and spend the night at a hotel, from which he said he would go next morning to "have his head examined."

She explained that he was melancholy, fearful that a lapse of virility would cost him her love. Once, she said he urged her to have an affair with another man.

"Do you suppose I could?" she replied.

"No, no. I told him my love for him was too great to be impaired by any one thing."

Announced Intention

Recorded with the revelations of her brief wedded life was Walker's story on the night when, after leaving Mrs. Reynolds and his wife, the tobacco heir announced that he was going to get Mrs. Reynolds rushed upstairs, Walker said, and the sound of a shot was heard immediately afterward.

Questioned by Solicitor J. Erle McMichael was directed at uncovering all possible information concerning the death, Walker said he left Mrs. Reynolds and Walker and Libby Walker denied that Reynolds had been drinking at the birthday party for C. G. Hill, Libby Walker's father-in-law. Testified, mezzymakers were drinking corn whiskey.

Hill testified that Mrs. Reynolds and her guest apparently were engaged in a drinking contest at the party.

Free State Ready to Arbitrate Annuities

President de Valera Willing to Hand Over Issue to Any Board of Arbitration Agreeable to Britain and Free State

Dublin, July 12—President De Valera told the Dail today that the Free State Government is anxious to arbitrate the land annuities dispute with Great Britain.

If the two governments can reach an agreement, he said, the decision of the board of arbitration, he said, the Free State will be glad to hand over the issue to that tribunal as quickly as possible.

Mr. De Valera heretofore has refused to submit the issue to any consulting body whose members are drawn exclusively from the British commonwealth. The British government insists that arbitration must be before a commonwealth Jury.

Both houses of the British Parliament have adopted a measure which gives the government power to impose a duty up to 100 per cent on Free State imports, in retaliation for De Valera's refusal to meet this year's land annuities.

Thousands "Walk" As Clouds Lower on Glorious Twelfth

Frankford Scene of Big Demonstration of Twelfth

Frankford's Big Day

Frankford, July 13 (By Our Own Representative)—With fife and drum bands playing, and glorious splash of coloring in the dress of the marshals' orders, Frankford on the south of the county of Hastings and district celebrated today the glorious memory of King William of Orange and his victory at the Boyne Water. The day broke to the loo cheery and dawned bright and clear and those who were up early in the morning and at noon there was that "the day" and that which symbolized that day of victory when the army of King James the Second was routed at the little brish stream, the spirit of liberty and the women who joined in today's demonstration or "procession" as they call it was the same dauntless liberty-loving spirit of the days and the history of the latter end of the seventeenth century, when religious and civil liberty fell most keenly on this side of the water as it does at present everywhere. It was a typical Orangeman's day.

Village Decorated

This village had put on its best dress for the occasion. The principal streets were decorated with bunting flies everywhere, through the streets and the buildings had hundreds of men and women all wearing some emblem of the day.

From early morning this Trent Valley village had been drawing upon the whole countryside and from the towns and the city. It was a district event.

The walk, which took in a distance of approximately two miles, was held under auspices of Frankford L.O.L. No. 58, and was led by Percy L.O.L. No. 108. Between five and seven thousand people viewed the gaily gotten up procession. Regardless of march, led by Frankford cornet band.

Those in charge were County Director Thomas Cashmore, assisted by Fred Palmer of Frankford; County Master Joe Gordon, Codrington; Chas. Goodfellow, Codrington; County Master of Prince Edward County, Edgar Anka, Consecon; County Master for South Hastings, James Emmerman and others.

Face Powder in Greek Grave 2,300 Years Ago is Same as Used Today

Princeton, N.J., July 12— That white face powder was produced in ancient Greece 600 years before Christ by methods closely similar to contemporary processes has been established here by a chemical student of the first white cosmetics ever recorded. It was found reposing in the tomb of a young girl of Athens who died in the fourth century B.C.

Discovery in a small terra cotta toilet box in a tomb which also contained a silver mirror and bronze hair pins during an archaeological expedition in 1930, the powder was brought back to Princeton by Dr. Shear and has been analyzed by Professor William Foster of the Princeton University Department of Chemistry. The cosmetics were found to be pieces of carbonate of lead which could have been manufactured by the Greeks through basic methods similar to those followed in the production of white lead, a paint pigment.

The white face powder was known to the Greeks of antiquity as "psimythion" and to the Romans as "cerussa," the Roman author and naturalist, included in his writings an old chemist's writers on pastoral history, a description of the methods employed in the manufacture of the powder.

"It is made," Pliny wrote, "from very fine shavings of lead placed over a vessel filled with the strong vinegar. By vapors from the vinegar the lead shavings become dissolved. Then these shavings are ranged in rounded and sifted, after which it is ground. The powder is then compounded into tablets and dried in the sun."

White lead is produced commercially today in essentially the same manner by the so-called "Dutch process" in which pulverized sheets of lead are exposed to the action of acetic acid vapors moisture and carbon dioxide.

The discovery of the white skin preparation by Dr. Shear is the first ever recorded.

LILIES BLOOM WITHIN COURT R.C. CHURCH

Windsor, Ont., July 12—Orange lilies blooming alongside the tennis court of Assumption Roman Catholic church, within the Isle of Dogs residential edifice in Sandwich, created some comment today because of the date.

Added comment came from the fact that the plants and flowers appear stronger and larger than those grown in other parts of the community. They have been growing in this location for years, but only on the Glorious Twelfth do they seem to attract more than passing attention. Father Gerard Tode of the Assumption Church, said, with a smile that he might wear one of the blooms in his buttonhole only they were too large.

HAYING WELL ADVANCED THO RAIN DELAYS

Results Much Better in Fall Wheat in Central Ontario

FALL WHEAT CUT

Fungus Growth in Durham Reduces No. 1 Fruit

Toronto, July 13—Haying was fairly general throughout Ontario during the past week although operations were delayed somewhat by rain, according to the weekly crop report of the Provincial Department of Agriculture. Farmers are also commencing to cut fall wheat, reports on which vary widely in the different counties.

Western Ontario, Grey, Huron and North Bruce expect good wheat crops but the weather has caused lodging in Durham, Halton and Peel, where Durham, Hastings and Northumberland Counties. Prince Edward is the only county where the haying has been delayed.

Dundas Crop

With haying in full swing in Eastern Ontario, Dundas expects a fair crop but Prescott and Russell a very light one. Apples are having splendid growth in Dundas but drying of potatoes has decreased milk production sharply. Only about half of last year's yield of alfalfa, clover and hay is looked for in Renfrew.

Sudbury district will have an average crop of fall wheat but both spring wheat and oats will be short. Spring crops in Temiskaming have been greatly aided by frequent showers.

June Crop Prospects

Ottawa, July 13—In the month of June crop prospects improved in the prairie provinces, but declined generally in the Maritime, Eastern Canada and British Columbia, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan crops have generally improved, it said the report, but Alberta crops are above average and the most promising in Canada. Expressed numerically in percentages of the long time average, the July 1 report on the condition of field crops for all Canada on June 30 as compared with June 30, 1931, within brackets was reported as follows:

Spring Wheat, 99 (96); Fall Wheat, 102 (98); Oats, 96 (94); Barley, 95 (94); Barley 93 (85); Fall Rye, 92 (91); Spring Rye 88 (91); Mixed Grains, 96 (94); Flax, Seed, 91 (91); Potatoes, 98 (95). The condition of pastures was 97 as compared with 96 on June 30, 1931.

Czecho-Slovakian Shoe King Killed in Crash Over His Flying Field

SHOD INDIANS

Once Planned to Fly Atlantic in One of Plane Fleet

Prague, Czechoslovakia, July 12—(AP)—Thomas Bata, Czechoslovakian "shoe king" and veteran aviation enthusiast was killed today when his private plane crashed over his own flying field at Otrokovitz.

Bata was flying with his brother Alois, made a forlorne making shoes, was an enthusiastic advocate of the use of aeroplanes for commercial transportation. Two years ago he bought a three tri-motored planes for use in his business. Originally he planned to fly the Atlantic in one of them.

Less than a year ago he bought a tract of ground in Calcutta for a shoe factory. Describing it as a shame 30,000,000 Indians went barefooted. He said he planned to manufacture canvas shoes with rubber soles which would sell for about 20 cents a pair.

WOULD HAVE LOTTERY FINANCE GOVERNMENT

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., July 13—Declaring to run again for President of the United States, Major General John McDevitt, who once spent a fortune on a one-night party, says he will push a bill for calling for a national lottery to finance the government.

When he announced the platform, McDevitt admitted he did not think his present chances are any better than they were in 1916. At that time he unsuccessfully occurred during the height of a party he was giving in New York. Financed by an unexpected legacy to which he fell heir.

FORTY P.C. STUDENTS WELL GROUNDED

Sault Ste Marie, Ont., July 13—(CP)—Only 40 per cent of the students in the first year examinations of the collegiate here can be described as fairly well grounded in the essentials of education, reading, writing and arithmetic, while 60 per cent of the pupils must be classed as "poor."

This statement was attributed to an unnamed collegiate and high school inspector, by F. T. Rowland at a meeting in the Collegiate Institute Board last night.

In the resulting discussion some speakers claimed the condition arose from the system of passing pupils from the public schools on to the collegiate institute, while others said a diversification of the courses and more specialized teachers from giving adequate attention to the essential subjects.

BUMBLE BEE MIGHT HAVE BEEN FRIENDLY VISITOR

Trenton, July 12—(Special)—The idea of letting the bumble bee be is sometimes a good one as an Am erican couple will testify. Driving west on Highway No. 2 yesterday afternoon about three miles out of Belleville a bee flew into the car and made a dive for the motorists' face. He immediately threw up his hands to ward off the bee and the car made for the ditch luckily at this point it is not very deep and no damage was done beside a general shaking up after being hauled out of the ditch he was able to continue on his way. He claims that the bee was the only thing or person he had met in Canada, why he was so unfriendly. But how does he know that the bee wasn't trying to be friendly.

The canoe capsized and she was thrown into the lake. Cries of Mrs. Cole had gone to the city, no assistance was within call.

Miss Lapointe could neither swim nor handle a canoe. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Lapointe of Brent, Ont.

L'ASCENSION, Que. July 12.— —A search party was combing the forest near here last night for George S. Hale, general superintendent of the Montreal plant of Ont. Steel Products Co. of Hamilton, Ont., Limited, missing since Sunday.

A large seaplane flew over the district in search of any success Mr. Hale was here on a fishing expedition with two companions, who became separated from him on they following the streams.

Several hundred men were set to attract the attention of Hale, should he be within hearing of any sound. It was supposed that Hale left the place where he was fishing to find a more spot and lost his way. His rod was not found.

Hiring Trucks to Take Passengers to To Picnic Grounds Banned by Dep't.

Toronto, July 12—A ban has been placed upon the practice of hiring trucks for the transportation of passengers to picnic and camp grounds and other places by the Ontario Traffic Department of Highways, Hon. Leopold Macaulay announced today. It was stated today, following installations and inspections arising from accidents engaged. "Transportation for hire of passengers in trucks over the highways in the province is strictly limited to vehicles licensed under the Motor Vehicles and the Public Vehicles' Act and while it is perhaps somewhat of a hardship to deprive people of the cheaper transportation available, nevertheless public safety requires that the use of improper vehicles for this purpose be discontinued, and every effort made by the Traffic Vehicle Act which comes to the attention of the department will be prosecuted, earlier warnings having failed to discontinue the practice," said Mr. Macaulay.

Asked if this ruling permitted the use of any car as an owner for the transportation of his friends and family, Mr. Macaulay replied, "unfortunately, the law does not so permit it. It provides no control of such use of a truck and therefore if only at least, it cannot be prevented. I regard the practice as extremely dangerous. To carry a living and therefore likely children in a truck is to invite disaster and court disaster, and in the event of a collision there is nothing to prevent the passengers being scattered about the road, and as the trucks are usually crowded, a disaster is almost certain to result, such as that of July third when the driver of a truck was killed in the death of one person and injury to nineteen others."

Home-Grown Raspberries Offered Eagerly Picked Up at 25 Cents Box

The appearance of home grown raspberries selling at fifty a box on the streets of Thursday Belleville market, is likely to result in a decline in raspberries this season and the few in evidence were soon disposed of.

Strawberries dropped a little in price when they sold at the rate of four boxes for 25c. Red currants brought the ten box while black currants sold for 15c a box. Gooseberries, five boxes for 25c, a quart while cherries brought 10c for two boxes, a large basket selling for 75c.

Plenty of green vegetables were offered to the purchasers at the prevailing prices while new potatoes brought 40c a peck, selling shabbily lower in price than last Saturday. Green peas also dropped some in price when they sold for 15c the quart. Considering that the market was of the small variety considerable business was transacted during the hours of opening and the whole affair was well attended by farmers and purchasing citizens alike.

THOUSAND WALK

Lowering clouds, with a hint of rain, did not deter men of local lodges from making preparations for celebration of the "Glorious Twelfth" in Frankford and other districts where Orangeism were in celebrate. Early in the morning the fife and drums were integral features and the parades which formed in the city, from points east, gathering for a monster parade in Frankford where the various lodges throughout the district will meet. Most of the parties left in large motor trucks and lorries which had seats arranged on platforms for whole families who journeyed with the members. Accompanying the local members of Lodge 274 and the L.O.B.A., the Belleville Pipe Band under command of Pipe Major Albert Johnstone and with several Scottish dancers, journeyed to Frankford to take part in the celebration.

Reason For Celebration

"The Twelfth of July is celebrated because on that date was fought in the year 1690 a battle in Ireland near the Boyne River, a small body of water which flows easterly to the Irish Sea. The battle of the Boyne was fought July 1, and not on July 12th, but as the system of reckoning time was changed some years later, and eleven days added to the calendar, the date as in the modern calendar it is now celebrated on the Twelfth of July," W. C. Mikel, addressing Belleville Kiwanis on Tuesday noon.

"King William III, Prince of Orange had under his command about 40,000 troops, King James I, who was also James II of Scotland had under his command about 36,000 troops. King James was defeated, and he precipitately escaped to flee for safety and escaped to France. The forces of King William were victorious.

Limited Monarchy

"The battle was not so much a triumph of Protestantism as a triumph of a limited monarchy over an absolute monarchy.

"King James was one of the House of Stuarts, the members of which championed the view that the King was superior to Parliament, and that whenever his views differed from the views of the members of the House of Commons and the House of Lords his views prevailed. Another prominent member of the House of Stuarts, King Charles I, was beheaded when he took the same views of absolute monarchy.

"A number of prominent men of English birth invited William, Prince of Orange who was a Dutchman to come over to England and accept the office of King, which he did; he being the champion of the cause of limited monarchy. It so happened that he was a Protestant and his wife was Prince of Orange, taken from the territory in the Dutch Kingdom, gave to the name to the organization which was later brought into existence.

Orange Chief Feats

"After King William III ascended the throne of England, a number of societies were formed in England called Orange Societies to support the newly selected King. Later on these Orange Associations were formed in Ireland, under the name of Orange Associations.

"It is a great mistake to think that these organizations were intended to injure Roman Catholics because the first constitution contains the words to the effect that a person to be a member of the Orange Association must be incapable of injuring anyone on account of his religion and this has continued in effect to the present day. Besides every Orangeman expressly undertakes to abstain from all unkind words or acts towards any member of the Church of Rome. It may be true that some members of the order have not always adhered to these principles, but that of course is true of every church denomination in the organization. Where ever the Orange order exists in sufficient numbers to wield an influence, there will be found the greatest amount of religious liberty. Cites Other Countries

"Roman Catholic priests have charge of the rivers of Mexico and Spain and their churches closed and confiscated. There is no Orange organization in either of these countries. A somewhat similar result occurred some years ago in France, where there is no Orange Association. There are scarcely any Orange Associations in the United States, and there, where ever Roman Catholics desire separate schools they have to pay for both separate schools and public schools.

"One of the human agencies for suppressing evil in the world is the Orange Association and it should be upheld.

"Where ever a religious organization or system is founded there is a human tendency to engraft upon its methods and practices which change its character somewhat. This is invariably followed by protest, and those who protest are called Protestants. Moses protested against patriarchs practised by the Church of his day and his words in protest in the form of the Ten Commandments.

"Daniel was a protestor, and many other prominent characters in Biblical history, christ himself protested against the innovations of the scribes and Pharisees, and the money changers in the Temple, and therefore was a Protestant. The Anglican Church was a protest against certain practices alleged to have been introduced by the Church of Rome. The Methodist church was a protest against certain practices of the Anglican church, and so history repeats itself and apparently as long as there are religious organizations, there will be Protestants."

Toronto, July 12.—(By The Canadian Press)—With rolling drums and shrilling fifes, Ontario Orangemen today "waited" in honor of King "Billy" today. Typical 'twelfth' weather prevailed in most centres—cool, cloudy and dampish with grey and mild showers trying to dampen the proceedings.

So far as Toronto was concerned, the dull weather meant nothing. The long-planned gaily decorated parade marched through the streets. Highly decorated white horses walked in traditional style. W. H. Billy Harper, County Marshall led his 30th parade on a white charger. Dozens of bands played, and the ladies also marched in force.

200 Year Old Cane.

Toronto, July 12.—(By The Canadian Press)—Russell Nesbitt, member of the Provincial House for Bracondale, has been presented with a cane handed down for nearly a century of leading Orangemen for 200 years. Former owners of the cane are said to have been Lord Nelson, Governor Goldwin Smith, and John Milnock, Grand Master of Manitoba, whose son presented it to Mr. Nesbitt.

Bloom Day Ahead.

New York, July 11—Every year for the past 11 years, orange lilies have bloomed on the 12th of July in the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Higgins. This year the plants were a little premature and celebrated the Orangemen's day by bursting into bloom one day ahead of the usual time.

Mayor Tice Reports Many Unemployed Ready to Go on Land

A determined effort on the part of local jobless to secure vacant farm positions in this district, recently without success, has resulted in an expression of approval by Mayor Geo. O. Tice. Today the mayor declared himself satisfied with the municipal council's recent proclamation respecting the superfluity of such work and the seeming willingness of many local unemployed to take advantage of the opportunity to prepare themselves for the coming cold months. At the present time, so good has been the response by the men, that all available positions have been filled.

A request is made by Mayor Tice for farmers in the district who have had difficulty in obtaining men to leave their names and addresses at either the city hall or employment office, all available positions which are open will be filled to the satisfaction of farmer and men, and, as far as possible, such men sent to the addresses will be recommended for the work.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN KING OF ALBANIA

Brookline, Mass., July 12—George Freel Williamson, 70, a Boston lawyer, who it is said might have been King of Albania had he remained in dread here. He has been prominent in politics and served for a time as United States Minister to Greece and Montenegro.

It was as a result of his interest in the tiny kingdom of Albania that his diplomatic career came to an end, and because of his efforts in behalf of the country that he was offered a post in its government that might have placed him on the throne. He declined the place.

"MERCY SLAYER" WILL BE GIVEN FREEDOM

Massillon, O., July 13 — James Stenhouse, 46, "mercy slayer" of his child, will be released from the State Insane Hospital tomorrow as normal both mentally and physically.

Stenhouse was committed to the hospital last January when a Grand Jury refused to indict him after he confessed chloroforming his baby boy nearly three years ago. At the time, he said the child was suffering from a sincurable brain disease and he knew he was doing right" in ending its life.

Under Ohio law, Stenhouse now may be tried for murder, but even that any action would be taken was doubtful.

Stabilization of Exchange Tariff Preference Plan Included in Agenda

Program Has Been Approved by All Governments

TRADE PACT

Discuss Common Policy With Regards to Foreign Treaties

Ottawa, July 11—(CP)—Official announcement of the provisional agenda for the Imperial Economic Conference was made Monday night by Prime Minister R. B. Bennett. Tariff and trade matters and monetary and financial questions, broadly speaking, will comprise the program of Empire discussions opening in Ottawa on Thursday of next week. Immigration is not one of the subjects on the provisional agenda.

The statement of the agenda issued by the Prime Minister, and simultaneously released in all parts of the commonwealth is as follows:—

"As a result of discussions which have been proceeding for several months past between His Majesty's Governments it has been agreed that the economic questions of general importance to the various parts of the commonwealth might be conveniently discussed under the following general headings, which will constitute the provisional agenda for the conference:—

A—General trade questions.

1—Examination of aspects of general trade and tariff policy and administration affecting Empire trade, including inter alia, the following subjects:—

(a) Recognition of the principle of reciprocal tariff preference within the commonwealth.

(b) General application of existing and future tariff preferences within the commonwealth.

(c) Extension to other parts of the commonwealth of tariff advantages accorded foreign countries;

(d) Determination of percentages of Empire content necessary to secure preferential tariff treatment;

(e) Export bounties and anti-dumping duties within the commonwealth.;

2—Commercial treaty policy with respect to foreign countries including, inter alia:—

(a) Relation of Intra-Imperial preferences to concessions to foreign countries;

(b) Interpretation of most-favored-nation clause, particularly with reference to the development of reciprocal preferences and expenses of import quotas.

3—Consideration of the appropriate basis and means of effecting Intra-Imperial economic co-operation, including review of existing agencies, and consultation of the report of the Imperial Economic committee on industrial co-operation, and discussion of commercial intelligence and research and standardization.

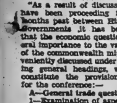
B—Monetary and Financial Questions.—

Consideration of existing interrelationships of the various currencies and monetary standards of the Empire, and of the desirability and feasibility of taking steps to restore and stabilize the normal price level and to stabilize exchange.

C—Negotiations of Trade Agreements.—

Announcement of the provisional agenda follows consultations by the Canadian Government with the Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand, Union of South Africa, Irish Free State, Newfoundland, India and Southern Rhodesia. The work of preparation of the programme and of instructions to be discussed in one of the important preliminaries to the parley.

Draft Agenda Prepared



Back in the winter days of last season Canada prepared a draft agenda which it circulated to the eight other countries of the British Empire, all of which are sending delegates to the conference. Replies were subsequently received from the various parts of the commonwealth. In each instance, these communications were transmitted to the other Empire countries. On the basis of the draft agenda and the replies of the several countries, the provincial agenda announced Monday night was prepared.

The planning gives wide range for tariff and monetary discussion. Tariff experts here were interested today in the clause which provides for a study of "Empire content" of goods given British preference. At present the tariffs of the commonwealth countries vary greatly in their requirements, in this regard.

In the Canadian tariff to obtain the advantage of British preference, goods must be 50 per cent. Empire content, either as regards material or labor or both. The only exception is the case of woolen yarns and fabrics which only require one third Empire content.

When Canada first initiated a preferential tariff in favor of the Motherland in 1897, the British content requirement was only 25 per cent. While Hon. J. A. Robb was Minister of Finance this was increased to 50 per cent. woen it was found that other European countries were shipping through Britain and by slight processes in Britain were able to obtain the preference. The textile manufacturers in Britain protested that 50 per cent, made it impossible for them to take advantage of the preference when raw cotton was dear and the special reduction in the case of cotton goods resulted.

In Great Britain when it recently put on a tariff, the five entire Empire goods was dependent upon the products being 25 per cent Empire content. It has been the cause of considerable criticism in Britain as not being a sufficient preferential quirement. As an instance goods 75 per cent. U. S. content and only 25 per cent. Canadian content would obtain advantage of the preference if shipped from Canada.

FOUR ARE SHOT SCORE INJURED

Tear Gas Used to Disperse Crowd of Unemployed

St. Louis, July 13—Four men were shot, and more than a score injured by flying missiles yesterday, when police used tear gas to disperse a crowd of 2,000 unemployed persons gathered on the city hall lawn under auspices of The Unemployed Councils of St. Louis, a Communist organization.

The riot started after three hours of speech-making, when a movement was organized to rush the doors of the city hall. Six police men were injured, several receiving broken bones.

The four men who were shot, one a Negro, denied they were participating in the demonstration, and declared they were struck by stray bullets. The most seriously wounded was Edward Gilliban, aged 36, who said he was working across the street. He was hit in the right breast.

All International Work To be in Charge of Board Cost to be $100 Millions

Ontario is Vested With Control of Water Development

HENRY PRESENT

Canada-Ontario Treaty Now Practically Ready is Word

Ottawa, July 13—A joint commission embodying representative public servants of the United States and Canada will be set up to supervise the construction of the St. Lawrence deep waterway, the International Treaty now close to conclusion, it was learned here Monday.

This commission, it was stated, will have charge of the work on all works common to the two countries. The work alone will run, it is estimated, to a cost of about $100,000,000. Arrangements as to the proportion of Canadian labor to be used on the project may be subject to provision in the treaty.

Ontario's share of the work, that is, the part of the project devoted purely to water power, will not be under the commission's supervision. The province itself will have full control of the construction of this part of the work and, consequently, will be free to use in it the Canadian labor is given an opportunity. When the treaty will be signed is still unknown. Presuming that a treaty is signed within the next few months and ratified by the United congress and parliament approve it at next winter's session, there is still the question of appointing a commission, setting up an organization and choosing contractors. It is felt here that he would be indeed an optimist who, granting an early conclusion of the treaty, would say that work would start say earlier than within a year.

Confirms Treaty Near

Week-end rumor that the Ontario-Dominion and International agreements were both very close to completion were given a partial confirmation Monday when Premier Henry left Toronto for the scene.

Mr. Henry accompanied by Dr. Thomas Hogg of the Hydro Commission engineering staff, and Strachan Johnston, K.C., legal adviser, spent most of the afternoon in conference with Premier Bennett and federal engineering and legal experts. At the conclusion of this meeting, Mr. Henry would say nothing regarding the International Treaty but intimated that the Ontario-Federal agreement was all but ready. "Only a few legal details are left to be worked out," he said.

The Ontario Premier said that the province and the Hydro Commission, between them, must pay between $106,000,000 and $110,000,000 toward the cost of the waterway and its related power works. Most of this sum, he stated, would go for works common to both power and navigation facilities. Power comes under the province and navigation under the Dominion, but in this instance the works constructed to serve both purposes will likely be built by the international joint commission to be set up by the two national governments. The purely power works will be built by Ontario.

Beyond this brief discussion of the Ontario-Federal agreement, which he expected to be ready very shortly, Mr. Henry had nothing to say on the waterway question.

Divide Power Equally

It is believed here that the basis of the international agreement is a fifty-fifty division of power between the two countries. The total estimated power development is 2,000,000 horsepower. Since all the Canadian side is in Ontario, this province will get the whole of the Canadian 1,000,000 horsepower. It is understood that this vast load can be developed by the Hydro Commission at a net capital cost of $125 per horsepower at the bus-bar or power station.

The total Canadian expense, both as to power and navigation, will equal, per cent, that of the United States, but as a matter of cash outlay will be much reduced. This is because the Welland Canal, lake ship channel and other subsidiary developments already built in Canada will be included in the general agreement, thus giving further recognition from Labrador to identify a body found in George's River and believed to be that of Lieut.-Governor J. Kobler or Fred R. Connell, American adventurers who started a canoe trip through the Quebec-Labrador Peninsula in July and very reported last near where the body was found.

News of the discovery reached here yesterday in a radio message from Sandwich Bay, on the Labrador, who stated that Nazopie Indians had found the body in June. The message offered no details that might identify the body, but suggested that it might be an indication of the fate of two Americans and their Canadian guide, Jim Martin, of the Hudson Bay Company.

BOISSEVAIN, Man., July 12.—(CP)—Three thousand acres of land with high hopes for the harvest, the people of Canada and the United States will meet Thursday at the imaginary line between their two countries to open what is an abiding peace in an International Peace Garden as a living memorial to cover a century of good will between the two nations and a pledge of their intention to live side by side without taking up arms against each other.

Most of the mail to be carried has been sent by stamp collectors, but part of it is for Imperial Conference delegates, who will reach the straits on the Empire of Britain about July 17.

The men waiting on the surface were not injured by the blast.

APPEALS TO FARMERS

Mayor's Tice pointed reference on Saturday to the refusal of some dependent men to accept jobs of work when they had the result of bringing him applications for farm jobs greatly outnumbering the offers of work made through him. In consequence today he is appealing to the farmers to provide him with their names if they need farm help.

He points out that while some might spurn jobs to which they are not accustomed there are far more willing to take any position which offers itself. This must be said to the credit of the vast majority. Even those who turned down the offer to do farm work may even by this time have reconsidered their attitude for Mayor Tice's words meant directly for them, have undoubtedly found their weak spot. In the midst of unemployment some are bound to be found who do not want to leave cities but they are the few.

Farmers who have their own difficulties and who have done more than they could to give the idle a chance may still be able to open up a number of other jobs for Belleville's workless who are pleased to have a chance to earn their living and a monthly wage.

CHILDREN ARE COSMOPOLITAN

At a party of seven year olds held in the city on Monday in honor of the birthday of a young lassie a canoe with Indians seated within was one of the gifts and with it the children demonstrated a remarkable knowledge of Dominion and world geography. One of the ladies attending to the welfare of the children suggested that they visit ports with the canoe and the youngsters made quite a world cruise giving the names of cities in all parts of the globe.

Somewhere these youngsters have secured a knowledge of the world, probably mostly by hearing their parents discussing world problems fastening them to cities and girls with the aid of the newspaper accounts of events far and near.

Anyhow these children are real cosmopolites of the modern world. There was an age when children of tender years did not know the world by reputation as these boys and girls of 1932 know their geography. The world's size is in a expanse is shrinking and the barriers are breaking down when children cross them with the ease of imagination.

MORE WOMEN CENTENARIANS

In the report issued from Washington in regard to the population of the United States by age and sex, the interesting fact is revealed that from seventy-five years and upwards more women than men outnumber men until at the century mark the women total 2,561 as against 1,403 men.

On the contrary the total number of men exceed the number of women by 62,-137,080 to 60,837,966.

These interesting facts in view of the belief that the female outnumbers the male in some countries. It is also a very interesting sociological fact that aged women are in the majority in the States.

AS OLD AS 400 B.C.

Face powder found in a tomb over 2300 years old in which a Greek woman had been buried brought to light the interesting fact that the powder contains what is used today by the modern dame. The ancients knew the art of facial adornment and decoration.

Methods of manufacturing these powders and lotions have changed but the purpose and even the material are unchanged. So the present age after all did not discover many of the things so strangely modern.

But whether adornment is many generations old it does its work most effectively in this age, even if it does give the thought that the ancient women must have looked amazingly beautiful with the aid of these cosmetics.

MAKING OF HOAXES

Curtis, boat builder, and maker of the great hoax on the Lindbergh case has been fined one thousand dollars and sentenced to one year in prison. Some people imagine that a hoax is something so light that it can be laughed off but Curtis realizes probably by this time that a hoax is not to be laughed away for he was found guilty on a charge of molesting the authorities in the discharge of their duties.

In such a case the hoax is most cruel.

Hoax-makers have a poor sense of fair play and propriety when they manufacture that which alarms and causes sorrow and pain.

Hon. Dr. Manion has been chosen as press liaison officer of the Imperial Conference. The post is one of the most delicate to handle owing to the vast importance of the issues at stake and Dr. Manion may be depended upon to carry out these duties with a full appreciation of the task that rests upon him.

PLANTING A TREE

Here I will plant a tree
To make a home for song,
The thrush's soaring ecstasy
Through all the Summer long.

While marching years go by-
Still upward it will grow
And warm gay signal to the sky
And golden fields below.

Its shelter it will fling
Grown wider year by year;
No rain's cold lances in that ring
No burning sun to fear.

Here I will plant a tree
Where kindly winds will croon,
Friend of lovers yet to be
Beneath a Summer moon.

SIX HUNDRED RICH MEN'S SONS from the United States, have a summer camp in New Ontario, hunting and fishing, regardless of game laws, partridge, bass, deer, having a whale of a time at Canada's expense, bills paid by Father. They were fined $600, just one dollar each for this superb sporting epic, and found it didn't cheer the fish sporting party one would not have had to pay the fine had it not been for the efforts of the Fish and Game Protective Association of Ontario, and the full information was laid against such wholesale slaughter of the wild life of Ontario. This was one of the instances vouched for by Mr. Ed. Bayley, president of the Fish and Game Protective Association of Ontario who addressed Belleville Rotary Club Monday and made an appeal for better enforcement of game laws and better official enforcement. Pointing out the necessity of protecting the wild life of the province for the public's visible assets inasmuch as that department had yearly revenue of $775,862.84, and its attraction for tourists, Mr. Gastle said that the enforcement section of the Provincial Police and Game Department was inefficient and the game laws were not enforced as they should be. He instanced a profession of hunters camp where Yankee hunting parties were guaranteed a good time and a deer each for sixty dollars per capita, and did very far from it. Belleville hunters arrived in camp with plenty of booze and few guns. Personally he had seen twenty deer dogging in readiness for the Yankee hunting party at a certain camp. Mild weather came and the meat spoiled, so another twenty had to be killed for the visitors' table and sixty dollars per head was paid. Such wholesale slaughter of the wild life could not be allowed to continue. SHOOTING PARTRIDGES IN THE CLOSED SEASON. Remember generally that the young partridges are left to starve or meet death from their natural enemies. One partridge killed out of season, may mean a dozen fewer next season and more. That beautiful doe shot out of season may mean the death of a fawn not yet able to fend for itself. Game and game laws should be observed by honest citizens.

OUT FROM THE GOLDEN WEST when men are men and women boss them just the same as here comes a story of a Governor of a State who was in a hurry to get some place where he was booked to make a speech. He told his chauffeur to step on it and they were hitting up more than sixty miles an hour when they approached a protesting policeman just as the gates were lowered. The Governor seeing that the train was not yet in sight, poked his head out of the machine.

"Hey, there," he cried. "Wait a minute. I'm in a hurry to cross the tracks."

"Sorry, mister," replied the watchman. "I've got the signal, and I must lower the gates. Can't play any favorites, you know."

"Say," said the Governor, indignantly, "Do you know who I am? I'm the Governor of this State."

"Glad to meet you, Governor," retorted the watchman, "I'm Mr. Sweeny of the Missouri Pacific-Railroad."

"SPEED DRUNKENNESS"

An English writer says that the symptoms of speed drunkenness "are an extraordinary feeling of overconfidence, an exhilaration in taking risks that no sober man would take; a wild passion for pursuing the car ahead as though it were an enemy to be taken at all costs."—London Free Press.

THE GROWERS

The sellers will come forward in battalions. There will be a "corporate quest" for buyers. It has been well said that, "directly or indirectly, wheat touches every domestic treasury in Canada, economically speaking, and not only in terms of bread. The national interests, therefore, might be conserved in some measure of control in regard to the downward curve of the price level for Canadian wheat. Necessity does everything well Obeying this law, Western Canadian growers will flood the gold of their wheat into the lap of a dark world with unseeming speed this fall.

The tragic feature in the situation lies in the possibility that, while economically the farmers may greatly improve in the course of the coming year, with consequent improvement in the wheat price-level, 90 per cent. of the Canadian wheat farmers will be "on the wrong side" as having sold their grain at the low point in the price curve during the months of September, October and November.—Toronto Globe.

"PIGS IS PIGS"

A gentleman called at this office the other day with a sample of what almost rivals the Pyramids of Egypt in point of age. He wanted a name kept out of the paper, but anyone in this particular case was charged with aiding home brew. Our caller was not the offender, as he had presented his request, plainly but not insistently. He was merely quite convinced of the reasonableness of our point of view when we declined to consider the request.

Responsible people who wish to get liquor can get it from government stores. There is no possible excuse for home brew in this part of Ontario, and it is in the interests of the public generally that this be stamped out as much as possible. Inasmuch as that department had yearly revenue of $775,862.84, and its attraction for tourists, Mr. Gastle said that the enforcement section of the Provincial Police and Game Department was inefficient and the game laws were not enforced as they should be. CHILDREN'S HEALTH YOUR GREATEST JOB

Most Children Grow up Into Healthy Adults

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph. D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

Most of us are born healthy children and most of us even grow up into adulthood with babies that contain sound organs. In other words, our parents did the care that we are given every opportunity to have a sound constitution. Perhaps that statement really exaggerate. For as I write I can think of dozens of men who are not, doing everything possible to promote the health of their children.

Particularly remiss are many parents in the matter of vaccination. There are those who still adhere to the old-fashioned idea that a vaccinate one—that is, to inoculate with cow-pox—is introducing disease into the system.

What is really happening, however, is that certain disease-germs—blood changes—are brought into being because of the body's reaction to the cow-pox serum and it is these and not smallpox which are death to small-pox should it be contracted. This is what we mean when we say that vaccination has established against succumbing to certain diseases.

Now then, not all diseases can be immunized—that is, not yet. The time may come when the researches of science will confer such a tremendous benefit upon humanity.

Yet nowadays many of the marvelous advances made by medical by scientists are not fully utilized. This matter of vaccination is one of the most important. Small-pox, diphtheria and typhoid fever are other examples.

It should also be remembered, if small-pox is not fully under control, the average. Revaccination and re-injections must be made every few years.

Measles and adenoids are likewise neglected or not properly watched. Adenoids frequently regrow. And measles, which is usually not completely, a little stump which is left may still be a source of infection.

Teeth are another most important factor. As mentioned, train your children to the dentist every six months for thorough cleaning of the teeth and gums and extractions. If necessary. See to it also that the children rinse their mouth and teeth well after each meal—with special attention given to summer, for the average child is very careless in this respect.

Then the eyes. Dozens of children have headaches and dizziness, or they suffer from what is poorly or school, simply because they need glasses. Don't neglect the eyes, and as often happens too, the pair they have are no longer correct for the child's needs. Be sure that whatever it may be, that is present.

Be sure to take precaution about our children's health without any realizing it. Don't pay attention necessary for their proper bathing, play, sleep and food, children's health is a life-long pain-taking job.

But the health of your child is your job and nobody's else. We cannot expect the school doctors and nurses to do it for us.

It is furthermore, the child's inalienable birthright to be taken of according to the latest and best health standards. The child itself is helpless. It must neers depend on its parents for everything. Especially should it be able to expect a sound body and mind.

Therefore your children's health is particularly your JOB!

REVELATION

Tho' I were bred in some unhallowed land
Where no birds sing
Nor random petals flutter from the wind
Of timid daring spring;

Tho' never had I seen the regal sun
Invade the dawn
But dwelt in livid darkness, till it shone
Upon

A web athwart my eyes;

Tho' all my life had been a wintry night
Gloomy and dense,
Yet loving you I should know spring's delight
And dawns magnificence.

At a meeting of the school board last night, Professor Cleaver, recently of Albert College, was engaged as head master of the high school. The appointment will give general satisfaction as there are few gentlemen in the country more capable of filling this position than the one selected.

A new set of steps has been constructed at the north end of the bridge leading to the park which was granted. Two officers were on duty at the Grand until night, when it closed.

CAPT. GOLDRING'S WILL IS SUSTAINED

Port Hope, July 13—On the 5th of September, 1930, the old sea dog sailor, Captain John H. Goldring died at his home here. He left a will, made some two weeks before, leaving his property worth about $6,000 to his wife, Mrs. Ada Goldring, and the Misses Millie and Edna Stafford, of Toronto, and nephew, ing George Jamieson, of Newcastle, sole executor.

Several next of kin of Captain Goldring attacked the granting and probate of the will, on the score that the Captain was without testamentary capacity, and that it was the result of undue influence. Many witnessed both sides of the case in the recent part sof Ontario and New York State were involved in the contest and gave evidence in the trial which took place at Cobourg before Judge Cartwright and a jury on the 14th of December and the 20th of January. Some of the many witnesses were heard on both sides and by commission.

Judgment was given very fully on 30th instant by His Honor Judge O'Connor confirming the will and directing probate of same in due form.

W. A. F. Campbell, Port Hope, acted for the executor supporting due probate of the will. Messrs. Mason, Powlis, Bowden, Carter and Kellock, of Toronto, acted for the Misses Stafford and W. R. N. Shastic, K.C., of the City of Windsor of Oshawa, for the objecting next of kin. Under all circumstances costs of all parties were allowed out of the estate.

PEERLESS PERCY

Considerable controversy has been heard of late in regards to the Canadian Olympic trials to be held at Hamilton, Ont., on Saturday of this week. The main item of argument is the coming of Percy Williams from Vancouver for the trials. The British Columbia amateur mogula feel that Williams should not be asked to run at Hamilton while the Eastern moguls want the "Peerless Percy" to show his wares at the meet. Saturday will tell the tale.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

As the Belleville Nationals have but one scheduled game this week that being at Kingston on Wednesday afternoon, it might be to their advantage to play their postponed game of June 28th on Friday evening of this week. Twilight ball has had been tried in Belleville in late years and judging from the crowds that have been in evidence in the local park been in evidence at the into most any thing should be tried to revive the baseball spirit in Belleville. Now that the Nationals have signed their city from the cellar to second place in the loop they should get a little better support from the patrons.

It was openly predicted that with the return of Cobourg and a four teamed loop in existence baseball should see a rejuvenation period in this section of the province. This prediction has not been exemplified to any great extent to date but perhaps now that the Nationals have climbed into a playoff position their public support will be more in evidence. (At least it is to be hoped that it will).

Minor league baseball especially is being hit hard this season. Take the local Victorias for instance; they only take up a silver collection and play a fair brand of ball as well while local junior teams are playing bang-up baseball but what the proceeds are counted up those financing these clubs are fortunate if they break in the red at the sat to buy a new ball. We sometimes wonder what would happen if the interested parties now operating baseball in Belleville just threw up to sponge. (?)

The local Victorias travel to Picton to meet the latter Edward County seat kids in the first game of the second half of their schedule on Wednesday. All three teams in the Bay of Quinte intermediate loop are tied for first place, having won two games apiece to date. The Vics can jump into command of their league by winning from the Picton boys on Wednesday. With the addition of Archie Campbell and Art Adams at the receiving end the Belleville club the Vic's stocks should have considerably appreciated after their showing last season. Both Campbell and Adams are seasoned ball players and should team well with the Victorias.

Up behind St. Michae's Church the tennis players of that church have erected a new and up to date tennis court. Belleville was badly in need of such an enterprise and it is to be hoped that the younger set of the St. Michael's congregation get behind the move which it has now been launched by their interested elders. The new courts, which are situated at the north side of Pinnacle Street and southwest of the church, are slowly taking form and will be in the pink of condition following the heavy rains which have been so prevalent of late.

The executive of the Belleville Nationals are deeply indebted to the officers and members of the 15th A.I.I. the Canadian Legion Marcy Tice and all those who assisted and tried to make their recent boxing card a success. Many citizens had their share to contribute and came forward willingly to try to make the evening a success. To these persons the executive extend their thanks.

Over at the Y.M.C.A. Ralph Murdoch is planning to stage a card trip for senior boys. The trip will be taken, by canoe, from Belleville to Trenton and up the Trent River and Midlands to Peterboro and Lake Stella. The Murdoch planning to leave Belleville on July 19th with at least three canoe loads. For more information, if you are interested in canoeing, see Ralph-ie the "y".

Following last night's softball game at the Armouries Lang the league executive met and voted on the 1932 system to be used at the end of the current girls' soft ball season. It was then voted to adopt the same system that was in vogue last season, namely the second and third teams are to play the best two out of three games, the winners of which will take place club in a three game series. Although the league is in very good financial circumstances at present they are going to have plenty of action as was exemplified last night. Any fan who did not get his money's worth during the manoeuvrings of the Armouries last evening is sure hard to please.

LACS NOW OUT OF RUNNING

Moose Came From Behind to Win 7—6

Behind the masterful pitching of Lefty Plunder, the Moose Juniors squeezed out a narrow margin win over the Crystalac kids by the score of 7 to 6 at the Alemite grounds last evening.

Although the "Lac" kids out-hit their lodge member rivals 9 to 6 they committed several costly errors, which paved the way to defeat. Manager Art Young used Hammett and Ball on the hillock to try and pull the game out of the fire but without avail as their team mates could not seem to field properly behind their deliveries.

Don Thomas, youthful catcher for the Crystalacs, was the big hitter of the night collecting three of his team's nine base hits, while Burley was the only "Lac" junior to get an extra base clout off Plunder's offerings.

For the winners who got but seven hits Plunder helped the cause as well as any of his team mates hitting the ball in the ninth innings, when his meant runs. Plunder was the only extra base hitter collecting a double in the sixth frame.

The loss of the game practically eliminates the Crystalacs from the running as they have to win all their remaining games to get into a play off position as do the Moose kids also.

The lineups:

Moose—Tapp, Robinson, Forster, Kelleher, Temple, Bennett, Grant, Munnins and Plunder.

Crystalacs—Gray, Thomas, Edwards, Sinfield Churchill, Bemark, Burley, Ball, Twinning, Hammett and Gaspey.

AIRMEN LOSE 12TH STRAIGHT

Fliers Unable to Make Three Point Landings Saturday

Trenton, July 13 (Special) —The R.C.A.F. nine took their 12 straight beating here last night when they were defeated by Woolen Mills by a score of 21 to 5. The Woolen team has steadily improved until they now rank with the leaders in the League, consequently they had no trouble beating the Airmen, scoring runs in every innings of the game. "Soupy" Free, in the box for the Woolen team, has the easiest style of delivery of any of the pitchers in the league and as Woolen will have to be reckoned with when the playoffs start he may upset the pot of dope for the Shamrocks and Continentals, as they lead the league. Celtelis was on the mound for the airmen, and in this he has his first pitching assignment one thing can be said for him, he has a nice slow ball (very slow), the Leafs just killed airmen's bases. Morrison, the big first baseman for the Flyers was so entrused in petting around the ball he failed to make a three point landing and missed the plate altogether, turning his ankle at the same time. In today's game the Shamrocks meet the Continentals and a good deal of interest is being shown by the fans as these two teams are leading the league. The last time they met the game went into nine innings with the score remaining at three all.

The line-up:

Woolen—Free, p. Fox, c; Whitney, 1st; Stacey, 2nd; Redcliffe, ss; Currie, 3rd; Reid, lf, Rutten, cf; Pulham, rf.

R.C.A.F.—Celtelis, p; Massiah, c; Morrison, 1st; Winder, ss; Smith, 2nd; Burden, 3rd; Jones, lf; Goblet, cf; Roberts, rf.

Umpires: Isle, Lewis; bases, Ward.

MAPLE LEAFS AGAIN LOSE

Hilda McMichael, Hit For Circuit With Bases Loaded

Scoring four runs in the eighth innings the Belleville Fruit girls' softball team managed to pull out a 14 to 10 victory over the lowly Maple Leafs at the Armouries lawn last night. The game was filled with thrills as the Leafs led the Fruit lassies for the better part of the game, only to slip in the dying minutes and commit four of their seven costly errors.

Hilda McMichael, hitting a home run with the bases loaded in the sixth frame was the outstanding hitter of the night, although her sister Nellie was the big hitter, when she connected for three hits out of five tries. Helen Smith, Rene Dracery and Pat Ritter were the other players to hit for the circuit.

Norma Cooke assumed the hill-top for the winners and was given much better support than her rival Lois Carter, who hurled for the Leafs. The win keeps the Belleville Fruit girls within striking distance of the second place Clare outfit, while the Maple Leafs who have yet to win a game battle the league leading National Maids tonight.

The line-ups:

Belleville Fruit—Galna, Leavey, Winger, Bisland, Tuite, Lewis, L. McGuire, B. McGuire, Dracup and Cooke.

A good lookout is in store for silk organdie, since it is one of the materials so highly favored by Chanel for Summer clothes. It is very stiffly tubbed and evening frock is done in white silk organdie with printed stripes of yellow and green arranged in chevron design. There are four rows of narrow bias straps which unite at back in a huge bow.

It's hot! easy to keep cool and trouble-looking on a hot day in town. Best to wear is a printed crepe de chine frock in navy blue or in of black with a floral design in red, green and yellow. The scarf is faced of vivid red crepe and forms a collar and there is a red crepe belt.

Be beguiling in simple little chiffon frocks. A charming little evening frock is made of white chiffon with black polka dots. It is very high waisted with an Empire silhouette and the waist is marked by a sound belt. There is a tiny matching cape that ties at the neck.

A grand transformation can be attained with printed chiffon and some well-chosen accessories. For instance, white chiffon while the bathing suit one wears a wrap-around skirt of navy blue linen, cut high, with a white belt to match the waistline. Then a foulard bandeau of navy blue and white dots, and blue and white sandals, to make a perfect beach costume out of a bathing suit.

Of course you wear straw hats in Summer, but why not include a smart fabric hat in your millinery wardrobe. You will find it most useful. A new model has a crown of white and blue plaided chiffon and a navy taffeta brim. The crown is banded with a twist made of both fabrics.

Looking ahead is common practice in the mode. So, where designers are already giving hints of Autumn fashions. Designed for early Autumn is an ensemble consisting of a petty beige lustrous crepe dress with a 7/8 length coat having wide sleeves worn with a coat of dark brown velvet trimmed with fine fox in the form of a huge collar and border.

The Beauty Box

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

Each day some hair must fall. The wood that grows atop the human head performs a continuous ball-and-farewell act. A hair survives for five years, sometimes for seven. Then it shuffles off like a dead leaf on a tree. Almost immediately, its understudy appears, pushing from the scalp to serve its term. It is only when the papilla is worn for the last time that it doesn't appear. To keep this hair-growing mechanism on the job it is advisable to massage the scalp briskly once a day, to stimulate blood streams that bring nourishment to papilla and hair root.

Now is the time when the nose takes on a shine, and the powder puff seems not to be all sufficient. Give the surface of the nose a gentle laving with witch hazel; once a day, at bedtime. Instead of beating it with cold cream, sprinkle on a powder made by mixing equal parts of boric acid and ordinary baking soda. Cold water or ice rubs incline sebaceous glands to let up on oil-secreting. And still wise to cut down on fats—eat butter and cream as much as rich gravies and pastries containing lard.

Now and then a girl is not the curly type. When she trots home with the elegant finger wave she looks ten years older than when she sleeks the old mop back all smooth and unbreathing, plainly arranged, without sign of crimp or curl. It isn't safe to be a copy cat to follow the fold. One must study one's own type, go solo, if necessary.

Old white kid gloves can be used as finger nail buffers. The covering of which should be changed now and then if they are not to disgrace the beauty kit. Conservative femmes, fed up with gay finger nails or shells of green or purple pearl pleasure in using polishes that come in cake or powder form. They don't scale off in spots.

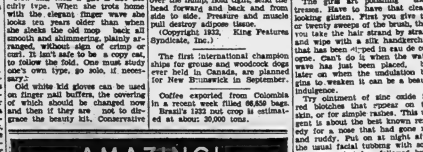
Keep the Toddler Busy---and Happy

It was the day after the circus came to town, and in the background of the room from cardboard.

When a dozen of seven lions had been prepared Betty unearthed all her little toy animals and put them in their cages. Blocks and strings were used to attach the wagons, and the parade was ready to start.

Betty arranged all her dolls on the sidelines so they might see it, and had a play circus of her own, quietly indoors.

Big brother had an inspiration when he saw it, and in the hour before parade trailed across the living-room floor. More animals were desired, so Betty was given old magazines from which she cut pictures of them. Mounting these on stiff cardboard, made the animals stand up nicely.



The circus was next taken to the sandbox, which served as the "lot," and two days of interesting play developed from this simple idea.

Baby Betty, aged four, wanted to get in on all the performances and ballyhoo, of course, but only succeeded in getting in the way and becoming just excited, trying to enjoy a play-project that was far beyond her comprehension.

Mother rescued her when the storm of tears was about to break, and suggested an outspoken which I think many very little people will envy, particularly if they've recently witnessed a thrilling, sparkling parade.

The Parade Crown

Mother and Betty collected all the available small boxes in the house, and Mother showed the child how to cut slits in the sides of the boxes, leaving the covers ready to be put back on again. Milk bottle tops washed and dried and attached to the body of a box idea.

HAPPINESS

Perhaps the one you married has not come up to your expectations. You may have discovered traits you did not foresee.

You expected the one you married to make you entirely happy and you expected too much because happiness is never perfect.

You know that you yourself have many unfavorable characteristics but you prefer to keep them hidden till after the knot was tied, anyway.

Have you any reason for thinking that you are any the less a disappointment to the person who got you as a companion?

There is plenty of meanness in all of us and you are not exempt.

Still you sometimes wonder if you would not have been happier if you had married a different sort of person.

Perhaps your life might have been far more unhappy.

If you and your life partner enjoy each other's companionship, you are getting ahead as well as the majority of couples.

To expect more than you are willing to give is to court unhappiness.

If conditions are not congenial you may be to blame.

Happiness is largely a matter of disposition. Keep your disposition sweet or at least on even, kindly one.

The Beauty Box

Just as well to protect the hands from the ravages of the sun, for a tan is not good, but there will be fewer tears when autumn comes and a big saving on the allowance for skin bleaches. The new mesh gloves are the best choice to match your color scheme. They are made to open work stockings, believe it or not—are cool and nice and very good to act as a safety for protection. Some of them look suspiciously like long-gauntleted gloves, but except that they have fingers attached. The gauntlet is made in guard patterns in the lace, reminding one of old-fashioned Nottingham curtains. They are made to draw in too casual a manner, especially by members of the young fry who must dash out for a date in no time. Soap should be used when the hands or on the washcloth until there is a live crackling suds. No need of scrubbing into the grain and flaying one's only complexion—yet on conditions that sufficient water expended to force the soap into the pores. Then blackheads won't get poised overhead and for aye.

Correct Manners

TABLE MANNERS

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

At the home we have been discussing table manners. There are two questions I would like very much to have you answer.

1.—Should the daughter of the house, a girl of seventeen or so, remain standing behind her chair until her father is seated; should he hold her chair for her; or should they both be seated without further ceremony when they are both in the dining room?

2.—Should the hands be allowed to remain in the lap; should they be kept with just the finger-tips on the edge of the table; or should they rest unobtrusively on the table?

Each of these requests are in respect to just every night informal family meals.

E. J. M.

1.—The girl of seventeen should remain standing until her mother is seated, or until women guests are seated, but not until her father is seated. After the father has held the mother's chair until she is seated, it is quite and courtly for him to hold his daughter's chair. (Of course if there are women guests he will look after them.) I am most enthusiastic about these courtesies and attention in the family . . . very few things in life are more important than the day-by-day associations between members of a family. They leave that indelible impression on our manners that "style" into social accustomedness . . . knowing what is the kind thing to do, and doing it.

2.—The hands had best be kept in the lap when we are not eating.

♦ BRIDGE PRIZES

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

I gave a bridge party in honor of one of the girls who was going abroad. I gave a "guest present" and the guest also had a high score so I also gave her the first prize.

Since then some of the girls said I was wrong in giving the prize to my guest, when I had given her a present. Then some thing she was wrong for accepting it, that she should have given in her turn as the second high.

I think I was very badly about it. I feel that as I gave the party, bought both the gifts, that prize and the guest present myself, and as my friend was going away, it was perfectly right. However, I have would appreciate your kindness if you will give us your views on this matter.

My thanks to you.

D.

Everything you did about this was right, my dear friend, and any criticism of what you did is thoroughly unjust and misplaced. The only criticism which was, in a Bon Voyage present, was a charming gesture. It is quite in order and the first prize. The guest was the first prize, and she should have been given the first prize. And there wasn't a reason in the world why she should not have her well-wish prize as anyone else. Don't pay the slightest attention to any adverse criticism about this . people who make such unfriendly remarks and comments have very little to do in a world where there are such pleasant things to do!

MARKET TONE NOT DECISIVE

Teck and McIntyre See Profit-Taking Action

Toronto, July 13—Profit taking which appeared after a strong opening on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Market in the forenoon today resulted in some irregular price action among more active issues but failed to distract the inherent firmness of the general list. Changes of more shorter variation and gains.

TREND VAGUE BUT UPWARD

Firmness, Then Weakness Later Firmness on Wall St.

(By Claude A. Jagger (Associated Press Financial Editor)

NEW YORK, July 12.—The securities markets were vaguely inclined toward higher prices today.

After a firm opening the share market exhibited a little its inner ing, in sympathy with wheat, but came up again toward midday, as bonds maintained a fair undertone, despite a degree of irregularity.

The morning selling was concentrated in the same handful of issues that have recently been most notably American Telephone, Coca Cola, Case and Allied Chemical, which declined temporarily a point or more. Auburn, yesterday's big gave up a substantial part of its gain. By early afternoon however, fractional net gains appeared in such issues as U. S. Steel, Consolidated Gas, National Biscuit, General Foods, Borden, Northern Pacific, Great Northern and others Supplied the stocks were firm.

The weekly Consolidated condition statement of the Federal Reserve members banks in 101 leading cities showed further sharp contraction in outstanding bank credit, loans and investments shrinking $200,000, but the largest item in this decline was a reduction of $113,000,000 in loans of securities.

Commodities continue to attract keen attention in Wall street Buffalo strength of sugars and packing stocks was a further reflection of the recent improvement in those staples.

CENTENARIANS IN U.S. TOTAL 3964 PERSONS

Oldest And Youngest Decline in Last Census

BABIES DECREASE

Male Group Show Gain Females Are in Lead

WASHINGTON, July 11.—The United States is credited by the Federal census with having 3,964 centenarians on April 1, 1930. Figures on the country's population as distributed by single years of age, issued by the Census Bureau today, showed that this many persons claimed 100 years or over when the fifteenth census was taken, but the number is believed by officials to have been exaggerated.

"Because persons of advanced age" said the bureau, "sometimes knowingly report themselves to the enumerator as older than they actually are, and because of their great ages, make exaggerated guesses, the returns undoubtedly overstate the number of centenarians, particularly in the Negro population."

At that the number was less than in 1920, when the figure was given as 4,783, or 819 more than 1930.

The number of males giving their age as 100 years or over was 1,440, with 2,561 females. Of the total, 1,189 were white, 2,775 were negro and 317 were of other races. Of the whites, 503 were males and 677 females of the latter sex. Negro males numbered 937 and females 1,838.

The number of persons in the total population of the United States returning for each year of age from 100 to 109 inclusive in 1930 than in 1920, except for those in the earliest and latest years.

Younger Children Are Fewer

The number of children under 5 years of age was 10,441,000 in 1930, compared with 6,588,970 in 1920, a decrease of 3 per cent. In 1920 children under 1 year of age numbered 1,950,000 compared with 2,257,255 in 1920 those 1 year old 2,184,483 compared with 2,300,805 in 1920, and those 2 years old 2,238,018 compared with 2331,110 in 1920.

The number of persons returned as 99 years of age declined from 1,564 in 1920 to 1,000 in 1930.

Males in the country's population as a whole exceeded females at each year of age under 16, and at almost every year of age from 31 to 74, but there was an excess of females over males at virtually every year of age from 16 to 30, and 75 and over. These differences in age distribution are reflected in the figures were substantially the same as shown in 1920 and 1910.

Those 21 years of age in 1930 numbered 2,311,022, compared with 1,831,712 in 1920, an increase of 26 per cent. They included 1,112,453 males and 1,198,569 females.

"From these figures," the bureau said, "it appears that the number of persons reaching the age of 21 years annually in the United States is about 2,300,000. The 1930 census returns for persons in the several years from 20 to 30 indicate that this number will remain approximately the same for the next ten years at least."

WATERFRONT FIRE SPREADS

Boston Docks Threatened by High Winds on Monday

Boston, Mass., July 11—Fire starting in a Boston and Maine freight house on the Mystic docks today gained rapid headway and fanned by a high wind threatened to spread along the Charlestown waterfront. Three alarms in quick succession called apparatus from all the down town Boston stations and the Charlestown district.

The freight house, owned by the Boston and Maine Railroad and occupied by the Allen Steamship Line, is 500 feet long and 100 feet wide, a quantity of potash was stored in part of the building and longshoremen were pressed into service to carry it out to prevent the possibility of an explosion.

No vessels were tied up at the three piers and this made easier the efforts of the firemen. A squad of 25 special policemen was hastily dispatched from headquarters after the Charlestown district police sent out an emergency call for help in controlling crowds of spectators.

NATURE TAKES HAND IN REMOVING PESTS

Chamberlain, B.C., July 12—Nature, the producer of the disastrous grasshopper invasion of South Dakota last summer is making amends.

Giving man a "break" in the insect war, a struggle mistady today is striking the insects down by the millions in the vicinity of Crow Creek, in Jerauld and Buffalo Counties, while the farmers are making every effort to spread the disease.

Although the exact nature of the disease which has attacked the "hoppers" has not been determined its virulence is shown by the reports from the farms in George Spreckles, living near here, where the epidemic was discovered.

Spreckles found millions of grasshoppers dead on one field, clustered in groups, and still clinging to stems of vegetation.

GAME ENDS 17-4 FOR REDNERSVILLE

Carrying Place—Rednersville further cemented their top-notch position and lifted themselves away from Victoria when they simply toyed with Carrying Place here to take a 17-4 decision. Although the game was scheduled for Thursday evening, it had to be postponed on account of rain, and a result a very small crowd attended. At that some of those present left early rather than watch the listless display given by the Carrying Place team. Errors were more numerous than not, and although Cord Herrington pitched well, with poor support he could not win. Art Dempsey took advantage of opportunity to collect two home runs.

Rednersville ..... 509 210 0—17
Carrying Place ..... 200 020 0—4

Line-ups:

Rednersville—J. Farley c; Weese 2b; A. Dempsey ss.; B. Dempsey lf; Russell cf; Sills rf; H. Farley p; Tompkins 3b; Wannamaker 1b.

The next game is between Carrying Place and Consecon at Consecon. If Consecon win, they will be tied with Carrying Place. Although Consecon have been both the leaders and Carrying Place have not seen also to beat either of them, they have twice been beaten by Carrying Place. The game promises to be interesting.

The executive of the league announces that a playoff between the first two teams to determine a champion will be scheduled at the end of the season, dates to be announced later. This probably will consist of a three game series.

LITTLE SISTER

By Sylvia Parker

Mildred Grainger was like a stream of electric quicksilver as she darted into the bedroom and snatched her sister Trudy's hands, almost snarling the gossamar silk stockings Trudy was wadding into a ball.

"Trudy, Trudy, do you know who that was on the phone? You'd never guess in a million years! It was that Jeff Pellows who's visiting the Robertsons. Come on, help me get into my things. He's arriving right here. He said he's go something to ask me."

The color seeped out of Trudy Grainger's cheeks. She bent over the shoe box, afraid to let her sister see the sharp agony she was sure her eyes would reveal. "We only met him last night", she said miserably. "What can he have to ask you?"

Mildred raised her arms over her head. "It's not hard to guess. What difference does it make how long I knew him! He's the handsomest man I've ever met, and the divinest dancer. Any friend of Jim and Julie Robertson is quite all right. I'm sure you and Dad will agree." She slid into her dress and began to primp in the mirror with satisfaction. "I'm going to make him take me to the Heather Inn to dance", she anoonced.

Trudy pushed a lock of hair into place. "Dig, dig as he wanted to go out last night. Mildred, you're dead the hurt inside her.

"Well—not exactly," Mildred said. "He just said he wanted to come over and ask me something. But who wants to sit around all evening. He can ask me just as well while we're driving."

Mildred didn't ask for Jeff to come up to the house. As soon as she heard the car stop outside the door, she kissed her sister lightly and ran out to meet him.

Trudy sank to the window-seat in the bedroom and watched with a heavy heart as the sleek, grey roadster drove away. She tried to blink back the tears that welled up in her eyes but she couldn't and they rolled unchecked down her cheeks.

Ever since she could remember, Trudy Grainger had been in love with the thing she'd ever wanted to Mildred. At first it has been her doll, the big one, with natural hair and eyes that could be combed.

Trudy's bedroom was and ill, stretched out on the porch divan and only in case a delicate, veined hand to her head would Mildred give in to the shrieking, dark-eyed mimic that was Mildred.

Trudy was hardly two years older than Mildred when Mildred developed, it was Trudy who stayed home from college to keep house for her father, Mildred she longed to be lassther and Mildred hadn't a thought in her head, dark heart, except that college was a wonderful place for boys.

Now that Mildred was home from College, the Grainger house swarmed with men. Although Trudy was not her taffy-colored hair and blue eyes with dancing lights in them she was as pretty as vibrant, dark-haired Mildred. It was simply that Mildred was going off with the boys— to parties and dances, moonboat rides and motoring trips, and Trudy was still the little sister who got everything she wanted because she expected it. Trudy was the "little mother" who liked to stay home.

Trudy hadn't minded—she wasn't the kind who liked running around with all sorts of men, but it did hadn't minded until she met Jeffry Pellows at the Robertson's party. It had been one of those surprising meetings. Trudy had been asked to gone out to the veranda and talked as if they'd known each other all their lives. They had talked the same things books and walking on the beach in the rain, and becoming negro spirituals. They even hated the same things, cardinals and wisecracks and contract bridge.

And then Mildred had come out for a dance and found them deep in talk. "I couldn't help introducing them," Trudy murmured miserably, "though I knew just what would happen."

Mildred had handed her cigarette to Trudy and slid her hand into the crook of Jeff's arm. "I tell you I she had said in the provocative way she had with men." "you'd really prefer sitting out here talking to Trudy than you could be inside dancing with me! He had laughed and let Mildred drag him away.

There hadn't been another opportunity for them to recapture the magic of those minutes on the veranda.

Trudy thought her head in her folded hands on the sill. "He's just like the rest, caught in the web of Mildred's glamour. And I thought he was different!"

How long she sat there ,while the evening closed about her and the lights in the house opposite moved from room to room and then went out, Trudy didn't know. Sleep must have come to dull her misery, because she was startled suddenly by Mildred's lilting laugh, and a gruff voice saying, "It's quite late, I'd better not come in."

When Mildred was lighting the lamp at the other end of the living-room and Trudy could see the dark outline of Jeffrey Pellows head back.

"You had come in." Mildred said softly. "You haven't asked me the something you said you wanted to ask me."

Trudy's heart leaped into her throat. She had no right to be there when Mildred and Jeff thought they were alone. She started to slip away, but she couldn't come out into the room without being seen. And she had no right to think this moment for Mildred, no matter how much her own heart was aching.

Trudy drew back behind the curtains. She wouldn't hear them, but she couldn't help hearing.

That place was so quiet and somber in the dim light of the lamp with a hesitation in his voice that Trudy recognized.

"Yes?" Mildred's voice was low, "Oh, I know I'm practically a stranger—but I was wondering," he stammered and began again. "Well, the fact is I'm in love. If my visit's not going too short, it all seems so abrupt, But I just can't go back to town without knowing if I might hope—"

Trudy was tense for Mildred. She knew Mildred would be smiling, quivering. Jeff went on talking.

"So I wanted to ask you," he cleared his throat and blurted out, "If you think I stand a chance with your sister."

Trudy's gasp was audible, but as she started rushing toward the window-seat, she managed to cover it with a cough.

"I fell asleep," she murmured drowsily. "Have you just come in?" Trudy could hear Mildred's laughter, a laugh sharp with hidden hysteria. "I'm afraid I'm not going to be in time to tell you, I said, and Puds said, I'll tell you, I know. You're not suppose to run after a man on the street in front of automobiels, are you" he said.

No, I didn't, I said, and he said, Because I'm not either, so we can both say we didnot want to cross the street, and I said, I wondered so we waited for a autombobel to go passed, and then we went passed for about a half a hour, and then we got up on the other, how's that?

Not so hot, I said and Puds said, Well I'm going to try it anyways.

Well maybe I will too, I said.

And when I got home pop and ma was almost ready for their dinner, and pop said, Well, what's all about this time? and I said, Well, I was just going to cross the street and pop said, Yes yes, go on, and I said, Nothing.

Well I didn't even ask if I could go out after supper, and I called for Puds and on the front door, if he had tried it. Which he had, only wanted to find out either, and besides that he dident get any closer.

Proving a bum excuse is worse than none.

Few advertisements in your newspaper start that way. Yet most of them are just as personal, and almost as promising.

Manufacturers and merchants must know your needs and wants, or go out of business. They must know, for instance, that about the first of next month you'll be very much interested in a new hat, new dress, new shoes, or a new lamp, or new towels or many other articles, useful or ornamental or luxuries the weekend prices on food products. They must foresee your wishes—and have what you'll want when you want it.

And they do—constantly striving to suit, at the lowest possible prices. Then telling you in advertising of the gifts they have brought from the farcorners of the earth, to your Royal Highness.

Read the advertisements in this paper. They are addressed to you—personally. They bring you news of better things to have and easier ways to live. Intimate news, of immediate interest.

"EMBERS of LOVE"

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

COPYRIGHT 1931-32 BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

When they saw she was interested in the view they dragged her back close to the window, with a proper accompaniment of Viennese grunts and whistling breathing.

Then could you see the people passing on the street, and when an old woman could see them from the corner to sell balloons she sent for a red one, and clapped her hands and laughed aloud because she was sure the balloon pleased it, and followed it with his eyes.

Kind Doctor Sanders came every day, patted her hand, and told her she must be careful not to get too fat, isn't it so, no? Chuckling delightedly at his own jests.

Madame Nahlman came often, with armfuls of lilac and syringas, which the obliging waiters stuffed into bulging but strangely incongruous vases. "You'll be coming home in a few days now, child," Lou—and then we'll be off to Paris as soon as Doctor Sanders thinks you can travel. I've finished my season at the Opera house."

Madame Nahlman had finished her season.... and Lily Lou knew even better than she herself heard one of the concerts either.....

"I'm sorry, my dear, that you have to go. We didn't want to leave the hospital. She didn't want to leave Vienna. Why, she hadn't seen a thing! Madame Nahlman's sister, Schwester Schnabel, come home with her for the 10 days that were left before it was time to go back to Paris.

Lily Lou's strength came back in bounding rushes of renewed vitality and joy of living. She felt better than ever. She loved everybody and everything. She awakened with each rosy-cheeked child she saw in the parks, to endow each beggar with a fortune. She adored the cafes, where everyone ate outdoors on round tables with green painted iron chairs. She gorged on wild strawberries, drowned in billowing whipped cream, tried 50 kinds of little cakes, each more delectable than the other, and the coffee! Oh, wouldn't mother and the church ladies enjoy a cup of real Viennese coffee with whipped cream on top.....

She almost wept when Susanne told her how gay the opera season had been, and what a marvelous day Easter was, with the streets fairly swirling holiday-ers, and each white-veiled little girl and black coated little boy, driving in a one horse shay, all decorated with flowers, to church to make their first communion.

Six weeks.....just gone out of her life.....

They went back to Paris. There was the French food that Madame Nahlman had promised for the baby, a tall pink-cheeked peasant woman, with many petticoats and an amazing edifice of starched lace and streamers on her head, waiting to take him from Lily Lou's arms. She bore him off to the nursery, and Lily Lou, trying not to mind, and keeping an ear cocked for possible protest from the babchen, went into her room to take off her things.

For a moment she stood looking around the familiar little place with a sort of happy homesickness. After all, it was as much home as any other place. She hadn't like it be other place. She hadn't liked it be-as first either. It seemed to take her a long time to get used to things. Maybe that was because she came from a little town. Maybe she should have stayed in Woodlake, and sung in the choir, and married somebody like Bert Barnelle.....

She glanced at her reflection in the mirror. Saw a tall, incredibly slender young woman in a Vionnet coat and an Agnes hat. Her lips reddened, her eyes faintly but perceptibly touched up.....

Lily Lou turned from the mirror, flung the expensive hat on the bed. On the dresser was the little pile of letters that had not been forwarded. With a premonition of bad news she ripped open the first one.

Uncle Ephi was dead. He had died in his little house up on Lone Mountain.

May didn't say how he had died. "He died," she wrote, "and he left a will, and everything he had is to go to you. I suppose it amounts to about a thousand dollars. I doubt if you can use it, but it seems funny, leaving it all to you. After all, you are not the only one in the family."

CHAPTER FORTY-THREE

Lily Lou put down the letter. She thought of Uncle Ephi, brown and bearded and young, in spite of his 80 years.

She had always admired Uncle Ephi, though family hadn't thought he amounted to much. She admired him, because, his doing as he liked, and not caring whether people in town thought much of him or not, didn't hurt to think of him gone. It made her feel that some part of him was dead, too..... The little girl who used to gather Mariposa lilies on the hill fields, her dark hair flying in the hot wind..... who used to sit on Uncle Ephi's knee in the cabin while Aunt Dolly sang gay little French songs, as she basted fried eggs with bacon grease, and cut biscuits with a tumbler.

"Measles," said the bonne.

"Nonsense!" said Lucette, the second maid. "That child has no more measles than I have the stomach ache!"

"A lot you know about it!" said the first time she knew nothing of children!)

And then it came to her that he wouldn't have cared. He never cared whether other people approved or not. He just went his way with his dogs and his horse, content in his cabin on Lone Meadow Lark's song, or watch a sunset, leisurely rolling cigarettes. He never in a hurry..... never rushed.....

And if he left her everything it was for one purpose, to help her achieve her goal.

She brushed a hand across her wet eyes. Stood up. There would be no more telling—with the bubchen, no more telling herself that she wasn't strong enough to work. Strong! She was strong as a horse! She'd work as she had never worked before. She'd make it up to his old shack, who was asleep under the trees in Lone Mountain.

Madame Nahlman's three performances of Carmen, at the Opera Comique were to virtually close the season. To Lily Lou's overwhelming delight she was allowed to join the chorus, and understudy for Micaela. The real Micaela was a beautiful young French girl, portegee of one of the conductors. Nahlman disliked the girl exceedingly, and engaged in several wordy battles in the effort to get the part for her portegee, Lily Lou.

"There was no reason, as Nahlman pointed out, why Lily Lou couldn't sing it. She knew it perfectly, her voice was more than adequate. "You've got to start sometime! Why, I might seat the very role of Micaela when I had no real training at all. All I had was the voice, the temperament, I won't want afraid of anything. And you tremble when I put you in the chorus!"

"It's just the thought of it!"

"Get over the thought of it. You're ready to do Gilda or Rosina this minute, or Marguerite—Why do you suppose I've stood by you? To nurse you along for ten years? You've got to jump these things when they come. Things won't come sing Micaela in spite of the devil. But don't look so scared at the thought of it!.....

Lily Lou grinned. She was never a match for Nahlman. She couldn't explain. Nahlman wouldn't understand. Nahlman never felt humble and frightened. She just knew sure of herself, glad of the chance to show how great she was.

She didn't feel like that. music was great, and the role great, and that she was just somebody hoping to interest the public.

But some people did. Tony Schicarill did. He told her so. He said he didn't "like" her, but had to be sure of yourself that way. They'd often talked about it back in New York. But you couldn't talk that way to Nahlman, she just didn't understand. Though you lacked nerve.....

Did she? Lily Lou walked the floor, worrying. Suppose after all that h..l been done for her, after all her trouble, she'd be too scared to sing a note?

The first night she could have kissed the French girl, she was so glad to see her appear in the wings, ready to go on and sing the part. Nahlman didn't say a word about it, she was so wrapped up in her own performance. She was magnificent, flushed with triumph. Fat and old and blowsy as she looked in her dressing room a little ridiculous even, in her laced-in bodice and roses in her too curly wig, she was a figure ridiculous during her performance. She was Carmen, seductive, compelling, still alluring. No wonder they acclaimed her, no wonder she was called great!

The second night Lily Lou lost her fear. She wouldn't wish the young French girl any hard luck, but if she got the chance....well, Nahlman wouldn't have to be ashamed of her. Her voice was better, much better, than the other girl's, and she was certainly as good looking.....

And the third night.... the third night she'd have almost traded her soul for the chance, except that the bubchen was sick.

"Monsieur" said Lucette, the second maid. "That child has no more measles than I have the stomach ache!"

"A lot you know about it!" said the red-faced, indignant Leontine, the angry nursemaid.

"I hate to leave him..... The regular understudy could—"

"If you fail me, I'm through with you! Do you a singer, or aren't you? Make up your mind—and quick—we'll both be late!"

JULY 12 — MR. AND MRS. — A CRYING NEED IN THESE DAYS

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

Meriem owed her life to an accident. At the very instant Malbihn fired at her his canoe ran upon a submerged tree trunk, giving the craft a slight jolt. But it was enough to throw his rifle out of aim. The bullet whizzed harmlessly by the girl's head as she disappeared into the foliage. Meriem threw back a mocking laugh at the baffled Swede. Soon she had swung far into the forest and Malbihn returned to his camp furious with defeat.

Fighting his way through the tangled jungle a mile to the east, a man in torn khaki—haggard and bruised—came to a sudden stop as the report of Malbihn's rifle resounded through the forest. A dozen times he tripped and fell as he forged ahead but at last he and his black companion came to the fringe of jungle upon the river's brim. Through the screening foliage Bayne's saw Malbihn's canoe making rapidly for the opposite shore.

Morison Baynes could scarcely repress a shout of exultation as he also beheld the canoe Meriem had abandoned. Quickly the two slid down the branches into the boat. As it shot out upon the bosom of the river, Malbihn spied it. He fingered his rifle and waited. Now the canoe was within hailing distance. Malbihn, on the shore, with a start of surprise saw that while one was Baynes, He knew that Bayne crumpled backward into the canoe. The two white men, far from civilization, had shot each other.

Horse Asks No Favors Plods Along Backed by Statistics

Surprisingly Large Number of Horses Keep Smithies Going

WHAT SCRIBE SEES

Buggy whips are still being sold in Belleville.

Breeching straps and other parts of harness are being sold by the saddlers' shops for repairs. The sale of oats and hay, instead of showing a yearly decline, is actually on the increase. And if you were to keep track of the number of pounds of axle grease sold each week over the counters of local hardware stores, the lady total would surprise you. That is Belleville's answer to the general theory held that Dobbin is "on the spot", is being doomed to slow but steady extinction by the roads of the mechanical jiggers which year and annum ever pass his ways and through cities of the Dominion.

Smithies Still At Work.

Turn right or left down scores of the gangways on Front street and you'll find the same old blacksmith shops at the same old stands. The lowed since oc teams in this section pave way to less clumsily-shod rubber. Not all of them have garage repair shops attended over the week open doors; not all of them depend on broken lawn mowers, or saws which need filing or "set" for work. You'll smell the pungent aroma of burning hoof as the sultry fits the hot shoe to the foot he holds in his leathern lap, and you'll hear the metal ringing of hammer and anvil as he pounds the hot iron to shape. Yes, the blacksmith is conversed in his art and proud of it, for they don't serve apprenticeship at business any more. Maybe a hefty lad now and again is swing a sledge for him when occasion requires, but as for learning the trade, there is not enough steady business to warrant the paying of an apprentice.

Electric Switch.

A group of idlers all around the smoke-grimed walls and reminiscing days of long ago, when Dan Patch paced the fastest, when a good mare flesh was something apart. Even yet they thrill to the sight of the occasional classic-limbed trotter who picks his delicate way over the debris of the shop when he enters to be shod. They "mind the time

"Horses?" echoes the burly smith, "Yes, we do a fair share of sheein' nowadays, though it ain't like it used to be when we had them lining up for to be shod, but then we do get enough to get by with." He reaches for an electric switch. "Another touch of modernism! An electric motor in place of the old time worn bellows for the fire, and nowadays less the dancing sparks flicker and flare in the darkness of the shop as they did when you stooped on your way home from school to watch the fun.

"You'd be surprised if you counted up the number of horses right in Belleville, without counting any of them on the nearby farms," volunteered the smithy.

Smart Lot of Horses Here.

"Would there be over one hundred?" The blacksmith could offer no stated number. "Perhaps there's a fair eight used to anyhow." He laboriously counts on his fingers as the minutes while away the starts to run. "Pretty nigh onto that figure I'd say."

"On my books I have at least twenty people along what have you, where from one to six horses. They all buy feed off me," stated a local feed and grain dealer. "Some of the other dealers have other customers in the city, there's lots of horses in Belleville. Yes, I guess there'd be one hundred, easy. That is when you touch bakers and ice men and milk men and so on. They all have quite a few teams delivering every day. As far as city deliveries go from Front street shops there are very few — perhaps half a dozen altogether, but when you count outside deliveries you'll get quite a number.

Statistics and Horses.

Why do all these concerns stick to horses? And a friend, Statistics, lines it out in black and white. Distances are such that the horse can stop and start without fuss, and that by car calls for more time each day almost without guidance. Tackle the problem from a dollars and cents angle and calculate the cost per hour per horse.

Stomach Ache DIARRHOEA

One of the greatest discoveries for stomach and bowel troubles is Nerviline, a remedy whose fame extends far and wide. For over fifteen drops of Nerviline taken internally with water is an instant relief to cramps and colic—stops the pain immediately. Nerviline possesses a marvellous influence over pain, especially pain that is caused by some derangement of the stomach and bowels.

From records kept of seven head of horses in a western experimental farm herd, it was found cost of feed for the season of active farm operation was $825.11, while the depreciation of hours worked was 1.840, which represents a work value, on the basis of 40 cents per hour, of $1,193.60. Allowance for operation costs far exceed this figure, while delivery truck costs per hour mount considerably higher, therefore it is a matter of gauging of fractions which prompts large concerns to use horses whenever possible for delivery purposes.

Dobbin expects no favors. He pays his way, and as long as he continues to do so he'll be with us.

PROTEST CUT C. N. SERVICE

Whitby Council Asking Other Towns to Make Representation

PORT PERRY, July 12.—Whitby Town Council will invite the Clerks and Councils of Bowmanville, Newtonville, Brooklin, Port Hope, Cobourg, and other places east to Belleville to join in a protest to the Canadian National Railway Co. Arrival was deemed to be a serious and unfair curtailment of train line train line service. An effort will be made to have a meeting of the representatives of all municipalities interested so some plan of joint action can be formulated and presented to the railway officials.

At the Whitby Council meeting on Monday night this question was brought up by Mayor C. O. Smith. His Worship said that he understood that only two main line trains would stop at Whitby now, one going west at 8.00 p.m. and one eastbound at 10.32 p.m. This means that it is impossible to go to Toronto by train during the day, yet the Company has professed that more buses were cutting into their legitimate business. Councillor said, cost the curtailment in the service was keeping many industries from Whitby and other towns along the main line. It was suggested that a joint conference of all municipalities interested be called, when some plan for joint action on the part of all might be formulated.

The idea of carrying out further that this serious curtailment of train service had thrown out a number of men out of employment. The C.N.R. no longer kept a bagman here, a friend, Statistics, man formerly employed there being transferred to Blackwater junction.

Council was agreed that the town should be cleaned up and flags placed across in the flag station class by the C.N.R. and on motion of Councillor Hall that the Mayor and Clerk draft a letter to the various municipalities with a view of getting accomplishing together to approach the railway and see how little better service was carried.

EDMUND LOW: COMING IN ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENCE

Two outstanding qualities of "Attorney for the Defence," showing at the Capitol Theatre, Wednesday, contribute to the abundance of entertainment value that the film has — fine dramatic action and subtlety. The two reach a nice balance that will make the film attractive to all types of audiences.

The punch of the story's drama hits out in the first sequence—in the c- :room scene when Lowe is hysterically denounced by an innocent man condemned to the chair. From that point it builds through the scenes where Lowe and Dillaway argue over Evelyn Brent, through the scene in Mr. Lowe's office after the murder, to the final trial scene where Lowe defends himself, becoming steadily in dramatic intensity to the climactic point where he reveals the murderer.

The numerous subtle touches of direction and acting mark it definitely as a superior film. Suspense is maintained throughout the picture with the audience kept guessing as to the identity of the killer to the last of a few minutes. Lowe is admirably suited for the role of Perry Mason, and Dillaway, played by Edmund Breese, is a colorful district attorney who ruthlessly sent man to their death, he became a great favorite. Women and juries were his racket—he did what they thought was right, couldn't resist him. He was a great lawyer and a man who could feel for and be sent an innocent man to the chair, he discovered he had a conscience, and the mental struggle that effected his transformation, through suggestion, is one of the finest photographically.

Photographically, the picture is well done, the cameraman and the director had an eye for selecting bits of human interest material and inserting them along with the ter- :ror-fraught scenes.

Edmund Lowe, as Burton, is excellent and does a fine piece of acting the role the authentic realism that is characteristic of his portrayals. Evelyn Brent, Constance Cummings, Donald Crisp and Dorothy Peterson ring in with nice performances, while the direction of Irving Cummings contains quite a few "different" and interesting touches, faithful, and top-notch film.

At The Belle

TUNEFUL "SUNSHINE SUSIE" INTRODUCES CLEVER STARS

And still Belle hasn't been enough of "Sunshine Susie," it will by urgent demands play a return engagement at the Belle today and Wednesday, matinee daily.

In recommending this film to you we can do no better than to continue to quote from the London press (you have already read Belleville and Toronto's criticisms.) "Sunshine Susie" finds a firm hold on the crest of the Viennese vogue, and a merrier entertainment has certainly never been shown in this country. The heroine is a stenographer in a bank, she has an affair with a married director whom she imagines is one of the clerks.

The real controller of the bank is the commissionaire, a genius who conducts an affair on the quiet time, and the skill with which he conducts the affair between the director and the stenographer to a happy marriage is beyond all praise.

He is, as made by Mr. Jack Hulbert, who has the comedy role of a lifetime. "Sunshine Susie" is a grand show.

Renate Muller, the heroine, is the kind of a girl over whom men go mad. The Canadian males are showing to an alarming degree a similar reaction.

She has an easy charm which "sets" you in two minutes, and although her English does suffer, you do not want her to, which is, most unusual.

One of the big moments in "Sunshine Susie" is Miss Muller's "I Am So Happy," between Renate Muller and Jack Hulbert. She is supposed to be in the arms of Owen Nares and Hulbert is sitting on the back-stage piano in a lamp-post, but the scene switches back-and-forth from one thing to the other and the song proceeds.

Such a sequence makes you realize the possibilities of the stage in the presentation of musical numbers.

From title to fade-out every inch of "Susie" is full of entertaining wit and imagination. The plot is never permitted to falter. Producers dance from one shot to another to the accompaniment of divine music.

Other sunshiny treats on the same program include "Boudoir Love," a rip-roaring comedy of the briny deep, and the popular Movietone News, the screen's world newspaper and Cliff McCormick at the organ console.

Bailiff Calls on Opera Singer But No One Home to Serve

VIENNA, July 11.—(AP)—The poet Popper-Pobbrary claimed own- ership of the entire household and the bailiff found no one he could serve.

No "Great Men" or "Great Women" I Can Write Plays and You Can't

London, July 12.—The war of success, said George Bernard Shaw, Monday night, is charted by that unconquerable sophistry, "Rome, do as the Romans do."

Shaw, speaking at a special meeting here disclosed satirically that "I in my modest way was a juvenile lead, and a youth, and handsome had never shaved, drank or smoked cigarettes, but had learned how not to follow his example.

"If you want your children to be safe and respectable," he counseled, "you must bring them up to do as everybody else does, everybody does, right or wrong. The moment they depart from that well-trodden, straight and simple path, they are in danger.

"This makes things very easy for parents, for instead of making little saints of their children, all they have to do is to make them straight, simple precepts: When in Rome, do as the Romans do.

There are no "great men" or "great women" in the world, he said, "and I can write plays and you can't, that is all," he said. "If I couldn't write profounder plays than yours is, I am as well off that everybody pretends I am much more respectable than I really am."

Believed Himself Tarzan But Weird Reign is Ended

North Bay, July 12.—After terrorizing the countryside around Eastmain, believed to have come here from New Brunswick, has been arrested by Provincial police and lodged in the district jail as being mentally defective.

When arrested he were only a small pair of trunks. The rest of his body was nude, and although he claimed that he had walked from Sioux Narrows, a distance of 200 miles in the woods, he were no shoes or socks.

For the past few days he had been alarming the hearts of the farmers around Eaudaire.

He believed himself a Tarzan of the jungle. Resting his foot on a fallen tree, he began to practice curdling yells that sent shivers through all who heard them.

When arrested, he was armed with a long stick with a piece of bogging chain on the end. The fight eliminated in the capture.

He had "been in hell for 36 years and just got on it," he told the captors.

A Rude Awakening

Of circumstances make the best. And of your troubles make a jest.
—Old Man Toad.

Troubles are a part of life. Anyway it would seem so. And few there are if any who do not have troubles. Some people manage to overcome the fact while others tell the world about their hard luck. It is not those who make their troubles instead of allowing their troubles to make them who are the most from life.

All winter long Old Mr. Toad had had no troubles and for a very good reason—he had been asleep. Late in the fall he had chosen a place in Farmer Brown's garden and there he dug his way down in the earth and buried himself. He had buried himself so thoroughly without even an air hole to the surface. He had done it by the simple method of digging with his hind feet and then, with them still backing in while the loose earth fell in on him and covered him. He didn't need a hole for air, because he would have no use for air as we know it, but he intended to stop living just far as everything that breathes air is concerned, and that would have so little to do that it would seem not to be alive.

So with his head bent down and his feet tucked under him, Old Mr. Toad had become almost as much a part of the ground as a stone and as stiff as if he were indeed frozen. He had been sound asleep, but that is not the least, for he had known nothing about it. He had been in a deep, deep strange sleep that is called hibernation. But for this strange sleep a lot of little things and some bigger ones would pile up during the winter, for there would be no one to clear them away and they would starve to death. Among these was Spring.

So Old Mr. Toad slept the winter away in Farmer Brown's garden and no one knew he was there, and no one knew how deep he had dug himself in. Sweet Mistress Spring had arrived. Winsome Miss Robin and Mr. Bluebird were inspecting the houses Farmer Brown's Boy had put up for them in the Old Orchard. Down at the Smiling Pool Jolly Mr. Redwing the Blackbird, adding his voice to the chorus of returning birds, was the little master of Old Mr. Toad's tiny cousins the Hylas. Still Mr. Toad slept. He knew not that winter was over and Mistress Spring had arrived, for she had not yet awakened him.

Then came Farmer Brown's Boy to the garden with his spade and hoe and rake. There were certain seeds to be planted early, and he must have the ground ready for them. He whistled as he turned over the earth with his spade. Now and then he stopped to pick up an angle worm and put it out to one side where Welcome Little Robin Redbreast could get them he turned up a stone and picked up and killed a beetle.

It was what he took to be one of those stones that he had turned up that he took up his hand to toss aside. It didn't feel exactly like a stone, but this drew his attention to it. Under the earth thinking to find something to eat Mr. Toad. His face lighted in pleased surprise.

"Well, well, well!" he exclaimed. "So this is where you spent the winter! And you are still asleep. I'll put you out in the sun and see what that will do to you."

So Farmer Brown's boy gently picked up Old Mr. Toad in a sunny spot and went on with his work. The sun was warm. After a while Old Mr. Toad opened his eyes. Then he moved another leg a little. He was beginning to wake up. It was a long time to waken, for you know he had been asleep a long time, even after he began to feebly kick he knew nothing about it.

Now Pip the Terrier had followed Farmer Brown's Boy to the garden. He had sniffed at Old Mr. Toad when Farmer Brown's Boy had put him down in that sunny spot but found nothing to interest him. Later he came back that way as Old Mr. Toad was awakening. He saw those moving legs and at once he was there, making a pounce. At moments he stood over Old Mr. Toad gravely watching him. Then he reached out a paw and gave Old Mr. Toad a poke. Old Mr. Toad rolled over on his back and his legs waved foolishly. Pip was delighted. Here was something to play with. He gave Old Mr. Toad another poke just as the latter was beginning to be enough awake to know that he was alive. Then he turned and poked him again. Old Mr. Toad began to get more awake every minute, but it was a rude awakening.

"The next story: "Old Mr. Toad Heeds the Call."

DECIDE AGAINST APPEAL.

Kitchener, July 12.—City council has decided to turn down a recommendation of the board of health advising that the corporation appeal from the decisions of Magistrate Weir quashing the amendment of the milk regulations of milk sold in the city. Only three members of the council favored the appeal. It was maintained that the issue was not of sufficient importance to warrant the appeal.

FRANCE AND BRITAIN AGREE TO COOPERATE

Lausanne's First Result Seen in Franco-British Agreement as Announced

Will Cooperate in Laying Out Ground for World Parley

MUTUAL CONCERN

European Issues Also Concerned in New Agreement

London, July 13—Announcement was made simultaneously in London and Paris today that the British and French governments had agreed to co-operate in efforts to solve European political problems which parallel the financial and economic matters considered at the Lausanne Conference.

Simultaneous Statements

Premier Herriot made the announcement in Paris and Rt. Hon. Sir John Simon, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, announced today in the House of Commons.

First of all, he said, they will co-operate in laying out the ground for a world economic conference.

"Then and then only," he said, will keep each other mutually informed of any questions coming to their notice which may affect Europe as a whole.

"It is to be hoped," said Sir John, "that other governments will join us in adopting this method."

Work Together

"The French and British governments intend to work together with the other delegations at Geneva to find a solution to the disarmament question which will be beneficial and just to all powers concerned.

"They will co-operate with each other and will hinterrupt governments in careful, practical preparation for a world economic conference.

Avoid Difficulty

The two governments also agreed, he said that pending negotiation of a commercial treaty between them, both will avoid any action which would discriminate against the interests of the other.

It was officially announced that the new accord has nothing whatever to do, either implicitly or explicitly with the debts owed to the United States.

Aside from the provision for a commercial treaty, the accord is in no sense special as Premier Herriot and Sir John said he already had given copies of the agreements to representatives of Germany, Italy and Belgium and invited those governments to associate themselves with his declaration.

Non-Catholic Missionary Made to Run Over Hot Rocks

MEXICO CITY, July 13.—A dispatch to the newspaper El Presco from Jalapa, Vera Cruz, today said Rafael Sarralangue, a non-Catholic missionary sent out by Governor Adalberto Tejeda, returned from Tenochtitlan, state of Oaxaca, with tales of rough treatment at the hands of the natives.

They seized him and a companion when their mission was learned, he said, cut the soles off their shoes and made them run over sharp rocks.

Curran's Offer Still Stands After This One

Many Seen by Joe, The Trapper But He Was Unharmed

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 13 (C. P.)—Many a wolf story has been related from the versatile pen of J. W. Curran, author of the Sault Daily Star and famous authority on Algoma wolves, but—with Algoma's Wolf Week scheduled for July 25 to 30—Mr. Curran excells himself this one:—

"Joe staggered into the camp and collapsed," says Mr. Curran, referring to one of his wolves. Monstrous wolves, Man-eaters, I suppose, Joe brandy and cigarettes and when he recovered, he continued:

Trap Line

"I was walking my trap line a few miles off the railroad when I heard the blood cry of a she-wolf far behind me. You know that cry, men. Hideous and merciless. High and ranging and clear. There was an echo from the front. Then another and another. That made four. Soon there were 20 wolves. Then 30, then 40 and 50. Soon there were hundreds. I climbed a tree just in the nick of time. The wolves went by in a pack. There were so close I could feel their hot breath scorching my neck. As I climbed the tree they leaped for me. Their jaws snapped together with a snapping noise and saliva drooled from their fangs."

Big Ones Go Away

The dogs were gone and one—some of the bigger ones went away. Well, sir, they hadn't been gone half an hour when they came back with a pair of buck beavers in tow. The beavers took one look at that tree and started to gnaw it down. They were biting and chewing while the wolves stood about wailing for the trees to fall. Mercifully, the curtain is drawn here. And of course Mr. Curran's offer of $100 to any person who can prove he or she has been attacked by an Algoma wolf still stands.

Rhyming Sir Thos. White Makes Reply

Toronto, July 13—"I am so sorry to have greatly upset the mind Professor Chapman of Sir Thomas White today, in speaking of Prof. F. J. MacDonald's criticism of the poem "Canada," which Sir Thomas wrote last year.

The criticism was levied by Prof. MacDonald, who is associate professor of English at the University of Toronto, when he addressed a group of Queen's Alumnae last night. In addition to criticizing the poem, Prof. MacDonald had said "financiers ought to stick to their knitting."

"If I had been able to write a poem," said Sir Thomas, "such as would have commagdged in its formal literary correctness the approval of the learned professor, it would not have got past the news editor and would have found its way into the editorial wastepaper basket. All I said was that "We Debt" was published and copied extentively, not only in Canada but in the United States and Great Britain."

The poem, he said, was written as propaganda, to counteract propaganda in advocacy of cancellation of war debts.

15,000,000 Acres Behind This Year in Russia's Grain Program

Moscow, U.S.S.R., July 13—(AP)—Soviet Russia has wound up the spring sowing campaign with nearly 1,000,000 acres less than last year under cultivation.

The total is nearly 15,000,000 acres below the programme.

Official figures place the total area sown on July 1-5 241,-000,000 acres as compared with 242,580,000 last year and 235,-875,000 planned. Failure to come up to expectations was principally largely to the poor showing of the Ukraine where a keen drought last year caused great loss of crops and seed.

LIEUT. BURKE SCORES A 69 AT 2 RANGES

At Two Thirds Mark in First Stage, Canadian Well up

NOT DETERMINED

Winner of Bronze Medal in first Stage Not Decided

Bisley Camp, Eng., July 13 (CP)—Lieut. Desmond Burke, of Ottawa, had a fine total of 69 out of a possible 75 at the two-thirds mark in the first stage of the great King's Prize, Empire rifle shooting classic today. The first stage today reduced the field of 994 to 300 for Friday's second stage.

It will not be possible until late tonight to determine the winner of the bronze medal for leadership of the first stage, or to define the 90th marksman, who will go into Friday's second stage. The thousand marksmen fired in seven relays at the three distance of today's shoots of 200, 500 and 600 yards.

Matchett Second

After Burke among the Canadians with two distances completed, came Lieut. H. C. Matchett, of Hamilton, with a 33 and 33 for 66, and two with 67's—Corporal Herring of Ottawa and Cadet J. W. Madden of Sherbrooke, Que.

Sergeant Arthur Wilson, the only man who ever won the King's Prize three times, has been greatly ill for several months and was permitted to proceed to the firing points by motorcar. He scored 34 at 200 yards and a possible 35 at 500 to equal Burke's score.

Sergeant Pullon's father, aged 73, who won the Queen's Prize 40 years ago, was back amding the crack Empire marksmen today. He scored 33 and 30 for a two-thirds total of 63.

Bisley Camp, England, July 13—(Canadian Press Cable) — Lieut. Desmond Burke of Ottawa came within a point of the highest score recorded in today's first stage of the classic King's prize as he scored a total of 102 out of a possible 105.

Two English marksmen had scores of 103, and will shoot off for the bronze medal for leadership in the first stage of the shoot, Blue Ribband of Empire Marksmanship.

Lead Team

Burke led the Canadian Bisley team with a display of the first marksmanship that captured the King's prize for him in 1924. He had a possible 35 in the distance at 200 yards; 34 at 500 yards and 33 at 600 yards.

Today's first stage reduced an entry of 994 marksmen from the Empire all over the empire to 300 competitors for Friday's second stage. The final is on Saturday.

PAVEMENTS OF GERMAN CITIES STAINED RED

Prussian Minister Deplores Political Murders

VIOLENCE GROWS

Berlin, July 13—Repeated clashes between political elements brought from Karl Severing, Prussian Minister of the Interior, today an appeal to all people to abandon the "fatal" methods using the political campaign which would lead to the destruction of the editorial wastepaper basket.

All was the War Debt" was published and copied extentively, not only in Canada but in the United States and Great Britain.

"Clashes are increasing in amazing numbers," he said, "instead of intelligent argument there are shootings, knifings and pistol shots after day the blood of German citizens stains the pavements, and in the streets of our cities and villages political murder is rampant."

Action Not Talk is Wanted at Ottawa Says Rothermere

Newspaper Peer Finds Canada Counts Upon Adoption of Scheme Creating Vast Trade Increase in Empire

CALGARY, Alta., July 13— (By the Canadian Press)—Under the caption of "Ottawa must dare and do! Action, not talk, is what the Empire wants from Ottawa," (Lord Rothermere in an article cabled early today to the London Daily Mail emphasizes the trust the Canadian people are placing in the outcome of the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa. The British newspaper Peer, who is nearing the end of a lengthy tour of the Dominion, released his article just before he cabled it to his own paper in London.

"My extensive tour of Canada," he says, "enables me to say with confidence this, that people of this great Dominion are counting upon the rapid adoption at Ottawa of a concrete and categorical scheme which will lead to an immense increase of trade within the Empire.

"There is little doubt the same sensation awaits me in New Zealand and South Africa. If this expectation is fulfilled, the present visits will have been a blessing to disguise."

POLICE MAKE QUICK ARREST AFTER THEFT

Man Pleads Guilty and at Present is on Parole

SIX MONTHS TERM

Exactly one hour from the time he stole $5.00 from Clifford Ketchenson of the 7th Concession of Thurlow, John Naylor was arrested by Provincial Constables Stringer and Campbell at Frankford on Tuesday afternoon.

Naylor, who was employed by Mr. Ketcheson as a labourer, stole the money while his employer was working in the hay field and start-ed toward Frankford to enjoy the festivities on "the glorious twelfth". Upon his return home, Mr. Ketcheson missed Naylor and the money. He immediately notified the provincial police, who apprehended Naylor on the streets of Frankford, some twenty minutes after his arrival in town.

Naylor appeared in the local police court this forenoon and pleaded guilty, Crown Attorney R. C. Denison pointed out to the court that Naylor had broken parole from the Ontario Reformatory. Naylor had previously been convicted at Hamilton of the theft of a motor car and sentenced to one year and a half in the reformatory, after being paroled Naylor was sentenced Wednesday morning for his theft to six months in jail to run than six month and not more than two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph by Magistrate Mikel. Before starting his sentence he will have to serve the remaining time left of his parole.

FIRE TRUCK STRIKES CAR AMIDSHIPS

LOAD OF HAY FALLS ON MAN

Chas. Cryan is Almost Suffocated Under Hay

PORT STANLEY, Ont., July 13.—(By the Canadian Press)—Charles Cryan, a resident of Port Stanley, had a narrow escape from death by suffocation yesterday, when a load of hay upon which he was sitting fell to the ground. In company with Dean Turville, Cryan was riding on top of the load when the hay suddenly shifted. Turville managed to jump to safety but Cryan was pinned underneath. Farmers of the district worked fractically to save Cryan and succeeded when they dug him from under the stack. He is confined to his home suffering from shock and minor injuries.

Plane Sinks In Irish Sea Crew is Safe

London, July 13—A Royal Air Force seaplane sank in the Irish Channel off Larne, Antrim, today and six members of the crew were saved by the steamer Nicon.

The two other members of the crew landed safely later on the Antrim coast, having paddled ashore in a rubber boat.

MARKET GETS OUT OF RUTS

Continued Firmness of Bonds and Better Tone on Commodities

New York, July 13—The stock market showed signs of working out of its narrow trading range of the past fortnight on the upside today.

The list was hesitant in the early dealings, but gradually began to make headway in the middle of the day, with trading quickening a little on the buying side. Further firmness of bonds, and a better tone in the commodity markets, tended to help the movement in shares.

Some of the sugar and packing shares continued to forge ahead, but Utilities came forward to provide the leadership. The one 10 two appeared in such issues as Public service of N.J., Consolidated Gas, Peoples Gas, Pacific Lighting, American Telephone, Continental Tobacco B U. S. Steel Preferred, Corn Products, American Can, Continental Can, Corn Products, Case, United Pacific, Woolworth, Santa Fe, Railway Exprpss, Mc-Keasport, Proctor and Gamble, National Biscuit, and others in the early stag. Auburn dropped more than 20 points from last week.

The early slump in Auburn was in the form of a second quarter statement showing a profit of $151,867, the stock went under 50, but a sharp rally and a reaction had probably been inevitable, after an 80 point rise in the week preceding.

Toronto, July 13—Consolidated Smelters acted erratically this morning. The opening price was only slightly above the close on Toronto Stock Exchange last night but before the end of the second hour the stock was only 50 bid and 60 asked sales were made at 8 points of the high of yesterday. 50 great Lakes Paper was also on the decline, however, and the price firmed again; first to 53 and later to 54, where it was 2 points under Tuesday's close.

Page-Hersey continued its advance to 45 up a couple of points. Banks were strong with Commerce up 2 and Bank of Montreal up 3. C.P.R., Brazilian Traction, Power, Gyzsum, Ford of Canada and International gains. Nickel, Dominion Steel, Canadas were off 1-2 point or less.

Montreal, July 13—Quite, mixed movements marked forenoon action on the Montreal Stock Exchange Mining Exchange market today. List was featured by considerable scattering of minor losses and gains as midday.

Hollinger still gave ground under light but persistent selling, price standing off 10 from last night at 85 when taken. Dake Silver, Dome and McIntyre were holding Aun Wright Hargreaves and Teck Hughes were slightly higher at 21-23 and 4.36 respectively.

BOYS' LABOR TO GET CANDIES IS LOST

Candy is usually the downfall of any small boy. Especially if the youngsters can "swipe" it. On Tuesday afternoon some local kiddies were rather disappointed when they crawled in the locked garage, where a company of circus performers broke open a case, which had, previously contained candy and found, that the boxes were empty. Constable Isaard was called to investigate the near theft and although the kiddies had disappeared the officer found that they had crawled in the building underneath the door. The hole in which the boys crawled through was later barred.

BELIEVE 3 DROWNED ONE BODY FOUND

MIDLAND, Ont., July 13—Balked in their efforts by rough waters on Georgian Bay, searchers last night held little hope for the safety of Gamadiel Briscoe and Harry Pearson, members of a Toronto fishing party missing since Sunday. The body of Fred Farghar, brother-in-law, to the other member of the party, was found on Canary Island.

ARRESTS MAY FOLLOW DAMAGE

Constable Taylor of the local police force was called to 62 North Front St. where it was alleged that parties were destroying property. Upon his arrival the officer found that a number of cans of glue had been broken in the house and one window completely smashed from its sill. The fiends had been broken down and people were using the grounds as a "thoroughfare." The local police are investigating the case of the destruction of the property and arrests may follow.

DOGGIE'S ARE NOW BEHAVING SELVES

Doggies are behaving themselves in the city. Not for days has Mr. Thomas Thorn, official keeper of the pound, received any complaints from irate gardeners that the animal's were digging up the garden plot and not for a longer period than that has he seen any legless dogs running the streets. No new admittances to the pound has occurred for some time.

PULLED OUT TO STRIKE OTHER CAR

Pulling out to pass a car, Fred Aziz of Trenton driving a light delivery truck collided with a car driven by William Todd also of Trenton on highway No. 2 near the old Hydro power house just south of Frankford about 11 p.m. Tuesday night. Aziz was driving northward, while Todd was returning home driving in a southerly direction. Aziz did not notice the approaching Todd car and when he pulled out to pass a car in front of him suddenly the accident happened. Both cars were damaged considerably and it is alleged by the police that Aziz did not have his driver's permit with him. Provincial Patrol Officer Prik investigated the case and a prosecution will likely follow.

ANOTHER SHIPMENT SOON EXPECTED

A temporary respite, pending shipment of another consignment of corn borer parasites, which will arrive in this city on Thursday from Arlington, Mass., to be in turn distributed in the corn field of the district is being enjoyed by officials of the local parasite laboratory, who have been engaged since the opening of the season in the work. This year has seen the greatest concentration of effort yet aimed at the destruction of the borer pest, which has threatened ruin to corn in this territory.

FREE-FOR-ALL AT CRICKET FIELD

Ball players of the south end of the city slug their ball seriously in the city league games being played on the old cricket field at Ft. Paul St.-wet. What gave, promising Tuesday evening of being a closely contested game between Centennial Life team and the Wharf Street Debating Club nine, turned into a grand melee at the end of the fifth inning, after flying fists and a general jumble of bodies at the home plate. Two of the night. Aziz was diving northward, battlers required medical aid at the termination of the free-for-all while others who joined in the festivities received, the usual abrasions and cuts, which followed the fracas. Hostilities were precipitated at first heat over a discussion as to whether or not a runner had been tagged, although bad blood had been apparent all through the game.

PROPOSAL MAY BE MADE SOON

Offer on Basis of Bond Exchange May be Made by Gov't.

Toronto, July 13.—Within the next twenty-four hours, it is hinted, the Ontario Government's proposal to bondholders of the Ontario Power Service Corporation, with a view to the province taking over the Ahlfield Canyon development, will be made known to all of the bondholders and to the public.

Hon. George S. Henry, while utterly non-committal as to details when interviewed last night, stated that his representatives, Strachan Johnston, K.C., and E. R. C. Clarkson, has been in close contact, with some of the representative bondholders; he added: "We may be able to reach the point where an offer can be made to all of the bondholders." He was also asked that if they agree to our proposal, they may turn in their bonds in exchange for other bonds. This detail will be advertised, if we do reach the point where I think we will be close to."

Rumor ran rampant last night from Cochrans south, east and west, and throughout Toronto, that an arrangement had been consummated and the bondholders had actually been communicated. This rumor obviously, was baseless, since before a deal can be consummated an offer must be made to all of the bondholders.

Such an offer might be recommended by a committee of the leading bondholders. Some hitherto of that was seen in the Queen's Park hints of an offer being close at hand. Reports to the effect that the detailed bonds might be substituted by bonds, were promptly and thoroughly ridiculed in interested quarters.

Sacrifice May Be Asked.

Instead, it is freely reported as likely that the exchange, if it takes place, will be on the basis that the present bondholders making some considerable sacrifice in view of the nature of the investment, on the basis of the bonds which the province will use to the extent, perhaps, being no interest for a period of two or three years, after which the interest would be paid if earned, and if unearned would accumulate as a charge upon earnings.

It is reported that the exchange offered may be Hydro 4½ per cent. bonds, and not Province of Ontario bonds, thus avoiding an addition to the provincial debt.

Premier Henry leaves with members of his cabinet and officials tonight for Moosonee, on James Bay, the new northern terminus of the T. and N.O. Railway, there to participate in driving the last spikes of the railroad at Ontario's new ocean port. It is known that Mr. Henry has been approached for a definite date is for offering to bond-holders of the Canyon development, to be settled at before he leaves for the North.

Ontario Power Service Corporation bonds were quoted at the close of the market yesterday at 57 bid and 61 asked, without no change from the previous close.

Empire Trade Ship

Gally decorated out of them to stern the liner sailed away on her mission of Empire trade. Both in passengers and appointments she reflects the far-flung commonwealth. Besides the four delegations to Ottawa the Empress carried the British, Belgian and Hungarian Olympic teams for the Los Angeles Games.

One figure among the passengers carried the mind back to another Ottawa conference. It was that of Lady Foster, still in mourning for her distinguished husband, the late Sir George Foster, who was a Canadian delegate at the Ottawa conference of 1894.

No Fuss in Send-off

There was little fuss or flurry about the sailing of the liner from or Southampton, only unbounded enthusiasm. A great cheer went up from the crowded decks as the Australian, London, echoed on the arrival of the three sections of the train at Southampton by another great crowd.

Stanley Baldwin and his wife had been the guests to lunch on the station and again he submitted smilingly to the cameras present and to still photographers. Other members of the British delegation arrived separately—Neville Chamberlain still apparently not recovered from his illness yet unladedly dining with the Indian representatives.

Farewell

Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary, and Lord Sankey, the Lord High Chancellor, were among the large number of distinguished persons bidding farewell to the delegation.

The Empress carrying the delegation from Great Britain, South Africa, Australia, Northern Ireland, Rhodesia. The Australian and New Zealand delegates are bearing Vancouver from the Pacific and the Irish Free State delegation is on board the Laurentic due at Quebec July in 1857.

All Livestock, Produce From Southern Ireland To be Taxed 20 Per Cent

This is in Lieu of Annuities Not Paid by Ireland

MARKET INCREASE

Crippling of Free State Industry Seen as Benefit Here

London, July 13—Duties hitting heavily the most important agricultural products of Ireland went into effect Tuesday when Great Britain's retaliatory tariff became operative. A 20 per cent ad valorem duty was imposed on live animals for food, butter, eggs, cream, bacon, poultry, game and all other kind of meat from the Free State.

Prices in the commodities taxed have already dropped alarmingly for the Free State producer. At the Dublin market there reported that Canadian livestock trade in particular was already experiencing keen benefit from the setback for the Irish producers.

Ontario Benefits-Seen

Canada, and Ontario in particular, will benefit greatly by the 20 per cent. ad valorem import tax which the British government announced yesterday it had placed on all imports from the United States. Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, declared yesterday when asked what effect the import duties would have on exports of agricultural products to the Dominion.

"The steer and bacon trade in Canada will benefit to a considerable extent," said Col. Kennedy. "Our bacon trade in the Irish Free State will be hurt a bit but this will be more compensated for by a general increased trade with Great Britain at higher prices than heretofore obtained. We are continuing our extensive shipments of steers and bacon to England we will ship direct to England. The 20 per cent duty on these products from the Irish Free State will have no effect on the tremendously increased market. The demand will go up and this means higher prices."

Trade Anticipated

"The placing of this duty on imports from Southern Ireland has been anticipated for some time," said Col. Kennedy. "In addition to raising about 100,000 steers annually, Ontario is used as a fattening ground for Western cattle and big shipments are ready to go overseas.

Shipping space is at a premium and will likely prove inadequate in view of the latest developments.

The minister of agriculture was of the opinion the Irish Free State will compromise with Great Britain to prevent disaster from overtaking its primary export trade.

"It is certain that Ireland will be crippled if the 20 per cent. import duty stays in effect," said Col. Kennedy. "While it means considerable benefit to Canada, I would not like to see the chief industry of the Free State ruined."

The import duty covers poultry, butter, eggs, cream and game, but Ontario will not benefit to any appreciable extent from this as the products is exported overseas, the minister explained.

South Hastings, Northumberland And Prince Edward County Join In Monster "Walk" at Frankford

Lodge L.O.B.A. Belleville and Shannonville L.O.L. No. 242 Won Prizes for Best Dressed and Biggest Lodge on Parade

MANY NOTABLE SPEAKERS

Over 3,000 Attend Celebration, Parade Having 1,000 Marchers, Gaily Bedecked in Bright Colorings with Fife and Drum Bands Ever Conspicuous

Under a brilliant sun, which at times was hid under low hanging clouds but which moderated the weather sufficiently to make marching a pleasure, interspersed with a few drops of rain always expected on the glorious twelfth, the village of Frankford, nestled alongside the beautiful Trent River and Canal, was hosts to invading thousands on Tuesday as marchers wearing the familiar orange and True Blue gathered from every district of South Hastings, Prince Edward County and Northumberland County to pay respect to William of Orange and to renew their faith in the victory, which he attained many years ago, when he put to rout King James and Assured for the world, civil and religious liberty for all. It was the biggest "walk" held in this section for years, the crowd being estimated anywhere from five to seven thousand people. It seemed that the limits of the village would not hold all that wished to enter, but the welcome sign, so freely shown, made the people at ease and all will again want to visit that prosperous village, should another "walk" be held in that village in the near future.

Frankford Lodge Hosts.

Frankford L.O.L. No. 340 and L.O.B.A. were the hosts on the occasion and a goodly sum was realized by which they will be able to further their work in their own particular community. Some time ago the lodge room of the Frankford Lodge was destroyed by fire but showing the courage that has always been dominant in this Orange Order, the members went to their task and from the ashes has arisen a new lodge room, in keeping with the principles and the money realized on Tuesday will assist in lightening the indebtedness that was incurred. Over 1,000 Orangemen and Orange ladies marched behind the beating of the drums and the familiar tunes of the fife, while older ones and happy children watched with awe, the spectacle that was afforded. The parade lined up on the High School grounds, marshalled by the County Director, Erik Hubbell of Frankford, assisted by Fred Palmer, and was led through the principal streets of the village by the Frankford Citizens' Band, a distance of some two miles. There were twenty-six lodges represented in the "walk" and every marcher completed the two miles and which took thirty minutes to pass a given point. After the parade was dismissed, the speakers congregated at a special platform erected and there told of the Order and the part it could play in bringing back a semblance of the good times once enjoyed by this fair Dominion. W. H. Thompson, County Master, was the chairman of the gathering, while thousands stood about, keenly interested in the message given by the various speakers.

It was also a day for visiting. Friends from all points of the three counties which sent representatives to the "walk", met about the grounds and enjoyed a day spiritually and social shade of the many trees scattered about the picturesque park, while others walked by the side of the beautiful river and wondered at the beauty of the pretty little village. The children, free from school day worries, amused themselves by toying ice cream and other favors and causing no little trouble, as entertainment for them was also provided and where a child was bored happier than he came after he had seen the many of the prizes offered for the sports events held in connection with the celebration. A soft ball tournament, which took place included teams from Centenary, Woolerton, Roseland and Frankford and was won by Frankford after a close game with Frankford, who defeated Centenary.

Many Speakers.

Seated upon the platform were the members of parliament for this district, W. C. Mikel, M.P., for North Hastings, W. H. Ireland, M. P. P. for East Hastings and James F. Hill, M.P.P. for East Hastings, Major Belford, ex-M.P.P. for Northumberland, Earl Rex, Warden of Northumberland and Durham and R. E. Mitchell, Warden of Hastings County, besides representatives from the clergy in Frankford and district and those high in the Orange Order. George A. Arbott, Reeve of the Village of Frankford, W. H. Thompson, Master of Frankford L.O.L., and J. Emmerson, County Master, each welcomed the guests and hoped of their visit would be pleasant and profitable. Owing to the number of speakers on the program, their time was limited to five minutes with W. E. Timmon, M.P., giving the principal address.

Oldest Member Present.

Rev. A. L. Geen, Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of British North America, one of the oldest members of the order present on the occasion roused his listeners as he told of the event which was being celebrated and discountenanced the idea that Orangemen met to stir up strife and ill feeling but rather that they met to give thanks for relief from bondage. He stated that Christ had ordered remembrance of the deliverance of the chosen people from the Egyptians and so were Orangemen ordered to commemorate an event. He admonished his listeners to be true to the Union Jack, whose steadying influence was needed in these trying times and that Empire over which it flies was giving peace to a torn world. W. H. Ireland, M.P.P., gave way to other speakers but welcomed all on behalf of the constituency. He stated there never was a time when one should be more proud of the British Empire than at the present time, when she is leading the whole world out of chaos. George A. Reid, past County Master, paid tribute to the occasion of the day and to Frankford Lodge for their wonderful accomodation and the thoughtfulness and also the ladies for the bountiful dinner provided. Mr. Reid stated it was a source of satisfaction to know he had been elected in Frankford to his high office and told his listeners that faith was the only thing needed in this present crisis of the world. "I have attended forty-five Orange celebrations although not an Orangeman for that length of time and faith is the greatest need of all. We must trust Divine Guidance and the British Empire need not care for the rest of the world if its people will only have faith. Because we have been looking for something for nothing has prompted us to put the Empire in its present position and it is time to call a halt and make some personal sacrifice for the Empire of which we form so glorious a part. Should faith meet inside this order, such as socialism, communism, and other Red doctrines are taking place with in our peoples. Our forefathers let us through to our present position and through faith and the same faith must again manifest itself," said the speaker in conclusion.

Rev. Alfred Boulter, of Wooler, United Church, told of the three great days in July. The first day being to recognize the privilege gained by the Dominion, the fourth to recognize the privilege of our neighbors to the south and the twelfth to recognize the civil and religious liberty, that is ours. "Certain responsibilities are resting upon us", said the speaker and "as Protestants we will not shirk that responsibility". True we have high taxation but we are living heavily and make personal sacrifices, which will bring about economic stability. We must think nationally and internationally, study the problems not for ourselves but in relationship to the whole world and must then fit into the situation and do our part as Orangemen and citizens of a great empire.

Obey Our Obligation

James F. Hill M.P.P., thanked all for the privilege of being allowed to address the large gathering, which was above the average, although there were three celebrations being held in the county. Mr. Hill explained that the Orange Order was celebrating the 242nd anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne today and the 162nd anniversary of Orangeism in Canada and although some would say, the order and what it stands for is not going out. "We are not here to abuse anyone" said Mr. Hill, "but to protect Protestantism from communism, and any red element, that may be in the country and depression, such as we are having only furthers their cause, but we won't let them succeed. Our obligation in the Orange order must be more religiously adopted in the future and the same principles that guided William of Orange, the forces of the British Empire in the Great War will guide this country through its present time of stress. It always seemed, that whenever the forces of the Allies were hard pressed in the Great War, the hand of Providence guided them through, it has been as such in this depression. Probably we have been living too fast and in 1932 the Divine Hand called a halt and He brought us to our knees and probably we have not been fully censured as yet but if we have faith He will bring us through. The Orange Order stands for civil and religious liberty and we must do our part to further that end."

No Depression

Major Belford ex-M.P.P., after thanking and congratulating the Frankford Lodge for their kindness stated, that three things were noticeable about the parade the first thing that the Union Jack was at the head and was displayed throughout the procession. "To that flag the Orange Order has sworn allegiance and Orangeism stands for the Union Jack," said the speaker and today dry rot is eating at the vitals of Canada, it is not she alone that is turning to communism but the intellectuals, who are in the social reconstruction. The Catholic Church is not running to communism as many would believe, because they as a people are loyal to their flag. The speaker dealt with Southern Ireland who seceded De Valera. Major Belford stated, that the Irish leader was not an Irishman at all, his chief object in life seems to be to disrupt the feeling that the British Empire is trying to make Ireland the camping ground for Britain's enemies, he has sends delegates to the Economic Conference. The speaker reviewed the trouble, that is brewing in East Asia, India and other parts and again scored Mahatma Ghandi for his procedure in India. Bringing the trouble closer to home, he stated, that it would be easy to start trouble between Japan and the United States and British Columbia in that case would be drawn into the conflict as the Japanese would try to make that district the base for their operation against the United States and all true Orangeism should do something instead of listening to a lot of pandering.

"There is one thing stopping our progress and that is the motor car. You talk about depression but there is no signs of it here today, with the rows up rows of motor cars, that I can see parked," said Major Belford. "Go and ask your forefathers what starvation meant and what depression was like. We have three meals a day and every home around me appears to be well dressed and that could not be said for some in the old days. We have got to get down to brass tacks and if there is any depression you made it yourselves. We spent money like drunken sailors and now it is the morning after. As the stamina was displayed by our forefathers a hundred years ago, it will again have to be shown if this so-called depression is to be lifted.

W. E. Timmon, M.P., thanked the committee for the invitation to speak at the celebration, stating that his remarks would be brief. "Today we are celebrating the anniversary of an event that for eight onto 250 years has meant more to the world than any words can explain," said the speaker. Nations are made up of historical events and no people more rich in historical events, than the people of the British Empire. The event which we are celebrating today helped to make the British Empire what it has been—one to be proud of, whose greatness we boasted of—whose citizenship we prized and of whom Orangemen of Canada declared for a free country through its present time of stress. It always seemed, that whenever the forces of the Allies were hard pressed in the Great War, the hand of Providence guided them through, it has been as such in this depression. Probably we have been living too fast and in 1932 the Divine Hand called a halt and He brought us to our knees and probably we have not been fully censured as yet but if we have faith He will bring us through. We have been able to think and to act internationally in all cases but the powers that have risen to great heights, can they think and act internationally? asked the speaker.

He referred to United States and France and he declared that only through the British Empire could the world hope to escape from its trouble. The speaker dealt with the Lausanne Conference on debts and reparations and also the coming Economic Conference at Ottawa to which all eyes are turned. "The world must not fail," said the speaker and they must gather with a broad outlook for the British Empire as a whole and not as an individual.

W. C. Mikel, K.C., spoke briefly and explained why the Orange Order came into existence and the rights they had to maintain if they were to continue as an order. He admonished all true Orangemen to be present on every twelfth of July to manifest their principles and to show the world what they stood for. Rev. A. E. Dagnet of Frankford told of the misfortune sustained by the Orange Lodge and thanked all for their help by their presence at the celebration. He stated that all Orangemen must have three qualifications, an over mastering faith ability to educate itself and a disciplined will. He protested against the liquor traffic of Ontario and stated that the Orange Order should not be the dupe of any political party. Rev. J. Paul Anglican Minister of Stirling also spoke briefly while Max Hall, Reeve of Northumberland county and Reeve Robert E. Mitchell, Warden of Hastings County, extended a hearty welcome of their constituents and congratulations to the Frankford Lodge for their splendid day.

Lydia L.O.B.A. of this city won prize for the best ladies' lodge in the parade and Shannonville L.O.L. 242 for lodge having the largest number on parade. The speaking commenced shortly after three o'clock and the crowd soon dispersed to their respective homes.

Three softball games were the feature of the Orange celebration sports committee's activities on Tuesday, Frankford playing Centenary in the morning and in the afternoon. Centenary had the game cinched by the score of nine to nothing at the end of the fourth. In the third half of the fifth the Frankford team staged a rally and the Centenary was unable to stop them until they had scored seven runs. In their half of the sixth Centenary was unable to score while Frankford added another three in their total, thus, the latter team were able to add one lose tally to their score in the seventh. Leaving the final score 10 to 10.

The line up:

Centenary—Interiors, cf; Erwin, ss; Johnson, 3rd; Thrasher, 1st; Morgan, c; Cornwall, 2nd; Thompson, lf; Sergeant, rf; Ridley, p; Short, p.

Frankford—Sinds, p; Finnegan, ss; Chard, lf; Lockwood, 3rd; Connelly, 1st; Vermeer, c; Reid, cf; McLeod, c; Sullivan, 1st.

The winners of the three games were to play the Wooler Leafs for the Orange championship, but owing to the five innings played easily outclassed the Frankford nine by a score of 5 to 1.

Wooler lineup:

Fraser, ss; Putnam, rf; Reid, lf; Redcliffe, ss; Whitney, 1st; Fox, c; Stacey, 2nd; Scott, cf; Fox, p.

Score by innings:

Centenary ..... 022 500 1—10
Frankford ..... 000 032 x—11

Second game:

Other speakers which foldowed the chairman were: Rev. J. R. Trympe of Cooper; Rev. J. Rollins, Sr. of Cooper; James A. Nickle of Madoc, and Geo. Ketcheson of Madoc, Mr. S. B. Do Anglers Use Lime Filled Bottles Or Explosives to Secure Quota?

Dozens of dead fish floating on top of the waters of the Bay of Quinte opposite this city, near the north shore of Prince Edward County, give rise to a belief held by local fishermen that the poisoning of local waters is being carried out under cover of darkness, as the early morning hours. This theory is further strengthened by the fact that many of the larger fish, which have been picked up out of the water, where they have been floating belly up, on top, have been literally exploded by some sort of underwater upheaval or concussion. In some instances gaping holes in the sides of the fish permit eelrails to escape; others which have been dissected by one of a party, which observed the dead specimens in the water early Tuesday morning, show them to be internally ruptured, and with bursted swim bladders. Large pike, pickerel and pike are among the finny casualties to be reported. Indignation stirs the ranks of local fishermen who are up in arms against such wholesale destruction. Word which was relayed to Mr. T. J. Lyons, game and fisheries inspector for this district, has added to the number who seek the perpetrators of the underwater bombing. A stiff penalty awaits those who are caught in the act, and the culprits have been filled bottles or other explosives in the water.

JOSEPH DALY IS INJURED

Internal Rupture Said to Have Been Sustained

Sever internal injuries from which he will probably not recover suffered by Mr. Joseph Daly of Read-ington township, are who was engaged in road building operations in the township of Sidney, when overcome near Lonsdale on Tuesday morning. Details of the accident received indicate that the injured man while in charge of a team of horses, drawing a road scraper from Lonsdale, was crushed. The team left the road and threw him off the vehicle. Lower parts of the body were caught and internal ruptures were sustained and the pelvis broken. The injured man was at once rushed to the hospital in Belleville where medical aid was summoned. At last reports from Dr. G. H. Stobie, who is in attendance, Mr. Daly is progressing as favorably as circumstances will permit.

MOTOR CYCLE HOBO PRESENT

Depends on Charity of Dealers and Motorists to Cover Ground

A new type of highway bum has made his appearance in this district. Not spectacular and the railway ties, or hang with stiffening fingers to the grab irons of freight cars, as many of his fellow wanderers do, the new type is satisfied with nothing less than a dilapidated but none the less speedy motorcycle, which takes him over the road from town to town on borrowed gas faster than any freight train on the rails. Gasoline and rubber, the two major items of upkeep for the travellers, who generally journey in pairs on their shaky mount, are filched by the roadside on the trip or successfully garnered by the knights errants on their way. During the past few days one local dealer in cycles has had no less than four dusty riders in his showlegging' old tires, or enough gas and oil to get to the next town. Questioned as to what they did, when we ran out on the road and left them with very dusty tanks, the youths admitted that "soft-hearted" American people generally supplied them with enough to continue. Standard equipment, however includes a short length of rubber hose and a small tin pail. These are used to siphon gas from other machines when the owner is not looking. Meals as well as cycle necessities are also begged while on the "trip".

MacDONALD PRAISED

The earnestness and zeal of Premier MacDonald in bringing to a head the sentiments of European countries in regard to reparations was justly praised by Sir John Simon in the British House on Tuesday. MacDonald, the people may be assured, was not puffed up by the tributes so warmly given for men who serve as MacDonald serves do not puff up with vanity. Therein is the reward of conscientious endeavor, such a man runs no danger of losing his head in public praise.

Such a nature as MacDonald's has humility as a basis, not a humility that will debase itself but that type which is pleased to escape the adulation of mankind, because the deed is all.

Everyone will admit MacDonald as one of the greatest figures in the modern age, because joined to natural gifts is utmost honesty, for he utterly lacks the desire to gain a momentary advantage for self or for the party he formerly led or leads. Some will go so far as to point him out as the greatest man in the world today. Not by armed battalions, not by repression and the iron hand, not by revolution, but by honesty of purpose and fair-dealing he works his way. 'An honest man's the noblest work of God' and even in politics with him who is first of all a patriot and then if necessary a party man the same holds true. MacDonald stands on an unchallenged pinnacle, so unlike any other public figure among the nations today.

Britain must be proud of him, this peace-making, self-sacrificing St. George, champion of the twentieth century, who is beating down the dragon of suspicion and selfishness, so closely associated with war and diplomacy. Such a man could not have been produced by any country that did not love freedom and peace.

THE LONG WALK

People who go to their work in motor-cars may take a hint from the autobiography of the Sir David Harris, who was born in England eighty years ago telling of his early days when he walked to school and giving his opinions against riding to school. He says:—

"I was first sent to school when I was seven years of age. My parents' house was three and a half miles distant, so for five days a week I had to walk seven miles in all kinds of weather. I was the proud possessor of a small umbrella which leaked, and frequently I arrived at school or at my house soaked to the skin, but fortunately, I felt no ill-effects at the time, nor did I ever allow the rain to dampen my ardour, so that I am in my seventy-ninth year and look back on this early period of my life, I feel that my exercise of seven miles a day, exposed to all sorts of weather, laid the foundation of a strong and robust constitution which served me in good stead when having to face the privations and hardships that fell to my lot in after-life. Today many parents desire schools erected near their homes so that their offspring ('dear thing') should not accumb to fatigue in their daily walks. In my early days, long before education was made compulsory in England, parents were compelled to look around for schools with moderate fees, the distance from home being merely a secondary consideration. Youngsters then appeared more robust than they are today when trains and trams put them down at the very doors of government schools."

The motor-car and the street car make life easy and muscles flabby if their use is abused.

THE BOYNE

The celebration of the Battle of the Boyne on Tuesday called thousands together in many scores of centres in Ontario for the purpose of meeting together in happy gatherings because the Twelfth of July in the one gala day of the year for many people and for the discussion of the principles of the Orange order. The political importance of the victory of 1690 was dwelt upon by the speakers who noted that it meant the setting upon the throne of a ruler who was directly responsible to the people.

Those great gatherings also served as a forum from which the problems of the present age could be discussed.

Fortunately the days of religious bitterness was absent as it ought to be. Orangemen are taught by Orange principles to be broad in their relation to those of all men and those who are not willing to grant equal privileges to all cannot make good Orangemen, according to the tenets of the society.

KOLAPORE CUP

Canadian marksmen have recovered from Britain the Kolapore Cup and are possessors for the fourteenth time of the treasured trophy of marksmanship. Canadian sharpshooters undoubtedly possess a clear eye and a steady hand and are guided by sound judgment.

The Bank of International Settlement in the reference of the directors to the part which the gold standard plays in stabilization will do much towards bringing about the return to gold standard as the most effective means of creating a steady flow of trade.

SIDELIGHTS—GRAVE and GAY

Supervised by The Lamplighter

OUR MANY SELVES

By Aline Michaels

There are so many selves
In you and me;
Some selves, are crushed and bound
Some joyous, free.

There is the self that seeks,
In all things, good,
And the dark, stranger self
Of evil mood.

Some selves are filled with love
For all mankind,
While some to others' needs
Are deaf and blind.

These selves that rend, and tear
Our hearts in two,
Why must they, warring, dwell
In me, in you?

Is it to find us kin
In every land,
That we may read all souls,
And understand?

BUY SOME SHOELACES, MISTER? Thus accosted by a street salesman, the voice intrigued the prospective customer. Time 10 a.m., place Front street, (in the very Odd Mcintyre manner). "Who are you and where do you come from?" "Old soldier, sir, saw service in the Boxer fuss over in China way back when—South Africa, air, marine contingent, with the guns at the relief of Ladysmith, near the Canadians at the finish. Also served in the Great War in the Dover Patrol, Mystery Ships, and all that, you know." An interesting introduction, you'll admit, and a sales talk preamble which could not be ignored, especially when backed up by discharge papers and old time Imperial Service books duly stamped and signed by the officers in charge. Taking a good look at the shoestring merchant we saw a stalwart and stocky Englishman, burned with the suns of many lands, fitting perfectly the expression "brown as a berry," and a voice soft and pleasing, punctuated with many sirs, respectful like, as befitted a veteran of the Royal Navy and all that. Then we had a confab as long as the busy street traffic would permit and he gave me a sketchy outline of his life under and over the equator, up and down the world under three sovereigns, coming to anchor at last in Toronto and now forced to peddle shoestrings to keep in rations and a hammock in the fo'castle. Here was as interesting a character as one would want to meet in a day's march and the shilling it cost was well worth the price of admission, even if it should so happen that he was only an entertainer with some other guy's discharge papers, which I very much doubt.

A FARMER OUT IN SASKATCHEWAN some years ago said he never knew what depression meant. Still he had a wonderful career, according to a reader of this column who sends the following more or less accurate particulars of the life and death of one Ezra Leaf, who soon after he was ushered into this vale of tears and began to toddle about, fell into a horse trough and was practically drowned, and when his folks got him straightened out he found a can of concentrated lye and it was a month before they had him fixed up. When he was six he fell out of an apple tree and broke both arms and a leg. A dog chewed him almost to extinction when he was on a watermelon-stealing expedition, and he fell down in a field of wheat stubble and lost the sight of one eye.

He spent all the money he could get for two years for gifts for a farmer girl he wanted to marry, and she shook him and married a neighbor. A mule kicked him and broke six ribs. On the day when he could get up nine cents, five wrigley, all his hogs died of cholera. He had a big crop of wheat in a year when wheat was no good, and a hailstorm ruined it twelve hours after his crop insurance had lapsed. He scraped together five hundred dollars to make a payment on his land, put it in a bank, and the bank busted. A cyclone wrecked his house and killed all his family except his mother-in-law, who escaped in the cellar. And so progressed along his troublous pathway he bought four gold bricks and took some counterfeit money in payment for two good horses. Then he died, and as they were taking him to the graveyard the hearse team ran away and scattered poor Ezra along the highway, and when they came to put a headstone over what they were able to garner of him, the gravestone artist got the data of his birth wrong, and spelled his name EASY LIFE.

30 YEARS AGO

July 13, 1902

The big steamer Corician, belonging to the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Company ran into the Bay Bridge Sunday morning. One complete span, the one just north of the swing, was pushed right off the piers upon which it rested and now reposes on the bottom of the bay just east of the bridge. Everything possible is being done for the accommodation of the travelling public, who will not be seriously discommoded. Dr. Sprague informs us that arrangements have been made to place a ferry on the scene at once as soon as landing places can be provided, and exceedingly fortunate that no teams were standing on the wrecked span when the accident happened as they sometimes do. The consequences in such a case might have been appalling. Mr. Hall, who was driving on the bridge on his way to Wellington to hold services at the latter place, was struck and had he been two minutes earlier he would have been on the span when the load struck it. The engine was pushed over slowly and the boat passed through the opening and docked at the Bathurn wharf as usual. The only damage she sustained, as far as could be seen, was a yard or so of paint scraped off her starboard bow. The landing her cargo she proceeded down the bay.

NORWAY TO MAKE SEIZURE

Forced on Country as a Measure of Defense

OSLO, Norway, July 13. — The Governments decided Tuesday to occupy a large area of eastern Greenland two miles wide between latitudes 60 degrees, 30 minutes and 75 degrees, 40 minutes.

Copenhagen, Denmark, July 12.—(AP)—Norway's decision to occupy another stretch of eastern Greenland, which she has claimed for years by Denmark, drew criticism from Premier Theodore Stauning, who asserted it was an encroachment similar to the Norwegian occupation in 1931 of that section of Greenland lying between latitudes 75 degrees, 30 minutes, and 71 degrees, 30 minutes.

Some sections of the public feel strongly about the matter and official servative journals to-morrow will express their disapproval.

Critics accused the premier of "unfriendliness" toward Norway as Greenland is concerned, and they expressed the expectation that all he would do would be to make another protest to the World Court at The Hague.

A heated controversy was provoked in 1931 when Norway completed a great section of the east coast of Greenland. Angmagssilik was the only permanent settlement in the portion taken over at that time.

The Norse Government never recognized Danish claims to the entire Greenland area for a long time it has been used as a hunting and fishing place by Norwegian and Danish hunts there.

The World Court at The Hague has not yet rendered a decision in the case growing out of the 1921 seizure.

SECRET PACT GIVEN DENIAL

Premier MacDonald Says U. S. Has Not Given Any Pledge

London, July 13 (C. P. Cable) — Debate was resumed in the British House of Commons yesterday regarding the actual documents were signed between Great Britain, France and Italy, embodying the "gentlemen's agreement" which provides the Lausanne reparations settlement should become effective until the United States revises the war debts agreements. At the same time Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, who attended the Lausanne Conference to fix settlement of the reparations annuities, declared:

Looks to United States

"I am confident there is no nation in the world more ready to help than is our neighbor about the troubles with which we are surrounded, I say that, although American opinion was given no pledge so far as I know, or indicated in any way that she is bound by the agreement."

While the debate went on in the house, with Prime Minister MacDonald in a slightly mood, the British government denied reports that the Lausanne agreement embodied any provisions which amounted to a secret Anglo-American understanding that the United States would cut or cancel war debts.

Sir John Simon, who intervened in the debate last night to announce the signing of Paris Convention, publishing all the Lausanne documents, including this agreement.

CANADIAN FLAG URGED

Hon. W. H. Price Points Need of Distinctive Emblem

Toronto, July 13 (CP)—Need exists of a distinctive Canadian flag, designed "around the Union Jack," said Hon. W. H. Price, Ontario Attorney General, in his address to the Orange lodges of Toronto and district here yesterday.

The Union Jack was Canada's flag said Col. Price, until a desire on the part of Canadians for something more distinctly Canadian had resulted in the introduction of the red ensign, over the design of which there was so much confusion that there were almost as many types of ensign as there were manufacturers.

"There seems to be no regulation making compulsory what you have flown," said Col. Price. "This is tremendously unfortunate as it creates uncertainty in the public mind and does not give to the school children and the average citizen a specific idea of our flag. It would seem sooner or later we would have to evolve around the Union Jack something that would be specific that every boy, and girl will recognize as our emblem."

Col. Price condemned the flying of foreign flags in the Dominion.

SAYS MONARCH HAS NO RIGHT

De Valera Makes Bold Statement in Dail Debate

Dublin, July 13 (C.P. Cable)—Republican government supporters and packed galleries cheered lustily as President Eamonn De Valera declared "Britain has no natural right to rule here."

The Dail was tumultuously debating the bill for abolition of the oath of allegiance to the King. By a vote of 71 to 61 it rejected the agreement inserted by the Senate which took all the effect out of the bill.

An opposition member asked why the government did not do the "decent thing" and ask the Irish people to sever their connection with the British Commonwealth.

Take up Challenge

"I hope to see the day when we may do the "decent thing" President De Valera countered amid loud cheers. "We Irishman," he continued, "can take up a challenge with the present position because the British government has never unequivocally declared it would take hostile action if the people of the Free State did to sever their connection.

"Let's get that declaration from the British government and we will take up the challenge. Britain has no right to take hostile action, because we are exercising our natural right," he declared.

ROUGH DRAFT READY ST. LAWRENCE TREATY

BALTIMORE, Md., July 13.—The Baltimore Sun says the first rough draft of a treaty between Canada and the United States for development of the St. Lawrence River, to provide a waterway from Duluth to the Sea, has been committed and approved by President Hoover. The draft, according to the paper, followed five days of negotiation conducted over the protests of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York.

The work was finished yesterday after long-distance telephone calls the paper said go Ottawa, and after Conference between President Hoover, Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, James G. Rogers, Assistant Secretary, and Norman Robertson, Canadian expert of the State Department.

The despatch said the total cost of the waterway is to be between $500,000,000 and $900,000,000.

AMONG THOSE PRESENT

The versatility of youth knows no bounds. Just when there is a wail about adults and children breaking measles quarantine, an eight year old lad recovering from the disease slipped out a window of his home and it is reported to have attended a matinee along with hundreds of other children. Of course he was missed, and when he returned punishment is said to have been administered via the well known slipper route. The lad is a great movie fan. Just how many he "saws" the measles to will always remain a mystery.—Goderich Star.

Women's Interest In The Home

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

DUMBNESS AND BEAUTY

Ideas do a turn about for one reason at all that anybody can figure out. When grandma was a little girl the beautiful woman was regarded with suspicion. She lured gentlemen away from their sainted wives and their tender babes or so the wives believed. She was, in fact, a slicker, and you can't be a slicker without brains. There you are!

With steadying satisfaction a mother would declare "I am glad little Betty is homely. She will be a good woman."

Now we have that tiresome "beautiful but dumb" expression. It doesn't mean anything. It isn't quite style, manner, chic. Which, as substitutes for beauty, are telling and compelling qualities.

"Beautiful but dumb" applies to the pretty little girl who hasn't a thought above the level of lipsticks and coiffures. She isn't beautiful because beauty includes a certain radiance of mind. She's only pretty. Like the girl on the magazine cover who looks like thousands of other girls, all cut from the same pattern. Like a string of paper dolls, tinted with water color.

Prettiness has no enthralling qualities. It attracts, but it hasn't anything to offer that makes for good companionship. That's where beauty wins out, because beauty includes spirit, character, sparkle—innumerable surprises—forces building up its own structure. It accepts wrinkles! It is ever young. It is human, sympathetic, understanding. Prettiness goes flop after the age of thirty. It is without substance.

Concentrating on external loveliness, and being unaware of the charm of nice manners, amiability, tolerance and friendliness, does not get a woman far. A nagging wife is hateful whether she is nature's masterpiece or a caricature. A snob is a snob no matter what she looks like. There's many a woman with the face of an angel, who has the soul of a rattlesnake. And there are plain women who are adored and beloved for qualities of charm and fascination that rate higher than carnation cheeks, rosebud lips and ambrosial breath.

When girls realize that it is what they are as well as how they look that counts, beautifying will make the world happier.

Self-Consciousness

When you are away from your home are you constantly conscious of an effort to conduct yourself pleasingly to the general public?

You consider how you shall use your hands, your facial expression comes in for much thought as well as how you walk and talk.

You are constantly restraining your natural impulses are you posing.

You know your jaws are too set, your diaphragm too irritable, your face generally too hard to be pleasing.

At times, among strangers, you permit your antagonistic spirit to crop out and feel much chagrined should an acquaintance appear suddenly to witness your portrayal of your character.

When you come to think of it squarely, you seem to be acting all the time, when you are in public.

It mortifies you that you should unconsciously lapse from the pose.

You wish you were big and important enough to act in an insolent or arrogant manner and get away with it.

If you think that anyone can be free and independent to act and do as he or she desires without consideration for other people you are mistaken.

If it is meanness that you wish you were free to show, no wonder that you are self-conscious.

OUTHIT BUT STILL WIN

National Maids Increase Lead in Loop Defeating Maple Leafs

Although the lowly Maple Leafs out-hit the league leading National Maids 13 to 11 at the Armouries last evening they failed to capitalize on the hitting ability and dropped another league game by the score of 9 to 3.

Lois Carter was on the hill-top for the losers, the game being the second, she has pitched consecutive nights. The loss could in no way be laid at her door as she hurled excellent ball but was given wretched support by her team mates. H. Meers provided the fielding sensations for the Leafs, while Nellie McMichael, H. Rushlow and H. McMichael were the Leafs' big hitters.

For the league leading Maids Jean Stewart and Molly Gray shared the pitching duties and were afforded excellent support by their infielders, Eleanor Thrasher, Mac Kelleher, June Scott and Elsie Cousins all hit for the circuit during the nine innings hit; Eleanor Thrasher at short for the Maids provided the fielding plays, which were outstanding throughout.

Tonight, the famous Kingston Frontenacs meet the local CIACO girls at the Armouries Lawn.

The line-ups:—

Maple Leafs—D. Hill, Rushlow, N. McMichael, Meers, H. McMichael; P. Hills, Cousins. Asseltine, Carter. National Maids—Kelleher, Scott, Rampy, Tuttle, Melchoir, Thrasher, Rowbotham, Marino, Stewart and Gray.

Score by innings:

	R.	H.	E.
Maple Leafs	0 0 0 0 0 3 0 6—3	12	7
Nat. Maids	4 2 0 0 0 3 1 0 *—9	11	3

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Kexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attacks waste from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. It soon loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Kexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. 24 for 25c, today at

WILL DIVE FOR CANADA AT LOS ANGELAS

If ever a young Canadian deserved a place on Canada's Olympic team, Alfie Phillips, Canadian High and Low Board Diving champion does. He has ever since his appearance at the last Olympic Games in Amsterdam where he displayed wonderful form for Canada, been training religiously in an effort to win points for his country. He has also given unstintingly of his time and energy in putting on exhibitions of diving to raise funds for the swim contingent. Alfie is conceded by Tommy Walker, coach of Canada's Olympic team, to have a real chance to land in the first three places in the Olympic diving competition. With the experience gained at Amsterdam and four years of consistent training he certainly should come through with flying colours. Here's luck to you, Alfie. May your swan dives be more swan like, and your jack-knifes sharper and your double back flips more back flipping.

Knocks and Boosts

For the benefit of our golf readers we publish this little ditty:

He wooed a cute little lassie
With a generous display of brassie,
But she said with a creer:
"You're not learned to spoon
So you're failed to mashie my mashie."

One week ago we related a fish story which happened to one of Belleville's ex-hockey players. The ex-puck chaser has been having a lot of luck lately on his fishing expeditions, but not much luck has been had. Last week he took a party of friends fishing in Mazoda Bay and they lost their entire catch. Again last Sunday he took the same party, to prove to them that there were fish in this neck of the woods down the bay.

They had a large basket of minnows, and good fishermen take along a bucket of minnows, in the boat and in all due course it was thought advisable to change the water on the bait. This feat was suggested about half way between here and Massanaga Point. All good fishermen will tell you that a person cannot change the water on minnows and talk to passengers in the bow of the boat. Well our ex-hockey player-fisherman tried to accomplish this feat could be accomplished —result, they lost the bait, and again a perfectly good fishing party was spoiled. Moral —"Go fishing and enjoy the rest Sunday."

Due to the fact that there is no senior game scheduled in Belleville on Wednesday afternoon, the Nationals playing in Kingston, the junior teams are holding away at 1.3 p.m. the second place Wellington club battle the Bloom Boys at the local grounds while at 5 p.m. the Crystalaire entertain the league leading R.A.A.A. kids at the Alemite Grounds.

Bill Dickey of the Yankees, has been fined $1,000 for landing a right swing on the jaw of Carl Reynolds of the Senators. Perhaps this explains why Sharkey and Schmeling were so gentle when they were in the ring together in the new Garden Bowl. They were calm and collected. Dickey was irate and fined.

An unexpected threat has loomed on the horizon of the Lennox County Baseball League in the form of the Yarker Baseball Club. Previous to the league opening the Napanee Gibbards were almost assured of the league pennant due to the fact that they had a couple of new additions to their last year's champion roster. The Gibbard Athletics are leading their loop at present but they are being pressed hard by the ever-approaching Yarker nine. Manager Ernie Gibbard and Coach Walt Gower are working overtime to try and pull the Athletics through to their third successive league pennant.

If the Belleville Nationals can take the Kingston Panics into camp on Wednesday afternoon they will be perched well in second place of the C.O.B.L. and not one game behind the new leading Panics. Manager Gerald "Sonny Palster, who has had a fall week's rest, and Carl Casey to toss in against the Kingston team. Casey has yet to face the Limestone team and his uncanny control may upset the hitting of the champions. Kingston is noted for its "bad ball" hitters and may not fare the well against the deliveries of the rangy right hander. Tommy Palster, on the other hand, seems to have returned to form and may get the call from Manager Sonny. Coal fusion of the present Nationals is the return to hitting form of Will Crevincy. Creivney has not been hitting the ball lately but he broke the jinx in Peterboro last Saturday and will be feared by all pitchers the remainder of the season. Chuck Barrage got his first hit of the season last Saturday and this single alone should ensure the speedy Hubb third sacker that he can hit senior pitching.

The local Victoria play a league game in Picton on Wednesday afternoon and will be strengthened by the return of Archie Campbell, the star southpaw of last year's Belleville intermediates, and his battery mate, Adams. The Vics expect to reinre to their previous form with the addition of this new battery. In Canada Comes nine are playing an exhibition game in Napanee the same afternoon against the Napanee Gibbards. This game should about show the relative strength of the two neighboring intermediate loops.

Today's baseball question: — Who holds the major league record for the fewest number of strikeouts' asks M. H.

Joe Sewell holds the record. In 1925 with Cleveland he struck out but four times in 155 games, and in 1929, in 154 games he was a strikeout victim but four times.

Here and There

Premier Gordon G. Harrington, of New Brunswick, has returned from his trip to Europe by the Empress of Britain.

Growth of all crops in western Canada is very vigorous and well advanced for the time of year, according to the latest weekly survey made by the Canadian Pacific Railway Agricultural Department, and crop prospects in the West as a whole are encouraging.

Members of the British party touring the Dominion under the auspices of the British Columbian Government, arrived at Montreal aboard the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain, and like steamship, stopped over at Banff and will spend between June 15 and July 3 in British Columbia.

Delta Gamma, one of the most important Greek Letter organizations on the continent, is holding its annual convention this year at the Empress Hotel, Victoria, June 27-July 1. Stopping over at Banff on June 26, the delegates will carry delegates to the Pacific Coast from Chicago, while Canadian delegates from Montreal, Toronto and Edmonton will join the main group at Banff.

If early promises is fulfilled, the Annapolis Valley should this year produce an even larger yield of apples than in 1931 when the total crop was close to a million and three-quarters barrels, in the opinion of leading fruit men of Kentville, N.S. The weather this year lasted over ten days and attracted visitors by the thousand from Eastern Canada and the United States.

Miss Constance Ragan, Middleburg, Va., established a record for women anglers on the Tobique River, New Brunswick, recently, when she took a 27½ lb. Atlantic silver salmon, the largest ever caught with a fly by a woman on that river. The record salmon was taken in those waters by a male angler weighed 36¼ lbs.

Canadian Pacific standard time is standard time for the world over. Prior to 1883, every town and city had its own local time, based on the sun, but in that year the suggestion of Sir Sandford Fleming, chief engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railway, that the world should be divided into 24 sections, one for each hour of the day, and that time within each of these areas should be standard, was adopted all over Canada and the United States. In 1884 the plan was also adopted in Europe after a conference held at Washington.

TIE CREATED IN BALL LOOP

Continentals Tie Group With 16-7 Win Over Shamrocks

TRENTON, July 13.—(Special)—The Continentals are now tied up with the Shamrocks for first place in the league after taking a fall out of them here last night, by a score of 16 to 7. The game was one that the large gathering of fans least expected, of a large score. Each team played ball like a bunch of novices.:It will be no credit to Trenton if either of these teams win the league and go away to play ball of the kind they showed here last night. In the first inning, the Shamrocks had two homers and another in the second. While Smith in the fourth made a homer out of an infield fly, due to the overthrows. Gourlie was on the mound for the Shamrocks and the Continentals seemed to have become accustomed to his style of pitching as they were able to hit him at will. The Shamrocks have been pinning their hopes of the championship on Coughlin but now realize, that they will have to dig up another pitcher before July 13. Converse was in the box for the insurance men and while not up to his usual standard of pitching was able to handle the hardhitting Shamrocks quite easily after the first innings. Alexander was perhaps the star of both teams playing right field for the Shamrocks, getting a hit at every trip to bat and his fielding was perfect.

Lineups:

Shamrocks—Gourlie, Cohan ss; McCue 2nd; Scarlett 3rd; Smith 1st; Chase lf; Hutton cf; Alexander rf; Miller c; Coughlin p.

Continentals — Chambers 2nd; Larry Jordan 1st; Rutlan rf; Cook cf; Wemyss 2nd; Kidd lf; Johnson lf; Culverson p.

Umpires—Pete Lewis Bases, Purdy.

Scores by innings:

Shamrocks 6 0 0 1 0 0 0—Total— 7
Continentals 3 3 3 2 3 0 1—Total—16

A large crowd decided to end the twelfth in this manner and the efforts of Mr. Waldron. Mr. W. Taylor, Mr. Dewsnip, Mr. Ryan, C. O. Farrar, C. MANAGER OF MINE IS HELD

Sensational Turn in Strike at Coal Mine

Sydney, N.S., July 13—A strike at the mine of the Bras D'Or Company at Little Bras D'Or ended in sensational turn yesterday, when Royal Canadian mounted Police arrested Angus Murphy, the mine manager! George Long, an employee and Patrick Fitzpatrick. Peter Laffin, on charges of causing an explosion that night, that destroyed the mine, and caused destruction to property.

Police investigations after July 4 a shock distance from the powder magazine of the mine.

Police officials say they had evidence to the effect that a blast had been set off deliberately in an effort to discredit the miners, who have been on strike for two weeks.

The trio were taken to Sydney Mines. Murphy was released on bonds of $7,500. Laffin and Long are still in jail.

The next step in the preliminary hearing of the charges has been set for July 20.

The first shipment of canned salmon from Vancouver to the United Kingdom was made in 1886.

"EMBERS OF LOVE"

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

COPYRIGHT 1932 BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

"Lily Lou—bent her head, kissed the baby's soft little back. Nahlman was right of course. It was her chance.... Why should he get cured for....Albert would go for the doctor....

Suzanne Coin put a wrap over her shoulders.

The three women went down the thickly carpeted stairs. Lily Lou heard the hurrying, fluttering excitery, as the door closed behind them.

CHAPTER FORTY-FOUR

Lily Lou stood, shivering slightly, while they sewed her into the pale blue and brown peasant dress in which she was to sing Micaela. It had been made for a larger woman. It was the wrong color. She twitched and jerked at it, in a futile effort to make it hang better.

"It does very well." Madame Nahlman said, after a hasty glance, turning to the mirror to see to powdering her eyelashes.

"But the wig is impossible. I can't wear it. They haven't a decent one."

Then go without—one. Wear a shawl over your head. The French don't expect grand costuming that way. It's the singing that matters, my dear."

"It's the singing that matters." Lily Lou repeated the words in the wings, turning it over in her mind, moving every minute or two, to get out of somebody's way. There was a confusion, excitement, sharp argument, then a sudden hush. The curtain had gone up.

Before she knew it, it was time for her to go on. No time to be frightened. When the moment for her entrance approached she felt no fear, no emotion of any kind. She sang, and knew that she sang well. The tenor was delighted. "A pleasure to sing with such a Micaela," he said gallantly.

And then—for the first time—she was frightened. She had gotten through the first act. But how in the world could she get through the rest? Her knees were jelly. Her throat felt dry, though it were stuffed with cotton wool.

She wished she did not have to wait until the third act to go on.

It was such a long time to wait. She should have come to the theater later. That would have given her time to wait until the doctor got there to see the baby.

His little head was hot.....but Nan always said that children's fevers didn't amount to anything.....the bubonic was well, but he wasn't as strong as Nan's children.

Measles can be very serious..... A child can be left with terrible things. If Jo Jo should be taken care of.....

If she weren't made up she could get a taxi and slip home and still be back in time....No she couldn't ....not at this hour.... Well, the baby was all right.... She'd just have to wait.

Nahlman, glowing with excitement, exuding triumph from every pore, stopped to embrace her just before the third act.

"Dear Lily, you are so beautiful! A little thin for the tradition but lovely! If you are half as well as in the first act they will adore you....you are nervous?"

"Not—not really—just—"

"Of course, it's a big go. I depend on you Lily, for my great performance. I could not sing with that speaking Delpre. Remember —I depend on you—for my big scene—my triumph—"

Lily Lou was alone again. She stood, waiting for her cue. She wondered—how didn't know whether she was or not. She wanted the audience—as a whole—to be convinced of success....Her hands were frightfully cold, and her face was hot .....maybe she was spoiling the mestize, look! She stifled a nervous giggle.

Mustn't think of the baby....To do that stop her now! Suppose that she got out on the stage and opened her mouth, and no sound came out..... It was too bad about Delpre's voice.... Her own ankle hurt so much, that time she sprained it in Woodlake and Ken held her in his arms and kissed her.....

Nahlman was finishing "Voyons que....Almost time for her cue! "Pendia que rien ne m'epouvante....

It would soon be over now.... Then she could rush home to the baby.....

To think of that now! The baby was all right. The one thing that was all over.....Of course the baby wasn't all over, but he was just small now, but he was too small to need her very much. If he was to need her, it would be in the future. So the way to help him was to succeed. Sally Lou would be proud. Put herself in the great artist class, above criticism. Above the envy of other women....they got above gossip..... To be thinking of that, now..... here, in Nice.

The stage was emptying, the chorus men in their costumes of gypsy smugglers, were coming back into the wings, and it was time for her....time for her.

The footlights leapt at her. She came towards them, down the board walks, behind the papier-mache rocks.

There was a ripple of applause. It was because she was pretty, of course. They'd as likely hiss her in a minute, her throat felt so wooly.

"I try not to cry—that I tremble. But I know that I'm a coward, always bold I appear."

Ah! how can I ever call up my courage.

While horror and dread chill my sad heart with fear?"

How appropriate the words were .....the thought, singing in the French that seemed almost as natural as English now.....

Did her voice sound small? She couldn't be sure. But it was true, oh, thank Heaven, true.....

"Succeed—Nahlman whispered thrillingly. In her ear—"Perfect! Now, more pleading, less fearful in the next scene with Jose and me—"

Lily Lou was afire with excitement.

This was her big chance.... she was making the most of it. She was impatient to get back on the stage, for her scene with Nahlman and the French tenor.....

His breath smelled of onions.... He always ate green onions in the wings, waiting his cues, was what a funny habit! How funny that she wasn't frightened now, that her voice went right on, sure and perfect as if she were just turning on a phonograph record....

Applause ....Nahlman had taken her hand, the tenor had her other hand. They were bringing her out before the curtain....she felt her self bowing, smiling....listening to the thunder of applause, and for her, of course, for Nahlman, but still she was part of it.....

The tenor kissed her. Nahlman kissed her. The conductor, a bright, pleasant man with books, mouthpiece, kissed her.

"But she is perfect! Like a bird! She must be starred!" he cried, kissing her again.

"Didn't I tell you?" Nahlman shouted. "Didn't I say she was my pupil? But no, you would have that tin whistle, Delpre. Next time you will listen to me—eh?"

"Next time! Forever!"

"Madame ....all your plait—" It was the wardrobe mistress. With Suzanne Coin. Something about Nahlman's gorgeous silver and lace costume for the last act.....

"A rip in the armhole! And you stand like dummies looking at me. And my great last act to be ruined by an armhole! Suzanne—clear my room—Lily, why do you let me shout! My strength—"

Lily Lou, still starry-eyed, still a little tremulous, turned to follow the three excited women. Her little part was over. She must help Nahlman with the costume.

"Farewell, my angel, until the close of the performance," the conductor whispered.

And he kissed her again.

Without resentment Lily Lou wiped off Blumenthal's kiss. She had no illusions about him. She knew that she was marked to succeed Mademoiselle Dejere, but only as Micaela in Carmen, but in Blumenthal plans. Oh well! What's a kiss? Nahlman would help her. She knew how to handle these men. The armhole in the silver and lace dress was fixed. Nahlman was happy. Smiling with love for triumphant Lily Lou. Exuberant over her own overwhelming success.

"Now, you're started there'll be no stopping you," she called on to Lily Lou, while Suzanne painstakingly arranged the folds of the skirt, crawling on her knees on the none too clean floor.

"You'll never make the dramatic success that I do. You're not the type. But you can't expect that. Only one artist in a generation does that. But with your looks and your perfect coloration if you take care of it...you will win. Gilda should be here now. The Paris Opera will be open all summer for the tourists. I, with my influence can arrange for your Gilda, Madame Nahlman, role also. I may stay to do some big roles myself, maybe Aida. You have never heard my Aida. You will hear them stand and shout them. But Italy is the place to get appreciated is .....Dresden. The blessed Dresden Opera....one of my greatest triumphs—in the Ring—my Elsa.... Suzanne, you cow! You'll pull out my skirt.....Now..... do I look my best, Lily? You say big last night. My hair....Suzanne, look at the skirt....Now leave me..... I am Carmen again—"

Oh, the thrill. To stand in the wings, to feel herself part of this great production. To be part of the festivities afterward. To be permitted to other artists, critics, musicians, to have the important Blumenthal, take that he was, singling her praises, trying to get her alone. It would soon be over now.....Then she could rush home to the baby.....

To think of that now! The baby was all right. The one thing that was all over.....Of course the baby wasn't all over, but he was just small now, but he was too small to need her very much. Lily said. But she did not want to go. It would have been fun to have had supper with Nahlman, and the others....Even with Blumenthal ....She wondered what the papers would say of her..... the conservative French critics....Perhaps they wouldn't "say anything.....Micaela was such a small part, still she had made the most of it.....she knew that.

Sneaking home in the taxi she began to sing softly not the part she had just sung.....Oh! men's aria....She'd sing that, too, some day.....though it was a bit low for her.....

Gilda that was all right to start with. She'd do it at the opera here, and be acclaimed for her perfection, and something more dramatic, more appealing.... Mignon ....Butterfly ....even Marguerite, and Lucia would be better than Gilda, and as Violetta in Traviata.....

CHAPTER FORTY-FIVE

She let her fancy slip ahead.... saw herself as she used to do, in the roles she dreamed of.... ragged and lovely as Mignon, regal in crimson velvet as Thais....she'd do Thais soon, too.....

Before her dreaming eyes the lights of the Paris Grand Opera blazed....she saw the magnificent white marble staircase, the glittering crystal candelabra, heard the thud of the baton, saw the curtain going up.....

Yes, sing Vianna, too..... the opera there that she loved....Saw that sing there. The lovely, quaint place, with its magnificent approach, the winged horses, the Siegfried and Don Juan candelabra.

"ATTORNEY FOR DEFENSE" WITH EDMUND LOWE

"Attorney for the Defense", at the Capitol Theatre, presents Edmund Lowe, as a district attorney who soars on his profession when he finds he has sent an innocent man to the electric chair. No more suitable role could have been found for Lowe.

The erratic and highly dramatic life of a man, who as a public prosecutor turns persecutor in reach the Governor's chair, until the death of an innocent man turns him diagnostically away from the district attorneyship, moves in the most soiree court in the world—New York City's Criminal Court.

Lowe's superb performance is given admirable support by the portrayals of Evelyn Brent as Val Lorraine, a lady who loves only when there is money in it for her, and Constance Cummings, Lowe's secretary—faithful, adoring, efficient.

After Burton, District Attorney becomes Burton, defense attorney determined to keep accused men out of the chair as he before had sent them there, he tries to make amends by taking under his care the wife and son of an innocent man for whose death he holds himself responsible.

Val Lorraine, his former paramour, tries to encourage Burton to relent in his persecution of Dick Gallen, gangster, her present lover, through a Citizen's Committee Burton has formed to get the real criminals that infest the city. Burton laughs her away.

A sudden phone call one night from Val brings Burton to her apartment to find her murdered, and lying in a drunken stupor beside her, Dick Wallace, the boy whose innocent father Burton had sentenced to the chair when he was district attorney. Val had been working the boy to get the incriminating papers in Burton's possession. To shield Paul, Burton surrenders to the police and is brought to trial accused of the murder of Val Lorraine.

The trial of Burton, who conducts his own defense, is one of the most dramatic and unusual ever screened. And the unique turn of circumstantial events that finally gives Burton the clue to the real murderer, is an unusual and cleverly worked out plot complication.

Able players in the cast, in addition to Lowe are Miss Brent, Miss Cummings and Donald Dillaway.

TRIBUTE PAID MacDONALD

Sir John Simon Tells of Premier's Untiring Efforts

London, July 13—Sir John Simon, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, paid Commons yesterday to the late Premier in the House of tribute to the man who played by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald at the Lausanne Conference. He said: "Day and night by night, never losing touch, always bringing together people who seeming to be breaking away, always fertile in suggestion, good temper ed, constitutionally ready to listen to other men's viewpoints although suffering, as they knew sometimes, in intense pain and having the greatest difficulty in reading documents—it was through that man and that man alone that the conference was able to reach an agreement.

At The Belle

"SUNSHINE SUSIE" DELIGHTS LARGE AUDIENCES AT BELLE

Gay, witty, tuneful and utterly delightful is "Sunshine Susie", which was thoroughly enjoyed by three large audiences at the Belle Theatre, yesterday.

Produced in England, this easily is the most novel, melodious and entertaining picture which has come from overseas. As a matter of fact, it is hard to stay away from superlatives in describing "Sunshine Susie". She'll win your heart, just as she did ours.

This sparkling romantic comedy enjoyed a tremendous Occidental popularity, helped largely by the personality of its lovely blonde star, Miss Renate Muller. Its tremendous success can be realized from the applause of yesterday's audiences.

Sheer Delightful Film

"Sunshine Susie" is contagiously tuneful. It's an engaging clear cut story which fairly ripples with comedy of the most hilarious sort, due in large measure to Jack Hulbert's broad, English comedian, and melodies that everyone has been humming or whistling for some weeks.

Above all, it really merits the adjectives which has been so indiscriminately used: it is different—delightfully different.

It is a picture which grows on one. It radiates geniality. It makes one, you, wriggle in your seat and grin with sheer unashamed happiness.

It isn't so much a picture as a rollicking page from real life. Somehow, you do not seem to be looking at a picture. You're actually taking part in it. It is so uncommonly natural, so vividly alive.

See "Sunshine Susie", at its final days performances at the Belle, Tonight. You'll enjoy the picture. You'll love the star. And the combination is a sure cure for the "Blues".

A program of sunshiny variety units precede the presentation of the feature attraction, rounding out a program of superlative entertainment.

MOTORIST STUNG BY BEE SPEEDS AND IS FINED

Kingston, Ont., July 13—Remigius Schuster of Tennessee felt the sternness of Canadian courts yesterday and the cruelty of Canadian bees. Hailed into court for reckless driving, Remigius said he had been stung on the shoulder and was hastening to a drug store to get relief. He was fined $10 and costs.
